In short, does it not appear that the pendulum is at the point of swinging the other way—that new tonnage is going into service a bit faster than the kaiser can destroy tonnage?

Apparently the kaiser must raise his average, or, finally, be licked to a standstill in respect of his most ruthless and favourable offensive.

Creative Canadian Literature

Although there are no books more sought after by collectors of other nations than "Canadiana," Canadians themselves have hitherto paid little attention to their own literature. When, therefore, Lord Shaughnessy of the C.P.R., who himself is a great reader of works by Canadian authors, and has an extensive library, was recently asked to present the nucleus of a library to the Canadian Club of New York, no available list could be found which could be considered representative of what was creative and original in Canadian literature. With the help of well informed booksellers and librarians such a list was compiled and the nucleus of the Canadian library in New York has been formed. The list was confined almost exclusively to fiction and poetry as the intention was to emphasize the creative character of Canadian literary expression. Several books which otherwise would have been included, such as Jerry Snyder's "In the Wake of the Eighteen-Twelvers" and Edith Eaton's "Mrs. Spring Fragrance," could not be obtained, as they are out of print. As a guide to those who are interested in the growth of an original Canadian literature, Lord Shaughnessy's list should prove of great interest. Here it is:—

SPORTING COMMENT

Howard Baker, who played third base for New Orleans last season, is being tried out at first by Manager McGraw of the Giants.

Manager Hugh Jennings' big task is providing his Tigers with real pitching. The Detroit outfit had about everything last season except sure-fire twirling.

With $80,000 in purses offered by the Hudson River Driving Association the Poughkeepsie Grand Circuit meeting is bound to be attractive to the big line pilots.

It is said that Yale is the only university having a paid tennis coach, the Elis having had a professional tutor for several years.

The boxing game should go big in New Jersey, with thousands of fans of New York City to draw from.

The Cataraqui Golf and Country Club of Kingston will again plant several acres of ground with potatoes.

Harry Carlson, the Brockton lightweight, is suffering from blood poisoning due to a cut over the eye received in a recent bout with Gilbert Gallant.

Pitcher J. Weldon Wyckoff, who has been in and out of the big show several times, is showing some high-class twirling in practice with the Red Sox.

Daylight saving is bound to be appreciated by followers of all athletic sports. The extra hour of daylight will benefit any kind of old pastime.

Havign successfully passed the examinations, Jesse Guilford, the famous golfer, will at once be assigned to a United States aviation camp.

The Yankees and Braves will play in Greensboro, N.C., on April 10, and at Petersburg, Va., the following day. Many soldiers from Camp Lee will atttend the game in Petersburg

Penn's giant oarsman, William Turner, who rowed No. 5 in the varsity crew last spring, has received his commission as a lieutenant at Fort Niagara. Turner stands 6 feet 5 in. in his stocking feet.

Boxing experts who have recently watched Eddie McGoorty in training are of the opinion that the Oshkosh battler still has many good fights in his system.

Pitcher Babe Ruth, of the Red Sox, is showing in practice games that he is the same old fence buster. The big twirler's bat seems to be loaded with extra-base drives.

Jack Dempsey, the sensational heavyweight, was christened William Harrison Dempsey, but upon entering the boxing game he took the name of Jack, after the famous Nonpareil.

Johnny Dundee and Willie Jackson have not yet settled the question as to who is the better scrapper. The pair of New York lightweights have met three times with honours at evens.

The Little Rock team of the Southern league has a likely looking hitsmith in Outfielder Kirkman. In a recent game against Brooklyn, Kirkman made four hits in five times up.

Evidently the Canadian hockey championship is a floater. Within a week two different teams were billed as Canadian hockey champions, one at Cleveland and the other at Pittsburg.

The White Sox are trying out a pitcher named Musser. If he can live up to his name and muss up his opponents, Mr. Rowland's cheery smile will be broadened a notch or two.

Somewhat surprising to read of Jack Dillon being "hammered about the ring" and "knocked to the floor." Only a short time ago the Hoosier battler was trimming the best of them.

The Western league is to have several New managers this season. Among the new-comers are Bill Jackson at Omaha, Rudy Huswilt at Joplin, and Johnny Nee, at Topeka.

Jack Egan, manager of the Providence team last season, has succeeded Ned Egan as manager of the Milwaukee team. Ned was seriously hurt in a skating accident recently.

J. D. Flavelle Was Host To Best Rink

Messrs. B. Lowrey L. W. Cloutier, W. E. Kelcher and G A Litle (members of the Lindsay Curling Club) partook of the hospitality of the "daddy of 'em all" last night, Mr. J. D. Flavelle. The veteran curler also followed out his annual custom and generously presented the winning rink with a reading lamp, Morris chairs and a hall rack.

After partaking of seven o'clock dinner the guests, which included President Sisson, E. Gregory, Rev. McIntosh and J. K. Knowlson, enjoyed a short toast list, and afterwards adjourned to the billiard parlor.

The evening was enjoyed by all, the winning rink being particularly grateful to the popular host, who has for years demonstrated his unabated interest and enthusiasm in all matters pertaining to curling, particularly in regard to the local club.—Lindsay Warder.

LAKEFIELD CURLING CLUB DANCE

Invitations have been issued by the Lakefield Curling Club to a dance and card party to be held in the town hall on Friday, April the 12th. Mr. W. H. Morrison is secretary. The patronesses are Mrs. Marling, Mrs. Moore, Mrs. (Dr.) Smith, Mrs. Ridpath, Mrs. C. S. Tanner and Mrs. Morrison.

The Grand Opera House, Peterborough orchestra, will supply the music.

BOWLING NEWS.

The prize winners on the George street alleys last week were:

H. Yates and B. Shaw, Yates making 297 in one single game. The highest score yet bowled in one game in Peterboro.

This week four valuable prizes will be given for three high scores in ten pins and three high scores in five pins.

A BID FOR THE BIG BOUT

OGDEN Utah, April 8.—An offer of $75,000 for the Willard-Fulton fight scheduled for July 4, was made by W. H. Dunn and Otto Meek, two Ogden stockmen. The offer was wired J. C. Miller, Willard's manager.

Hieroglyphics Deciphered.

The hieroglyphic writings on Easter Island, perhaps its salient and most remarkable feature, have been executed on tablets of wood. There appear to have been two kinds of script, as in other cases of ancient writings; a sacred and a common. Quite recently a native was discovered who could decipher the latter. In the Caroline islands, Chatham Islands, and even among the Battas and Inner Sumatras, a rude approach to such writings, and consequent proof of former civilization, have been found.

WAR NEWS FROM ALL FRONTS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, April 8.—Violent artillery engagements occurred last night, especially on the left bank of the Oise River, says to-day's official report.

FORTY PASSENGERS INJURED.

(Special to The Examiner.)

NEW YORK, April 8.—About forty passengers were injured in the Empire State Express collision on the New York Central Railway west of Amsterdam this afternoon.

THE BIG FEATURE.

(Special to The Examiner.)

OTTAWA, April 8.—It is thought that the half billion war appropriation bill will be the big feature of this week's parliamentary business.

BRITISH ADVANCED

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, April 8.—British troops "advanced their line slightly" last night east of Vaire and south of Corbie, along the south bank of the Somme, Field Marshal Haig reported to-day.

POSITION IMPROVES.

(Special to The Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Every day finds the Allies in a better position to resist with definite success the German offensive, according to an official review to-day by the British military attache here. The French, British and American reserves are pouring in daily to help check the German drive.

DAYLIGHT SAVING.

(Special to The Examiner.)

OTTAWA, April 8.—The Daylight Saving Bill will be brought up in the Senate this week and is expected to be in operation next week.

Social and Personal

Mr. Fred Roy of the Roy Studio leaves Wednesday of this week on a visit to the famous "bird-man" Jack Miner, at his home in Kingsville, Ont. Incidentally Mr. Roy expects to get some "speed-photography" of the wild birds.

Miss Irene Hatcher entertained a few friends at her home, 193 Stewart Street, Friday evening, in honour of Miss Gertie Dixon, who is the guest of Miss Hatcher for a few days. The evening was spent in music, games and dancing, and lunch was served by Mrs. Hatcher. All spent a very enjoyable evening.

The Misses Wilma Johnston and Verlie Gainer of Peterborough are spending the Easter vacation in Fenelon Falls.

PETERBORO' HOCKEY PLAYERS MEET AT ENGLISH CAMP

Letters received from England by a member of the Examiner staff on Saturday from Bobby Armstrong, star of the 247th intermediate O.H.A. team of the season of 1916-17, and Freddy Graham, captain of the Peterborough juniors in the same season, tell how the two Peterborough players ran across each other at Seaford Camp. Armstrong has been over there for some time, going over with a draft from the Engineers, while the junior captain crossed recently with a draft from the Eastern Ontario Depot Battalion. The latter says Armstrong is twice as big as he was when he was in Peterborough—evidently in width. Arnie has been catching for the ball team which won the camp championships, and expects to go to France soon.

Be Careful With Electricity.

Some safety hints for the wise which are intended to guard against serious accidents and a possible loss of life, are being sent out broadcast by the electric light companies. From them may be selected the following: Do not cover an electric globe with paper or cloth. It may start a fire. Do not hang an ordinary lamp cord over a nail or metal work. Do not leave a cord connected when you are through with it. Do not touch any wire that is down on the ground, whether it is an electric, telephone or guy wire. In an emergency, remove a wire with an instrument equipped with a wooden handle, keeping the full length of the handle between yourself and the wire. —Popular Science Monthly.

GERMANS HEAVILY BOMBARD 120 MILE FRONT

THE ENEMY IS ACTIVE BETWEEN ARRAS AND ALBERT

TUESDAY MORNING BULLETINS

Heavy Bombardment on a One Hundred and Twenty Mile Front

WASHINGTON, April 9. — Official despatches from Paris state that Paris was the enemy's real objective, and the check he received upset his plans.

Heavy Bombardment.

LONDON, April 9.— Germans are heavily bombarding one hundred and twenty mile allied front, paying special attention to the sector between Arras and Albert.

MORE SPEED.

WASHINGTON, April 9. — Acting Secretary of War Crowell, in a statement said the transportation of American troops to France has been speeded up since the battle of Picardy began.

GRAIN MARKET

Cash oats made a sharp advance to-day over Saturday's prices, going up 1 3-4c, the same advance being recorded on the Winnipeg options market. Although the weather and crop prospects continue favorable, the light spot offerings, against an active export demand, still dominate the market and set at defiance the calculations of the bears. Barley, however, is weaker, declining another couple of cents.

Manitoba wheat—No. 1 Northern, $2.23½; No. 2, $2.20½; No. 3, $2.17½; No. 4, $2.10¼, including 2½-cent tax, in store, Fort William.

Manitoba Oats — No. 2, C.W. 96 1-4c; No. 3, 92 1-4c; extra No. 1 feed, 91 1-4c; No. 1 feed, 89 1-4c, in store Fort William.

American corn—No. 3 kiln dried. U.S.A. War Board prohibits importation.

Ontario Oats—No. 2 white, 93c to 94c nominal; No. 3 white, 92 to 93c.

Barley, malting, $1.68 to $1.70.

Ontario wheat—No. 2 winter, $2.22, basis in store Montreal.

Peas—No. 2, $3.60 to $3.70, according to freights outside.

Buckwheat—$1.83 to $1.85.

Rye—No. 2, $2.60.

Manitoba flour—War quality $11.10, Toronto, new bags.

Ontario flour—War quality, $10.70, Toronto-Montreal, $10.70, new bags.

Millfeed—Car lots, delivered, Montreal; shorts $40.40; bran, $35.40; feed flour, not quoted; middlings, not quoted.

Hay—Baled, track, Toronto, car lots, No. 1, $17 to $18; No. 2, $14 to $16; mixed, $13 to $16; straw, car lots, $8.50 to $9.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards: Receipts, 158 cars, with 3080 cattle, 392 calves, 1,688 hogs and 26 sheep and lambs.

The market was firm. Trade a little slow, in part as a result of the high prices at which anything like good to choice butcher cattle were held. Choice heavy were again in active demand, one full load selling at $13. Choice loads of butcher steers and heifers were very firm around $11.50 to $11.75.

Fat butcher cows steady. Canners and cutters steady.

Calves steady.

Hogs were mostly sold under contract made last week at $21, fed and watered. Packers were bidding $20 fed for Tuesday's market but there is still a large "but" as to whether that will be the price.

BOLO GETS REPRIEVE FOR A MOMENT ONLY

Claim That Famous Spy Has Revelations to Make.

PARIS, April 9.— Shortly following the action of President Poincare in refusing clemency to Bolo Pasha, convicted of treason in acting as the agent of German propaganda in France, which caused the expectation that his execution would not be long delayed, it was announced to-day that the military authorities had granted Bolo a reprieve.

Their action was based on the representation of his attorney, Albert Salles, that the convicted man had revelations to make to the authorities.

The length of the reprieve is not given in the official announcement, which in making public the fact of tthe reprieve, states that it is granted "for the moment."

The Japanese Landed In Siberia To Protect Station

United States Will Continue Its Policy of "Hands Off"—Patrol the Streets, But Disclaim Any Desire to Interfere —Italy and United States.

RESOLUTION OF PROTEST

MOSCOW, April 9.—The Japanese representative at Vologda, where allied and neutral diplomatic missions are stationed has sent communication to M. Tchitche'in, the Russian Foreign Minister, minimizing the significance of the landing at Vladivostok, according to the Isvestia. The communication said that the incident was local and that Admiral Kato acted on his own initiative and without special orders from his Government. M. Tchitchin, however, is reported to be skeptical.

Reports received here from Vladivostock indicate that the Japanese have not interfered with the life of the city, and that they only patrol the streets. Admiral Kato visited the Mayor and the President of the Zemstvo, who protested against the landing. The municipal council also passed a resolution of protest.

"HANDS OFF"

LONDON, April 9.—The landing of British marines at Vladivostock was principally to protect the railway station and the vicinity of the British Consulate, according to a Reuter despatch from Tokio.

CONTINUE 'HANDS OFF' POLICY

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Official confirmation received by the State Department that British forces had landed with the Japanese at Vladivostock, to preserve order, was followed by authoritative statement that this country would continue its "hands off" policy in the matter. Fifty Britishers were in the landing party.

W. F. Nickle, M.P., Moves To Abolish Hereditary Titles

Must End Here With the Person on Whom Distinction is Conferred—No Titles For Civil Life.

SHOWER OF TITLES

OTTAWA, April 9.—When the Commons met yesterday afternoon, Hon. Arthur Meighen, Minister of the Interior introduced a bill to amend the Yukon Act. He explained that the bill contains provisions ratifying the steps already taken by the Government to reduce the organization which governs the Yukon, and it has been administered by the Department of the Interior.

The bill also authorized the Government to abolish the Yukon Council and to appoint in its place another administrative body. The bill provides that the Government may transfer to any officer of the Crown, any or all of the duties or functions of the offices abolished.

Gold Commissioner to Rule.

In this connection it has been announced that these duties have been delegated to the Gold Commissioner, and it is understood that it is the purpose of the Government to have the Yukon governed in future by an administrator. The main estimates recently tabled in Parliament showed that the Government had decided on a saving in connection with the administration of Yukon affairs of approximately $150,000.

The bill also relieves the Auditor-General of the necessity of sending an official to the Yukon every year. In future this will be done only when the Auditor-General deems it necessary.

Hon. F. B. Carvell introduced a bill to amend the Inland Navigation Act. Its purpose is to define the rights of people who erect wharves, etc., and to give the department the power to remove wharves when they constitute an obstruction to navigation.

M. S. A. Figures.

Mr. Trahan asked a number of questions respecting the number of men secured under the Military Service Act. Major-General Mewburn replied that the total enlistments during December, 1917, were 3,900. No men were ordered to report under the M. S. A. until January 3, 1919. Enlistments in January, 1918, were 14,971, of whom 11,539 were drafted under the M.S.A. Enlistments during February 1918, were 10,030. Of these 5,889 were drafted under the M.S.A.

No Titles For Civil Life.

W. F. Nickle, Kingston, then moved that an address be presented to the King praying that hereafter no hereditary titles be conferred in Canada. "Or any title of honour that will be held or can be used by, or which will confer any title or honour upon any person other than the person in recognition of whose services the honour or title has been conferred."

Speaking in support of his motion, Mr. Nickle said there were two reasons for bringing up the matter at the present time. Just now, when the country was at war we were likely to have a great crop of decorations. That was the first reason. The second was that with a Union Government and the leader of the Opposition not unsympathetic to the motion it should receive a fair hearing.

Mr. Nickle stated frankly that he had no sympathy with titular distinctions for those in civil life. He would have preferred to make his motion even broader, but had restricted it because he didnt' want a dozen or so men in the House to vote against it because they felt it was too broad. It was said, he went on, that we should have hereditary titles in Canada because they had them in England. Conditions in England and Canada were totally different. The titles in England were reflections of old feudal days.

The speaker said he had been in England, and there was one thing that grated on him, it was to hear Parliamentary addresses being, "My lords and gentlemen." "That may be all right for England, but it won't do for Canada." (Applause.)

Shower of Titles.

To prove his contention that there would be a "shower of titles after the war," Mr. Nickle read a recent newspaper despatch to the effect that a lengthy list of names for the Order of the British Empire had been held up in London at the request of the Canadian Government. This, he said, meant that a list had been prepared by somebody and the Canadian Government had not approved. Who prepared this list and was it approved by the Prime Minister?

Sir Robert Borden —The Canadian Government had not prepared any list.

Mr. Nickle —Then it was prepared by someobdy else.

Sir Robert Borden —The Prime Minister was asked to do so, but found other urgent engagements which made it impossible for him to do so.

The Y.M.C.A. In France.

We walk down to the central square; gaunt ruins are all that is left of what were once magnificent old public buildings. A machine-gun emplacement commands the square, and barbed wire entanglements are in evidence for use in case the Germans should attack. We walk past the cathedral; it is now a ruin with tremendous walls and naked arches standing out stark against the sky, what was once its nave now a huge pile of fallen masonry. We pass on and turn a corner; on the wall of what was formerly a French home of the well-to-do class we see painted a large red triangle. As we reach the door, several Y.M.C.A. secretaries welcome us and take us inside. Here they have lived through all the furious shelling of the preceding months, serving hot coffee and caring for the needs of thousands of soldiers, and, strangely enough, this house, the ground floor rooms of which have been crowded with troops night after night, is the only one in the vicinity which has not been partially wrecked by German shells. The upper stories, scarred with shrapnel and flying shell fragments, are not in use; the secretaries are sleeping under ground in what was once a wine-cellar, with the floor above them sandbagged and bomb-proofed. They tell us, to our surprise, that the seemingly deserted city is filled with troops; we learn that under the city is a vast network of labyrinth cellars and connecting passages and in these underground mazes, with the rats and vermin the soldiers are living. No wonder that that little friendly Y.M.C.A. building is thronged with troops night after night. We hear that in some way, I know not how, the secretaries managed to secure last week 15,000 fresh eggs which they supplied to the troops going up to the trenches; they are giving out ninety gallons of hot coffee every night. We ask what chance for rest they have, and are told that a few days before one of them spent his time unloading boxes of supplies from five in the afternoon until three the next morning, and turned in at last, only to be called out a few moments later by the arrival of fresh troops, whom he spent the rest of the morning serving. As we watch them at their work we begin to understand that a cup of hot coffee and a bit of cheery atmosphere may sometimes preach the most eloquent of sermons.—Francis B. Sayre in Harper's Magazine.

Wood Oil In Commerce.

Wood oil has many uses. It is used as an illuminant, an ingredient in concrete, an adulterant in the manufacture of lacquer varnish, and when mixed with lime and bamboo shavings it is used by the Chinese in calking their boats. Chinese or Indian ink is made from the soot resulting from the burning of the oil or the fruit husks. The product is also used as a dressing for leather, in the manufacture of soap, and as a varnish for fine furniture. In foreign countries wood oil is chiefly used for the manufacture of varnish from cheap gums. Other oils require a higher and more expensive quality of gum in order that the resulting varnish be of equal grade. This feature, together with the rapidity with which wood oil varnish dries, has caused the demand for the product to increase steadily.

The Woman Who Changed

GEORGE GOES AWAY

CHAPTER XXXVI.

"I am going away for a few days," George remarked at the breakfast table. "It is not convenient to take you, so I have requested Mrs. Sexton to remain here with you while I am gone."

For a moment I couldn't speak. To have that woman living in the house with me — to be under her critical eye every minute of the day, was too terrible to grasp quickly.

"But George, I don't need anyone to stay with me! With five servants I surely am safe."

"I wasn't thinking of your safety. You will have nothing special to occupy your time while I am away, and can learn a great many things necessary for you to know. By the way I have arranged for Signor Toretti to help you with your music."

"Oh, thank you; that will be lovely." Mrs. Sexton, almost forgotten in my delight at the idea. I had intended to ask George to allow me to have a teacher. I feared I should get rusty if I practised alone.

"I am glad the idea pleases you. Perhaps you will sometime give me credit of doing what I do in other directions for your good."

The distressing thought of Mrs. Sexton's being with me, returned at his words.

Pleading in Vain.

"But George I will do my best to learn all she wants me to, if you won't compel me to have her here. I would be so unhappy while you are away. I shouldn't have a happy minute."

"Don't exaggerate, and don't work yourself up into such a frame of mind. It is already settled that she is to come. And it may please you to know that she was no more anxious to oblige me, than you are to have her here. I really had to urge her to consent."

Broodingly I stared at the coffee pot. With all the luxury of my beautiful home around me I felt I would willingly exchange it all for a little flat where I did the work; and where George was satisfied with me as I was.

"Why did you marry me, George?"

I looked closely at him as I asked the question. If I hoped to see him show any sort of emotion at the question, I was disappointed.

"Because" I wanted you for my wife."

"And you always get what you want."

"Yes, Always."

"But you are trying to make me over, George. If you loved me well enough to want to marry me, why don't you love me the same way now? Why do you want me so different?"

"I suppose it is hopeless to try to make you understand, but when I married you I was not blind to your faults. I intended from the first to do all in my power to eradicate them. I knew that, as my wife, you would have much to learn. I imagined you would be pliable. That you would for my sake, if not for your own, try to be the kind of a wife I needed. I counted on your co-operation in my efforts. But even without it, your training will go on just the same."

I was throbbing with resentment. Then George never had loved me for what I was; but for the possibilities he saw in me. He thought he could take the little country girl and mold her to his desires. A girl of greater experience would not be so pliable.

George Shows Impatience.

"But George, there are many girls in your own class, or crowd," I would not concede that I was not in his class," that were already trained. Why did you not choose one of them? Why hunt out a girl to train?"

"That is my business!" he answered impatiently." I chose you. That's enough."

"But I cannot yet see why, if I was desirable then, I am so all wrong now," I persisted.

"You were all right in the environment in which I found you. As a girl of moderately well-to-do parents in a small country town. But you are not in that environment. And I expect you to become the kind of a woman, a wife, who fits in my home. That is all, I believe, except that I shall expect you to treat Mrs. Setxon with every consideration. It is hard enough for a woman of her former position in society to have to earn her living, without your making it harder because of your childish objections to her."

When George left, he kissed me good-bye. He would not leave town until the afternoon; but would not come up home again. As always, when he left me, I felt that I really loved him. That he was more tender in his caress at that time, that he kissed me more lingeringly, may have had something to do with it.

CHINA PAINTING

Japanese Like Fat Men.

In this country when a man of average height takes on girth until his weight runs up to 300 pounds or so, his friends have grave doubts about his condition and advise him to diet in order to bring back a slim elegance of figure. In Japan the contrary is true. If a man can carry 300 pounds of flesh with any agility he is of the material from which heroes are manufactured, and if he can work up to 400 or 475 pounds, and becomes a wrestler, he is in the running for the championship.

Wrestling is to the Japanese what boxing is to us, and more. The populace goes crazy over it, and the magnates of the big game handle great sums in the way of gate receipts. The Tokio Wrestling Association controls the flower of Japan's heavyweights, and at its head is a 350-pound veteran, T. Dewanoumi, the holder of the championship for eleven years in succession—a record feat.—Wide World.

Increasing Munitions Output.

"Nearly 10,000 workshops in Great Britain are now producing munitions of war," says the London Times. "Of these 5,000 are establishments controlled by the Ministry of Munitions and 150 are national factories. The output of material of all kinds is on an immense scale but the limit has not been reached.

The erection of four new national factories, at a cost of over $10,000,000 has just been sanctioned, and extensions are being carried out in many areas. Existing workshops are being enlarged; a new factory is being built for the readaptation of old boxes and packing cases from the battlefields; aircraft and instructional factories are being established, and almost every week there are demands for other varieties of building subsidiary to the production of munitions."

For Fighting Mines.

The Dutch authorities are reported to have recently tested and found practical a device for steamships invented by one of their naval officers, which cuts anchor chains of floating mines and prevents the latter from coming in contact with a vessel passing through a mine field.

Exposure Aches

Cold rain; winds; and dampness bring out the rheumatic aches. An application of Sloan's Liniment will soon have the blood circulating and the pain will disappear. For neuralgia, lame back, stiff neck, sprains, strains; and all muscle soreness, Sloan's Liniment can't be beat. No rubbing; it quickly penetrates and does its work without stain or clogging of the pores. Better than plasters or ointments. For cold feet or hands try an application of Sloan's Liniment. Generous sized bottles, at all druggists.

Sheep With Gold-Filled Teeth.

The sheep of the western islands of Scotland are almost as stylish as the dogs that ride in automobiles on our own Fifth avenue, in New York city. The canine aristocrats have occasional cavities in their teeth filled with gold, but the Scottish sheep have their entire set gold-plated before they have any chance to decay. The gold-plating is due to gold dust in the soil. As early as 1536 Hector Boece, bishop of Aberdeen, speaks of the remarkable appearance of the sheep that roam "the golden mountain" in central Aberdeenshire. Their wool is yellow, their flesh is red, flecked, as it were, with saffron, and their teeth are the hue of gold, he says.—Popular Science Monthly.

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS

Eat less meat if you feel Backachy or have Bladder trouble

Meat forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; removing all the acids, waste and poison, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive; harmless, and makes a delightful effervescent lithiawater drink which millions of men and women take now and then, thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder diseases.

Bicycle Remains Unsung.

Coaching has its Nimrod, the turf its Druid, the locomotive, nay, the upstart motor car, has its heroics written in the whirlwind vein of "Tamburlaine the Great," with due accompaniment of gong and cymbals. But the bicycle, in the many years of its popular existence, has found not a single literary champion. It has passed into a busy world unsung. The word "cycle," it has been decided by one school of thought, has proved a deterrent: the "bike" of booking office parlance is more ignominious still. Had it been called a pair-wheel, or a foot-wheel, or, as Poet Barnes suggested, a "wheel saddle," there might have been some hope for it.

Man's Index Finger.

Man's hand is arranged as to finger lengths like the monkey's. The primitive plan was for the third finger to be the longest, the fourth the next in length, the second the next, the fifth or little finger the next, while the thumb is shortest of all. The editor of the Journal of American Heredity declares that it is very commonly discovered that the first or index finger is as long or longer than the fourth, and this is doubtless due to the functional importance of the index finger. "I am not sure," he says, "that it should not be considered as the typical human condition."

WAR-MADE WORDS.

Tommies Have Built Up Language of Their Own.

Capt. Ian Hay, the well-known author, recently explained to a journalist the derivation of the word "blighty," so familiar in the mouths of British soldiers as an affectionate synonym for "home" and "England."

It is said to come from a Hindustani word, bhilati, which means "over the seas." The word is widely used and stands for any number of things. For example, a "blighty" wound is a severe wound that involves sending the victim home to recover. A "couchy" wound is another matter—a comfortable wound that means a short lay-off in the hospital, with good living, no work and no inconvenience to speak of. The soldiers probably coined "couchy" from the French word coucher.

The Tommies have built up a new language of intercourse with the inhabitants—a sort of lingua franca. It consists of their own speech, with occasional French words and phrases interlarded. One of the most remarkable is "napoo," which apparently comes from the French phrase, il n'y a plus. At first it meant "enough," "no more." It was the remark with which a man pushed back his plate at dinner and rose from the table. But now it has been considerably extended, and also means "dead," "gone away."

Not long ago a soldier brought another soldier up before his commanding officer.

"What is the charge against this man?" the officer asked.

"He threatened me, sir," replied the complainant.

"Threatened you? What did he say?"

"He said he'd napoo me, sir."—Family Herald.

Little Nourishment.

The almost complete lack of nourishment in many of the food "substitutes" now being sold in Germany is arousing a storm of warning from German scientists, who declare that Government supervision of the whole substitute food trade is an immediate necessity, says the Associated Press. Prof. Jackenack, of the University of Berlin, writing in the Vossische Zeitung, says:

"It is useless any longer to hide the truth. Unless the Government actively intervenes to put some control over the flood of substitute food with which we are overwhelmed, the end of the war will also see the end of a third of Germany's population. Moreover, the remaining two-thirds will be so enfeebled from malnutrition that they will be unable to perform the immense tasks of recuperation and restoration.

"The devil alone knows what are the ingredients of thousands of these wretched substitutes that already do duty for butter and eggs, oil and milk, flour and spirits, meat and broth, coffee and sugar, tobacco and tea, fish and sausage, cheese and caviar, and so on without end.

"The latest products of the ingenious substitute-mongers are really too terrible to be tolerated. A preparation of crude kerosene is now being largely sold as frying oil and 800 cases of serious illness together with nine deaths, have been traced to its use in Berlin alone. A preparation called 'goose dripping' is prepared from dog's fat; egg substitute form a mixture of chalk and baking powder; caviar from fish scales, and bread from straw. What people, no matter how patriotic, can hold out on such fare?"

Jerusalem's History.

At the time of the birth of Christ Judea, in which the city of Jerusalem was situated, was a possession or dependency of Rome. In the year 70 A. D., about thirty-five years after the death of Christ, Jerusalem was captured by the Romans under Emperor Titus and was destroyed. It was rebuilt by the Romans and held successfully for varying periods by them, by the Persians, by the Mohammedans, by the Crusaders and by the Turks.

NOTHING LIKE PHOSPHATE TO INCREASE STRENGTH, VIGOR AND NERVE FORCE

ORDINARY BITRO-PHOSPHATE WILL DOUBLE THE STRENGTH OF WEAK, DELICATE, NERVOUS PEOPLE IN TWO WEEKS' TIME IN MANY INSTANCES.

Weak nerves quickly reduce the strong and robust to an extremely pitiable condition and rob men and women of all the joys of life. Slowly and stealthily the health is destroyed, the poor sufferer only realizing the magnitude of his ailment when faulty memory, sleeplessness, indecision, lack of energy or other unmistakable symptoms indicate weak nerves. Then it is a serious and dangerous mistake to resort to the use of so-called tonics, alcoholic or drug stimulants.

Weak and exhausted nerves need food and nourishment—not stimulants that lash them into temporary activity. The food and nourishment advised by present day physicians is just one 5-grain tablet of pure bitro-phosphate taken during or immediately after each meal. Simple advice, but its soundness has been proven over and over again.

Moreover the genuine standard bitro-phosphate is inexpensive and is sold by McDermid & Jury and most all good druggists under a binding guarantee of satisfaction or money back.

A POET UNDER DIFFICULTIES.

Edmund Leamy Sent Verse From East Africa.

Those who happen to read the African poems of Edmund Leamy may be interested in knowing something of the origin of these verses, which tell so much of the jungle life. In their origin they are perhaps more interesting than any verse being produced at the present time.

Early in 1915 Leamy, who had been unable to do much in a literary way, went out to British East Africa as the employe of a business concern and there joined the military forces then being organized. There was soon an expedition under way against the German African regiments and Leamy saw some sharp fighting.

Along the jungle trails and on the heights Leamy saw much beauty and some humor in the African scenes between fights. When there was a chance in camp and during night watches he would write his verses, sometimes with the snip of bullets going through the leaves overhead.

It was one thing to write them and another thing to get them out of Africa to New York, where they might have a market value. The poems were usually written legibly, in a small hand with lead pencil, on the sheets of his note book.

Sometimes the military mail was carried by native runners to the nearest railway point, which might be a good way off. Thence it was taken to the coast, probably to Mombasa, where Leamy's lead pencil scrips would wait for the very casual war time steamship which might carry them to Marseilles or Brindisi on their long journey. Various censors had to read them or were supposed to and the usual time of transportation was about four months.

Wood's Lasting Qualities.

Wood is almost an imperishable substance and if kept from attacks of organisms; both animal and vegetable, will practically last forever. The heart wood in living trees is as thoroughly lifeless as the average fence post or timber lying in a lumber yard, but is usually protected by the outward bark. When insects and disease find entrance through holes or cracks a hollow tree usually results and the decay or destruction is as rapid as though not inside living bark.

Prehistoric Skull Borings.

The operation called "trephining," by which a button of skull is removed, is regarded in these modern days as very hazardous, and to be attempted only as a last resort. But the ancient Peruvians, centuries before Columbus landed, practiced it very commonly. Of 1,000 of their skulls, recently obtained by the United States bureau of ethnology from prehistoric caves and cemeteries, nearly 2 per cent had been trephined for some cause.

Big Tithes for Bishop.

A champion pluralist was Bishop Luxmore of St. Asaph. To his own use he contrived to impound the tithes of some two dozen parishes, which gave him an annual income of nearly £20,000. A staunch believer was the worthy bishop in the maxim that blood is thicker than water. For his eldest son, whom he made dean of St. Asaph, he obtained other ecclesiastical appointments which brought him in over $8,000 yearly. A second son had preferments to the tune of a mere $2,000, while a nephew had to be content with a beggarly pittance of $1,000. It was reckoned that the four Luxmores, who flourished in the early years of last century, drew from their manifold appointments the sum of about $125,000 yearly.—London Times.

OUR DALY SHORT STORY

That Bill for Flowers

By F. A. MITCHEL

"Grace," said Mr. Larramore, "I'm getting old and it is high time to provide for such condition as you and Dick—"

Mr. Larramore was stalled.

"What I wish to say," he continued, "is that I have the same feeling for you as if you were my own daughter."

"Yes, uncle."

"I have enough to leave you comfortable when I come to the jumping off place and I have enough to leave Dick comfortable, but if I divide the property between you both there is not enough to make either comfortable."

"Then, uncle, it is your duty to leave your property to your own son."

"Why can't I leave it to you and him as one person?"

"It is impossible."

"Dick would rather I would leave it to you jointly. He—"

"Now, uncle, I know what you mean. I've heard it all from Dick. Dick and I have always been brother and sister and such we'll always be."

This ended the father's attempt to help his son to secure the wife that son wanted. Dick Larramore was engaged in business in another city and seldom visited his home, so his foster sister was not troubled with his attentions. Six months after this attempt of his father to make a match between the two Grace said to her uncle:

"What's the matter with Dick? He has never let so long time go by before without coming home for a visit."

"I think some girl is keeping him," Grace looked grave.

"I shouldn't be surprised," continued Mr. Larramore, "to hear any day that he is engaged."

"Why do you think so?"

"Well, you know Dick's salary is not very large and he occasionally falls back upon me. The other day he sent me a bill for flowers."

"Oh! I see."

The subject was not pressed further. A few days later Dick received a letter from his cousin-foster sister chiding him for remaining away from home so long without a visit. His father was very much hurt at his son's neglect of him.

This letter brought Dick home for the next week-end. He had an interview with his father at which the latter denied that he considered his son neglectful of him and commended him for standing by his business. The old man went to bed early and Dick spent the rest of the evening with Grace.

"Who is this person you're sending flowers to?" asked Grace in a cold tone.

"I wouldn't send flowers to a person, I would only send them to an attractive girl."

There was a brief silence between them which was broken by Grace.

"Do you think you have a right to marry when your father is getting old and needs your attention?"

"He isn't getting my attention. You are taking care of him and doing it far better than I could. I supposed you were to remain single as long as he lives."

"How very self-sacrificing you are," sarcastically.

"It's self-sacrificing of you. I've heard you say often that you were going to be an old maid for dad's sake."

"I suppose after dear uncle's death you will bring this woman you're going to marry into the house and I shall have to vacate?"

"I'm not going to marry" this woman. "If I marry I shall marry a lovely girl."

"Supposing—" Grace said with great seriousness, "supposing that I should die before your father, do you suppose he would be able to put up with a strange person who you would bring into the house to take my place?"

"But you're not going to die, and I'm not going to bring a 'strange person' into this house."

"I don't know; I've had queer feelings about my heart lately."

"You don't mean it; who is the cad who is making the trouble with your heart?"

"You know very well that I don't mean it in that sense at all. If I did you would not be the person to refer to my lover as a cad."

"Why not?"

"You know very well that I would not do what you are going to do. If I marry, uncle will be perfectly satisfied to have me marry and approve of the gentleman who is to be my husband."

"Oh! he is to be a gentleman, is he?"

"He has one fault."

"What's that?"

"He is very unfeeling; he doesn't seem to realize what a noble, good father he has."

Dick opened his eyes very wide and looked up at the ceiling; Grace's eyes were glued to the floor. Presently Dick said:

"Which, being interpreted, means that you are willing to sacrifice yourself to dad's desires."

"I will marry no man who does not love me."

"And I will marry no girl who does not love me."

The dialogue here came to an abrupt end, for Dick caught her in his arms and sealed her lips with kisses.

The next morning, when Mr. Larramore came downstairs his son grasped his hand and said feelingly:

"A million thanks, dad."

"All fixed?"

"Yes, that story about the bill for flowers did it."

"I thought it would."

The Hopping Test.

If you can hop twenty times on each foot without showing signs of undue distress, the British army considers your health good enough for general service, according to a new book of instruction issued to the examining medical boards. The test recommended is as follows:

"The rate of the pulse is taken, and then the recruit is directed to hop twenty times on each foot, raising the other foot nine inches. At the end of this performance, in health, there should be no noteworthy breathlessness and no pallor or anxiety of expression. Two minutes later the pulse should be not more than five beats more frequent than it was before the exercise.

What the Boss Wants.

Up in Western Canada there is a successful business concern that expects, as most successful concerns do, that every employe shall do his full duty, says the Houston Post. To assist him in the task that concern places conspicuously before him these "Ten Commandments":

1. Don't lie. It wastes my time and yours. I am sure to catch you in the end, and that is the wrong end.
2. Watch your work, not the clock. A long day's work makes a long day short; and a short day's work makes my face long.
3. Give me more than I expect, and I will give you more than you expect. I can afford to increase your pay if you increase my profits.
4. You owe so much to yourself you cannot afford to owe anybody else. Keep out of debt, or keep out of my shop.
5. Dishonesty is never an accident. Good men, like good women, never see temptation when they meet it.
6. Mind your own business, and in time you'll have a business of your own to mind.
7. Don't do anything here which hurts your self-respect. An employe who is willing to steal for me is willing to steal from me.
8. It is none of my business what you do at night. But if dissipation affects what you do the next day, and you do half as much as I demand, you'll last half as long as you hoped.

"Yes, love."

"You are not so unworthy as you think," murmured the dear girl.

TELL YOUR WIFE CORNS LIFT OFF
Doesn't hurt a bit to lift corns or calluses off with fingers

Not a twinge of pain or soreness before applying, or afterwards. This may sound like a dream to corn-pestered men and women who have been cutting, filing and wearing torturous plasters. Yes! Corns lift out and calluses peel off as if by magic.
A small bottle of freezone costs but a few cents at any drug store. Apply a few drops directly upon your tender corn or callus, and instantly the soreness disappears; then shortly the corn or callus will be so loose that it lifts off.
Freezone dries instantly. It doesn't eat out the corn or callus, but just shrivels it up so it lifts away without even irritating the surrounding skin. Women should keep a tiny bottle handy on the dresser and never let a corn or callus ache twice.

Daylight Saving.

It is probable that a continental daylight-saving scheme will be effected for the coming summer by joint action of the Canadian and American Governments. It is understood that negotiations are now in progress between them looking to the joint inauguration next May or June of daylight-saving through the process of turning all clocks in Canada and the United States forward one hour.

Daylight-saving schemes have been tried locally in a number of Canadian cities during the past two years, but to secure satisfactory working it is recognized that a general national and international observance of it is necessary.

The need for the greater use of daylight during the long days of summer is rendered the more imperative this year because of the necessity for greater agricultural production, the saving of fuel used for lighting plants, etc. Canada will adopt the scheme if the United States decides to go in for it also.

Moslem Polygamy.

The only passage in the Koran that refers to the subjects of polygamy is the third verse of the fourth Sutra. It reads: "And if ye are apprehensive that ye shall not deal fairly with orphans, then of other women who seem good in your eyes marry but two, or three, or four; and if ye still fear that ye shall not act equitably, then one only; or the slaves whom ye have acquired; this will make justice on your part easier." Since at the time of Mahomet the Arabians were allowed to marry as many wives as they pleased, this passage, instead of being an encouragement of polygamy, must be interpreted rather as a diplomatic recommendation of monogamy on account of the difficulty of realizing the conditions involved with the privilege.

Postal Service Development.

As late as the fifteenth century butchers or drovers who went about buying cattle were the principal carriers of private correspondence. In the twelfth century the University of Paris established a body of pedestrian messengers, who bore letters from its thousands of students to the various countries of Europe from which they came and brought to them the money they needed for the prosecution of their studies. The great development of commerce following the crusades and the geographical discoveries of the Italians, Portuguese and Spaniards created a necessity for business correspondence about the beginning of the sixteenth century.

Earl Grey's Last Message

"HE lit so many fires in cold rooms," was the testimony of Earl Grey's son to his father, the former Governor-General of Canada, and the words are amply confirmed by a recent book entitled "Albert, Fourth Earl Grey: A Last Word," by Harold Begbie. Some months before Lord Grey died he had been told by his doctor that he had not long to live, and this knowledge led to the desire to use his remaining time in bequeathing a message to his fellow-countrymen. His weak health necessitated a collaborator, and Mr. Begbie's book is the outcome.

Lord Grey thought that "a voice from the grave often gets a hearing," but his last words are far more important than this modest opinion suggests, for his honored career in various capacities and countries gives his utterances a deserved weight.

His strong conviction was that, as Mr. Begbie says, "only sympathy and intelligence are necessary to remove all the economic evils which affect mankind," and his life was a constant effort to "make things better." Everything in church and state was regarded as an opportunity for social service, and in particular two forms occupied his attention. Here are Lord Grey's own words:

"I have had two great passions in my life, the Empire and the welfare of the working classes. The Empire has been my religion. I believe that it contains the world's greatest promise of peace. I thing it can settle all our domestic problems. Rescue this vast Empire from being at the disposal of our party system, give our working classes an intelligent conception of what it means, and you will transform the political conditions here at home."

This is a noble faith, and in a letter written by a lady who knew him well in Canada, it is remarked that to Lord Grey the Empire meant a great moral force rather than merely a vast area of land with millions of people.

Together with this intense love for and belief in the Empire went the earnest desire to see better social conditions in Great Britain. He was strongly of opinion that with an intelligent use of the Empire there need be no poverty and no overcrowding. At the present time of unrest it is refreshing to learn that Lord Grey had no fear of the use Labor would make of political power, because of his absolute confidence in "an Englishman's sense of justice and fair play." He was utterly opposed to any playing on the weakness of Labor for the sake of political advantage. This is how he once put it when Governor-General of Canada:

"Tampering with the sovereignty of the people is, if unpunished, worse than the assassination of a monarch—for a monarch can be replaced, but as soon as men lose faith in one another anarchy comes knocking at the door."

This is an idealism that is far too seldom seen in politics, and yet if it were emphasized more strongly and frequently it would have a great and salutary effect on party and national affairs. As Lord Grey himself said, he wished to see established "a democracy based on the idea of duty," because, in his judgment, "character is poisoned by self-interest." It was this conviction that led to his persistent and enthusiastic championship of co-operation.

That such a man as Earl Grey was once Governor-General of this Dominion will long be remembered with interest and gratitude because of the ideals set forth in this welcome and fascinating book. Another quotation, so characteristic of the man, may fitly close this reference to a literary legacy which will doubtless obtain wide and careful attention in Canada:

"Ask yourself as to every act you commit, within the circle of family or country: If what I now do were done by and for all men, would it be beneficial or injurious to Humanity? And if your conscience tells you it would be injurious, desist; desist, even though it seem that an immediate advantage to your country or family would be the result of continuing."

Sixty-Two Descendants In War.

A rather interesting document is in the possession of an official at the Canadian Parliament Buildings which shows that sixty-two descendants of one man are fighting for the allies in the present war.

Edward Moberley and his wife lived in Petrograd, and the document shows that the number of the grandsons and nephews, etc., in the present war are probably larger than any other couple. They are fighting in different parts of the world, but all on the one side.

One of the fighting descendants comes from Collingwood, Ont., while two of them have won Military Medals, and two the D.S.O. One descendant of Edward Moberley, George Moberley, died recently in Collingwood, while another, Frank Moberley, lives at Barrie, where he is a civil engineer.

The records show that three of the descendants have been killed in this war and one has been taken prisoner. The men are fighting in all arms of the service, and some were stationed in different parts of the globe before the war broke out.

Sprat.

As long ago as Elizabeth's time "sprat" was used as a term of contempt and as an article of diet it has always been deemed but humble fare, with which, however, good economists are very well content today, remarks the London Chronicle. But though despised in its adult state, it is in its infancy that highly esteemed delicacy, whitebait. We were a long time, however, in recognizing the fact, for naturalists disputed among themselves whether the honor should be accorded to the fry of shad, pilchards, or herring and only lately did they decide that it belonged to the herring and sprat.

Misfits.

Several Canadian prairie cities are involved in serious financial problems as an inheritance from the boom days of a few years ago. These municipalities are really the victims of that wholesale speculation in real estate which is never content to keep itself within rational bounds. Each citizen becomes a self-constituted "booster" of his town. A stranger entering it one year may find it a comparatively insignificant place, with a small and unpretentious town hall doing duty, in addition, as fire station and dance hall, and providing office accommodation for professional citizens. A year later all may be changed. The "boom" has struck the town, and the effect is much like that of a tornado. The streets are torn up and the old flimsy houses torn down. But out of the gigantic debris rise the concrete and steel walls of the new city hall and a palatial block of stores which would do credit to Toronto or a Montreal. The whole effect is that of a misfit.

Dizzy Spells, Indigestion

Napanee Man Could Scarcely Walk at Times, He Was So Dizzy—Indigestion and Kidney Trouble Overcome By This Treatment.

NAPANEE, Ont., March 19. — The experience of Mr. Nolan of this town will interest all who suffer from indigestion and accompanying derangemens of the liver, kidneys and bowels.

Indigestion is such a common trouble that many suffer for years without knowing how readily they could obtain relief by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to arouse the action of the liver, kidneys and bowels, and thereby remove the cause of much discomfort and suffering.

Mr. John P. Nolan, Dundas street west, Napanee, Ont., writes: "For some time I was troubled with weak kidneys, and used to have a scalding, burning sensation in my stomach. This was accompanied by dizziness, and occasionally it would be so severe that I would stagger while walking. I commenced using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and in a very short time my kidneys were in normal condition. Then I tried Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for the dizzy spells and I am glad to say that under this treatment they gradually disappeared. At present I am enjoying good health, and am pleased to recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Nerve Food."

This statement is endorsed by S. Casey Denison, Mayor of Napanee.

Timbuctoo to Teheran.

Premier Lloyd-George's recent speech on war aims and peace terms has been translated into German for distribution in great numbers in Germany and Austria. Col. John Buchan and his staff, of the Department of Information, are carrying out large developments in propaganda to counteract in neutral and allied countries the clever German "teaching" which has been spread so assiduously, and to bring the truth about the war to the German people themselves.

There are numerous ways of reaching the German populations. The obvious one is by airplane distribution of leaflets, but there are also other methods, and various plans are ready for the dissemination of the truth all over Germany. Striking developments in the work of counteracting the widespread German propaganda in America, Italy, Spain and other countries are now in progress. Pamphlets, leaflets, illustrated magazines, articles in the papers of those countries, cinema instruction and lectures are among the methods in increasing use.

Miss Annie Swan and Miss Violet Markham will go to America before long to speak to the American people. Soldiers who have been wounded are also going out to tell the public in the States the truth about the war and our attitude.

One of the latest propaganda devices of the Department of Information—the motor caravan cinema—gave a demonstration in the open air in the Lord Chancellor's Court at the House of Lords.

Ten of these caravans are ready to take the road. Their destinations cannot all be indicated, but some of them will take their stand on the village greens and city squares of the United Kingdom. Others will travel over Europe, Asia and Africa, from Timbuctoo to Teheran, and everywhere they will give astonishing proof of the immensity of Great Britain's efforts in the war.

Marvelous Feats of Salmon.

Leaving the salt water of the ocean for the fresh-water streams on the Pacific coast the salmon quickly changes color from silver to blood red. In agreement with this metamorphosis the fish also gradually loses the firmness of its flesh. A slow but steady deterioration sets in. When the appointed time has come to move to its selected place, the fish run in with a big tide that goes far up the chosen stream. And in reaching the desired grounds in fresh water far from the sea, the salmon performs almost unbelievable feats. It will jump small waterfalls, swimming up greater ones to the height of 15 feet. This feat, seemingly contrary to natural laws, the salmon performs. Choosing a point where a fall of the water is heaviest, it rushes up it with all its swimming power.

LADY'S COMBINATION.

Womankind is growing to like these combinations more and more as they find out how very practical and convenient they are. The one illustrated in No. 8764 combines a bodice top camisole with bloomers. It is in chemise style—that is to say, there is no joining at the waistline. It is very easy to make for the bloomers are simply shirred at the knees on elastics and the straight top is treated in the same way. The shoulder straps are just straight pieces of satin ribbon. The bloomers are in open style.

The lady's combination pattern No. 8764 is cut in five sizes—36 to 44 inches bust measure. The 36 inch size requires 2¾ yards 27 inch, 2⅝ yards 36 inch or 2 yards 40 inch material and 3¾ yards ribbon. Price [illegible]

This Pattern Can Be Obtained From the Examiner Office on Payment of 15 Cents.

About Walking Sticks.

The United Kingdom has long taken the lead in the manufacture of walking sticks and a large proportion of the output was made of raw material grown in the British Isles, such as ash, chestnut, oak and similar woods. The importation of finished sticks has always been small, but before the war a considerable amount of raw or partly finished material was imported, such as malacca canes, ebony, wangnees, roof bamboo, nilgherri, etc. Cherry sticks and what is known as "Congo" wood were formerly imported from Germany and Austria, where they are grown. For a time after the outbreak of war the stocks on hand met the demand, but gradually the trade has become more dependent upon home-grown goods, and consequently a greatly increased demand for domestic raw material has arisen. The military vogue has also had great effect on the style of walking sticks, and there has been a large demand during the last two or three years for sticks and canes for military use. As regards prices, it has been found that both labor and material have had a steady upward tendency since the war began. Some canes and sticks which were largely used have increased 100 per cent in cost, and certain of the better kinds are now practically unobtainable. Generally speaking, it may be said that an approximate advance of 25 per cent. in price has taken place on the lower grade goods and probably 30 to 40 per cent. on the higher qualities. Increasing difficulty is also being experienced by British manufacturers in obtaining sufficient supplies of metal fittings, materials for umbrella frames and textile materials for umbrella covers.

LAUGH AND GROW FAT.

"Laugh and grow fat," is an old saying laden with value for nervous people in particular. Drop the worry habit and use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and you will soon get the nervous system restored to good condition. Digestion will improve, appetite will return, and you will find such symptoms as headache and sleeplessness fast disappearing.

Paternalism in Japan.

The proposed budget for the year for the department of agriculture and commerce of Japan contains some new items for the help of business and industrial men, says the Japan Bulletin. For one thing, the government will nationalize the forests of Hokkaido and manage them for the benefit of various industries which are dependent upon lumber resources. The inauguration of compulsory labor insurance is also planned. Certain industries will be helped by enlarging the government industrial laboratory. The tea industry will be fostered by the creation of a tea laboratory and the establishment of commercial showrooms in important foreign markets.

Beer for the Actors.

Men to whom the matter of beer supply is of importance will more than ever regret the "good old days" when they learn that on play nights at Hampton court, Shakespeare and his fellows were allowed some four and twenty glasses of free beer. One gallon per head daily to the actors, we are told, and extra on the occasion of performances, was the quantity. The adults must really have had even more than this, for, let us remember, the female roles were all played by young boys, who certainly could not ship such seas. Their share must have gone to the seniors.—London Chronicle.

Secrets Lost to World.

The people of Easter Island, whatever their remote origin, are now decadent, partly through slavery, partly through migration; a continual exodus and influx of strange peoples, and the consequent mixture of type, have marred what must have been once a fine and gradually civilized race. The conversion of the natives in 1864 to Christianity caused them to abandon all interest in their pagan carvings and writings, so that much of the secret of their former advance is, and must be, lost to the world.—Christian Science Monitor Special Australian Correspondence.

A Censorship That Failed

TO us who lived in Constantinople Abdul Hamid was a mystery, a fear and a constant sinister influence. We never spoke his name in the street; we never pointed at his palace; we never noticed his outrages. It was best to keep a close mouth and eyes straight ahead in the years I was in his city, says Prof. Jenkins, formerly of the University of Constantinople, speaking of the death of Abdul-the-Damned.

Constantinople was a place of fear when I lived there, from 1900 to 1909. We were afraid of Abdul Hamid and his spies; he was in constant dread of losing his power and his life. He realized that progress for Turkey meant his downfall, and he was in perpetual fear of the germ of liberalism entering from Europe.

He kept out of Turkey all books that mentioned Turkey or Islam. He censored all mail, and all parties and gatherings of people. No clubs or meetings were allowed. The newspapers were a nullity, all real news being forbidden, and discussions on the weather and reports of people whom his majesty had proscribed. Business was stifled. Telephones were forbidden because they transmitted messages so rapidly that treason might be hatched over them. Typewriters were prohibited because they might write treasonable words. All the money in the country flowed into the bottomless pockets of the palace clique and the Sultan. By 1907, when Abdul Hamid felt sure that a revolution was brewing, a Turk was in danger if he were seen talking to a European and the coffee houses frequented by foreigners were forbidden to Moslems. If a Turkish acquaintance walked along the bridge with us we felt nervous fearing he or we might fall under suspicion. If a Turk were once suspected, all his friends and acquaintances would shun him as if he were a leper. There is nothing that we have learned of espionage in these years of the war that was not outdone in Turkey in 1907, and all because Abdul Hamid was trying to dam up progress in the Ottoman empire and keep himself on his tottering throne.

Some of the stories of censorship at that time were amusing, although we were always suffering inconvenience because of it. For instance—although the Bible was allowed to be published there was trouble when any special reprints were made of separate parts. At one time some copies of the Lord's Prayer fell into the hands of the censors and were disapproved.

"Why should you say, 'Thy Kingdom Come'?" inquired the official. "Nobody's kingdom should come but our Lord Sultan's."

Another time a copy of the Epistle to the Galatians excited suspicion of treason. There is a quarter of Constantinople called Galata, and this epistle on the face of it was a seditious appeal to the people of that quarter. Sir Edwin Pears, the eminent English lawyer, was obliged to go into court and testify that the author of the letter, one Paul, had been dead at least seven years!

When the French actor Coquelin came to Constantinople, his repertory was handed to the censors. "Le Malade Imaginaire" could not be played because that seemed to reflect on Abdul Hamid's hypochondria, and "Le Misanthrope" was plainly a hit at the Sultan. "Tartuffe, the Hypocrite," was, again, a too sympathetic role; finallyy, as the Sultan seemed to have the whole list of Moliere vices, nothing was left to the distinguished actor but "Le Medecin Malgre Lui."

The Sultan left his palace only twice a year, on special holy days; the rest of the time he remained behind the lofty walls of Yildez, protected by the highly paid Albanian guard and a large force of sentries and catered to by a whole village of industries.

Abdul Hamid's plotting finally caused the mutiny of 1909. Those were dark days for us when the newly arisen Turkey seemed shaken again. But the Young Turks gathered themselves together, and Abdul Hamid fell. When he saw that he could not save himself he resolved that Turkey should crash with him and ordered massacres all over the land. Some were executed; in other cases the governors refused.

Then, indeed, Abdul Hamid's hour had struck. Some of the soldiers were loyal and fought for him, but were defeated. Others deserted. He cowered alone in his palace of Yildiz, abandoned even by most of his women, while in the Bosphorus below men-of-war menaced him. He made no sign. How his superstitious, fear-ridden soul endured those days of suspense I do not know. All Constantinople held its breath. Then, one day, the spell was broken, the cannon began to boom. We rushed to our roof, where we could see the Bosphorus below, and the city beyond, with the palace of Yildiz at the right. More than twenty-one shots were fired, and we knew then that the Sultan had been deposed.

The old fox, who had never appeared without a procession and banners, was ushered out of the city ignominiously, with no one to speed him on his way, accompanied only by a few women and attendants and even mourning the loss of his favorite cigarettes, which had been forgotten.

Abdul Hamid is still a mystery. He possessed cleverness without greatness, skill without success. He was intellectual, yet childish and superstitious, and until his death the fear of his plottings had never quite left Turkey.

Thirty-three thousand letters are dealt with by the British ministry of pensions every day.

THE PARLIAMENT BUILDINGS.

May Stand as Symbol of Spirit of the Nation.

The new Capitol which is rising from the ruins on Parliament Hill, Ottawa, is slowly approaching completion. It is characteristic of this heroic age that no sooner were the flames extinguished on the site of the building which had stood since 1893, than draft sketches were prepared for a nobler, franker structure. The enthusiasm which had animated the builders must have been inspired, to a large extent, by the words of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who said: "When we gaze upon the ruins on the hill, while we still trust that it may be the result of accident, we are reminded of the ruins of Louvain and Rheims. If there is anything which the present calamity should impress upon us it is the duty of resolutely going on with our work." The significance of that work, its magnitude for a people who are giving of their all, even to the last penny and the last man, for the cause of democracy by the borders of No Man's Land, can be gathered from the fact that the new building is costing twice as much as the old one.

This sturdiness of resolution, in view of enormous war expenditures, may rightly be regarded, as a contemporary points out, as a record of the character and aspirations of the Canadian people when engaged in the costly European war. They are indeed building better than they had dared to hope at the time of the disaster. Architecture, according to John Ruskin, "is the art which so disposes and adorns the edifices raised by man, for whatsoever uses, that the sight of them may contribute to the mental health, power and pleasure." In no other style of architecture could a better opportunity be afforded to Canada to rewrite her history in stone, and to rewrite it more fully, than in the pure Gothic of the Canadian Parliament House. The essence of Gothic is that soaring aspiration which strives to reach infinitude.

Something of this thought is animating the men who are intrusted with the building and the adorning sculptures. The early years of the nation's life are to be recorded in wood and stone. In time, too, the tourists who have been wont to look upon the sturdy walls above the Chaudiere and Rideau falls, will see a surpassing chronicle of Canada in peace and war.

Above all else, the precious opportunity has come to Canada, as it has come to no other country, to inscribe in stone the present epoch of her existence, now that she has prepared the foundations for her future nationhood. Herein surely lies her best medium of expressing the power and pleasure of which Ruskin speaks. Herein, too, is where the building will have the truest significance as one recalls the comparison with Rheims cathedral. Both buildings have been reduced to ruin during the war. The one is to be left a monument and witness to all time to the destructive course which reduced it to a mere shadow of the history which it enshrined. The other, springing from its ashes, should, if Canada so wills it, be the world's great monument to the constructive civilization which reared itself upon the temporary ruin of social order.

Those English Editors.

It is a favorite allegation of the people in this country that the English are ignorant about Canada. A rather amusing example of how little even an editor may know about Canada is given by Mrs. Florence A. Vicars, a Toronto poetess. Mrs. Vicars wrote a poem for the Westminster Gazette, to which she gave the title "Gold Stripes," with the sub-title "A Cockney Mother Speaks." The poem, of course, was in dialect, but the English editor changed the sub-title to "A Canadian Mother Speaks," and the words "all Poplar" to Alberta, and published that way. Here is the poem, which would indeed be an unheard-of variety of Canadian dialect:

My Bert 'as just come 'ome agin, 'e walks a little lame;
But, thank the Lord, 'e's got 'is eyes, 'is face is just the same.
I'm that glad the shrapnel missed it I could not look at 'im all day.
Though I'd love 'im just as dearly if the 'alf was shot away.
'E's not so regular 'andsome and 'e's not so ugly, too,
But just an average looker, the same as me and you;
And there's not a prouder woman in all Poplar, I believe,
When I go out walkin' with 'im with the gold stripes on 'is sleeve.

There's one 'e says 'e got by bein' just a bloomin' fool;
Fair mad 'e was that day the Bosches bombed an infant school.
There was cover for the takin', but 'e couldn't stop to take it.
Through blood and tears 'e saw their line, and knew 'e 'ad to break it;
The other times 'e says 'twas just 'is duty that 'e done.
And once I know the officers they thanked 'im one by one.
And every day I thank the Lord for what we do receive,
When I walk with Bert in khaki, with the gold stripes on 'is sleeve.

THERE IS NOTHING FOR THE LIVER SO GOOD AS MILBURN'S LAXA-LIVER PILLS

They will regulate the flow of bile to act properly on the bowels and will tone, renovate, and purify the liver, removing every result of liver trouble from the temporary, but disagreeable bilious and sick headaches, to the severest forms of liver complaint.

They are small and easy-acting, do not gripe, sicken or weaken like the old-fashioned, nauseating, griping purgatives.

Mrs. A. Kirk, 53 Yorkville Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "I have tried and tested Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills, and have received good results, for which I am very thankful. I took them for liver trouble. I came out of the hospital on May 3rd, last, after having had a serious operation which might have been saved had I taken your remedy sooner. I have given some to my sister for biliousness and sick headache, and she has found great relief. A lady who lives in my house has started to take them. I will do my best to recommend them to all my friends."

Price 25c at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

The Cause Of Sickness

Apart from accident or illness due to infection almost all ill-health arises from one of two reasons. The great mistake that people make is in not realizing that both of these have the same cause at the root of them, namely poor and impure blood. Either bloodlessness or some trouble of the nerves will be found to be the reason for almost every ailment. If you are pale, suffer from headaches or breathlessness, with palpitation of the heart, poor appetite and weak digestion, the cause is almost always bloodlessness. If you have nervous headaches, neuralgia, sciatica and other nerve pains, the cause is run down, exhausted nerves. But run down nerves are also a result of poor blood, so that the two chief causes of illness are one and the same.

This accounts for the great number of people, once in indifferent health, pale, nervous and dyspeptic, who have been made well and hearty by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills; for no medicine ever discovered is so valuable for increasing the supply of rich, red blood and giving strength to worn out nerves. Men and women alike greatly benefit from a course of the splendid blood builder and nerve tonic.

If your dealer does not keep these pills you can get them by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Enemy's Artillery Has Developed Great Activity

The French Aviators Locate German Long Range Gun

"We Have Now Entered The Most Critical Period Of The Conflict"

(LLOYD GEORGE)

Premier in His Address to the House This Afternoon Says There Is a Lull in the Storm.

FATE OF EUROPE

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, April 9.—Premier Lloyd George announced in the House of Commons this afternoon that the Irish convention report had been laid on the table to-day. The Premier told the house that when the battle on the Somme front commenced the total combatant strength of the German army on the west front was approximately equal to the total of the Entente Allies. Lloyd George said his man power proposals would involve extreme sacrifices on the part of the people of Great Britain.

The Cambrai battle, he said, was very trivial when compared with the recent battle, and until the strain had relaxed it would be difficult to find out exactly what had happened.

"We have now entered the most critical period of the war. There is a lull in the storm, but the hurricane is not yet over.

"The fate of the Empire of Europe and of liberty may depend upon the success with which the last German attack is registered and countered," said the Premier.

REINFORCEMENTS.

The Premier said the Cabinet had taken every step to hurry reinforcements. The number of guns and prisoners taken had been exaggerated grossly by the Germans. The Ministery of Munitions, the Premier added, had been able to replace the guns and there were substantial reserves left. The Cabinet was confident the army would be equal to the next drive. Lloyd George said the Cabinet had decided to recall General Gough, who was in command of the Fifth Army, against which the Germans made their principal gains, until all circumstances of his retirement were known. However, it would be unfair, he said, to censure him, having given an initial success. Lloyd George went on say that the enemy was preparing greater attacks, and it would be fatal to under-estimate the gravity of the situation.

CONSCRIPTION IN IRELAND.

When an emergency had arisen which made it necessary to put men of fifty and boys of eighteen into the fight for liberty, Lloyd George declared, it was not possible to exclude Ireland from conscription by a Parliament in which Ireland was represented and which had committed the country to war without a dissenting voice. The Premier said the fight might continue for seven or eight months. For the British army and navy, he stated, almost six million men had been raised already. The character of the quarrel in which the country was engaged, the Premier said, was as much Irish as English. Alfred Byrne, Nationalist member from Dublin, shouted, "We won't have conscription in Ireland. An uproar followed. The proportion of men between forty-two and fifty available for fighting, said the Premier, was estimated at seven per cent. The recruiting tribunals would be re-constituted and grounds for exemption and limits of right to appeal would be standardized. Clergymen would be required to perform non-combatant service. No one under twenty-five years of age would be retained in any industry.

HER ONLY WORRY.

"I notice that a woman prominent in war activities got hurt in a motor car accident."

"Was she badly injured?"

"Evidently not. The car turned turtle. When it was raised she was found underneath it, still knitting away for dear life, but much flustered because she had dropped a stitch."

THE GERMAN LONG RANGE GUN WHICH HAS BEEN BOMBARDING PARIS HAS BEEN LOCATED

(Special to The Examiner.)

PARIS, April 9.—The German long-range gun which has been bombarding Paris has been located in Crepy-on-Laonnoise, it was announced here to-day. French artillery and aviators are bombarding it continuously. Crepy-on-Laonnoise is a village of 1,500 people, 75 miles northeast of Paris. It is located just east of the eastern fringe of the St. Cobain Forest, and is eight miles southeast of Lafere, five miles northwest of Laon, twelve miles due east of Chauny, and seven and a half miles north and east of Anizy-Le-Chateau, the nearest point in the battle line.

The village is noted as the place where Charles V. and Francis I. concluded peace in 1544.

Conscription For Ireland

Lloyd George Will Make An Important Announcement This Afternoon—The Man-Power Bill

RECENT BATTLE

(Special to The Examiner.)

London, April 9.—Premier Lloyd George is scheduled to make an important speech in the House of Commons this afternoon, reviewing recent battle and explaining reasons for the allied retirement, in connection with the introduction of the man power bill.

The bill provides for raising the military age to 50, utilizing youths aged 18 behind the lines, rigid combing out of present lists of exempted men, calling up clergymen for non-combatant duty, authorizing Irish conscription for the future if considered desirable.

WOMAN INJURED WHEN AUTOMOBILE HITS HER CARRIAGE

While driving on the Keene road, near Downer's Corners on Saturday evening after dark, Mrs. Jones, who lives near Crawford's Grove, was overtaken and her pony cart struck by an auto truck. She was returning from Mr. J. T. O'Connell's farm, where she had got a setting of eggs. According to the police report of the affair, made by Detective Newhall, the truck bore down upon the pony and cart practically without warning Mrs. Jones was thrown out and badly hurt, the shafts were broken and the eggs scrambled. The car did not stop, but sped on. It belonged to the Matthews-Blackwell Company, the report stated, and was driven by Sylvester McMahon, who, in consequence of the episode, has been dismissed. It was also stated that the delivery truck was driven without lights.

No Use Making Protests Against Increased Fire Insurance.

TORONTO, April 8.—It does not appear as though any steps will be taken to organize a protest against the increase in fire insurance rates.

"It's no good making any protest," said the insurance manager of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association. "We have no power over the Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association; there is no legislation to control them. We are going to put the matter up to the Insurance committee of the C.M.A., but the probability is that they will decide that nothing can be done. It is not an entirely needless increase as there have been some very heavy losses, particularly in munition plants. I think, though, that the 50 per cent. increase for the privilege of working all night is certainly drastic."

Bad Weather Delays Huns

Germans Are Rehearsing Offensive Tactics — Transport Difficulties

SHELLING NEAR ARRAS

(United Press Service.)

1 O'clock Despatch:

(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, April 9.—Bad weather is delaying Hindenburg, not only because of difficulties of transport, but by the increasing hazards of further advance. Meanwhile the Germans are practising shooting and conducting barrage rehearsals. As this is cabled there is some shelling around in the Arras sector.

THERE WILL BE AN AUTO PARADE

On Tuesday Evening Next to Open the Big Motor Show.

The Motor Show under the auspices of the Red Cross in the Armouries is rapidly getting organized. It will be opened by a big motor parade which will run around the city and finish at the Armouries. There will be a thirty-piece orchestra in attendance every evening. Soloists, dancing and numerous forms of entertainment, one of which will be the Fashion Show, particulars of which we will tell you later.

WILL BE COAL SHORTAGE.

Prices at High Level Owing to Increased Railway Rates.

The price of coal in Toronto during the summer months will be the same as last winter's prices, namely, $9.75 to $10 per ton. The increase in freight rates both in the States and in Canada is responsible for this state of affairs. Last Thursday the American lines increased their rates for hauling from the mines to Suspension Bridge by 1 cent a ton, while in Canada an increase of 15 cents per ton has been levied since 20th March last.

The new fuel regulations have put a heavy restriction on those using over six tons of coal. These will have 30 per cent. of their normal supply cut off, while those whose requirements do not exceed six tons will be supplied in full.

On enquiry at the local coal office this morning The Telegram was informed that there was no great rush by buyers for cash for next season's coal supply. Messrs. P. Burns' manager is at present visiting the mines and no definite information could be obtained as to that firm's prospect for delivery of spring and summer requirements. Other firms say they can get sufficient coal to supply their customers. The opinion is generally expressed that there will be a serious shortage and it is not thought that the supplies from Alberta and British Columbia can be hauled here cheap enough.

"It is the great question of transportation," said Mr. W. G. Adams, of Yonge street north, "and it seems to me that it will be as little likely for the railway companies to haul coal from the west any better or cheaper than can be done from the Pennsylvania mines."

THE LANDING CONDEMNED

Entire Russian Press Denounces Landing of Japanese Troops —Soviet Troops to Resist

LANDINGS WERE LOCAL

(United Press Service.)

(By Joseph Shaplen.)

PETROGRAD, April 9.—The entire Russian press condemns the Japanese landing in Vladivostok, charging it is an attempt to destroy the Russian revolution, save foreign economic interests and prevent the spread of the revolution to Europe.

Even Cadet papers ridicule the announced reason for the landing. Some surprise is expressed regarding England's participation. The Bolsheviki press condemns Allied acquiescence.

TROOPS ON THE WAY.

The Government has rushed Soviet troops to Vladivostok, where there were proletariat street demonstrations against the Bourgeoise aiding the Japanese. Foreign Minister Tchitcherin received the allied representatives and protested against landings as a violation of Russian sovereignty, assailing the assigned causes for the landing. The delegation replied that the landings were local.

The government's proclamation declares the American government evidently did not participate in the landing, but that the situation is still not clear.

THE FRENCH COMMUNIQUE

No New Developments on the Western Front—British Official

Canadian Press Despatch:

PARIS, April 7.—(Official.)— Violent artillery fighting occurred during the night at various points north of Montdidier, and also between Montdidier and Noyon, it is announced officially. No infantry action developed.

The French advanced troops south of the Oise river and withdrew to prepared positions southwest of the lower forest of Coucy and south of Coucy Lechateau.

British Official.

LONDON, April 7.—This morning's official says: Early this morning the enemy's artillery developed great activity on a front extending from the Labassee Canal to south of Armentieres. Elsewhere on the British front, except for heavy hostile shelling in the neighbourhood of Villiers, Bretonneux and Mericocurt Labbee there was nothing special to report.

STUPENDOUS PROPAGANDA SIMULTANEOUS WITH HINDENBURG'S OFFENSIVE

German Troops Are Informed That Great Britain and France Are on the Brink of Collapse—A Desperate Game.

HANDBILLS FREELY USED

(United Press Service.)

Nine O'clock Despatch:

(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, April 9. — Simultaneous with Hindenburg's offensive, the most stupendous propaganda offensive against France, Great Britain and the United States is now going on. Its object is the splitting up of the countries and creating bad blood, while persuading German troops that Great Britain and France are on the brink of collapse and that America is a total failure as a war power.

There is abundant proof that Germany is playing the most desperate game with all scruples flung to the winds, not hesitating to use all means, physical or moral, to win.

Captured Documents.

Prisoners, naive admissions, captured documents, hand bills sent in balloons and items in German papers circulated among the German troops prove it to be powerfully organized.

A band of field propagandists told the German troops that the German offensive scared the United States witless, that panic was rampant in America, which had utterly failed to fulfil its war promises, and that the few Americans at the front were such poor soldiers the French and British wouldn't trust them.

Great Friction.

Similarly, alleged statements of British officers criticizing the French, and of the latter criticizing the British, were strewn everywhere in the attempt to create friction.

German prisoners admit they were told that the offensive means immediate peace, that the French and British are demoralized, and their governments tottering, that the allies were licked, and that America's knees were knocking.

"Colossal Anglo-French losses," the capture of booty causing a "dearth of allied ammunition," and the bombardment of Paris are all a part of this terrific scheme to boost German spirits and depress the allies.

GROCERS WILL MEET TO-MORROW NIGHT

Some Questions of Great Importance To Be Discussed

A news item in yesterday's paper stated that the grocers were to meet on the 17th. The meeting is to take place to-morrow night, the 10th, in the Y.M.C.A., and no doubt there will be a big attendance of grocers on hand. Now that the business is licensed and closely controlled by government regulations, situations are existing already that make it necessary for the grocers to get together and see how the new regulations may be met in order that the objects for which these regulations are made may be fully benefitted.

SILVER BULLETS FOR SALE AND EXPORT

Emergency War Measure Introduced by United States Senator

WASHINGTON, April 9.— Melting into bullets of not more than 25,000,000 silver dollars now in the treasury for sale and export to pay trade balances, and the repurchasing of silver at $1 an ounce is proposed in an administration bill introduced to-day by Senator Pittman of Nevada, as an emergency war measure. Silver certificates would be withdrawn from circulation as dollars are taken from the treasury and federal reserve bank notes of $1 and $2 denominations substituted.

Text Of The Order-In-Council Recalling Titles

The following radical recommendations to the imperial authorities, contained in an order-in-council already passed, were read in the house of commons last night by Sir Robert Borden:

(1)—No honour or titular distinction, saving those granted in recognition of military service during the present war or ordinarily bestowed by the sovereign, shall be conferred upon a British subject resident in Canada, except upon the advice of the prime minister of Canada.

(2)—The British Government shall exercise the same authority as hitherto in determining the character and number of titles to be allocated to Canada.

(3)—No hereditary title shall hereafter be conferred upon a British subject resident in Canada.

(4)—Appropriate action shall be taken by the government to provide that after a prescribed period no title held by a British subject, now or hereafter ordinarily resident in Canada, shall be recognized as having hereditary effect.

LONDON RUMOR OF NON-STOP FLIGHT FROM NEW YORK

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, April 9.—All London was talking to-day about the latest war rumour, the landing in England last night of an American airplane after a non-stop flight from New York with twelve passengers. The authorities declared there was no basis for the story, but this denial served merely to give it additional currency. According to the popular version this was the big surprise which Premier Lloyd George said last week that the Americans would soon give the Germans.

THE BELGIUM MAID AT THE EMPIRE

To be Seen To-Night For the Last Time.

A very pretty picture, and one that you would be bound to like, is appearing at the Empire to-night. It is entitled "The Belgium Maid," and depicts a few of the horrors of war through which the women of Belgium have passed.

Chapter 14 of "Who Is Number One," and Mutt and Jeff complete a very fine programme for to-night.

A LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE TO BE HELD IN THE CITY

A Leadership Conference Is To Be Held in the City Friday Evening, April 19th, and Saturday Morning, April 20th.

This conference will deal with the many features of Girls' Work, including Girls' Work in the Sunday School and its special organization and responsibility to leaders.

Different subjects on the work will be discussed and addresses delivered by competent speakers from out of the city who have had experience along the lines of this work.

All pastors, Sunday School superintendents and teachers of girls' classes, and those interested in Girls' Work are invited to attend this conference. Register at the Y.W.C.A. not later than April 18th, and have the benefit of this conference.

WON'T INTERFERE IN IRISH QUESTION

Would Embarrass a Co-Belligerent, Is Ruling.

WASHINGTON, April 9. — No public hearings are to be given on the many resolutions introduced in the House on the Irish question.

Chairman Flood of the Foreign Relations Committee has notified all those who have asked for hearings that there will be none because they would be an interference and an embarrassment to a co-belligerent of the United States.

CANADA HAS 108 TITLES

Cabinet's Intimation of Restrictions on Hereditary and Other Titles Focuses Attention on Canadian List

MR. NICKLE'S OPPOSITION

TORONTO, April 9.— In view of the intimation from Premier Borden last night in the Commons that the Government had passed an order-in-Council recommending to the Imperial authorities that no more hereditary titles be granted to Canada, and that those at present in existence be limited, and also because it is likely that even more startling developments in Canada's fight against titles may take place in the near future, it is interesting to note that the number of Canadians holding titles is now 108. This total is made up of:—

Peers and baronesses—6.
Baronets, resident in Canada—5.
Baronets, non-resident—4.
G.C.M.G.'s—3.
K.C.M.G.'s—29.
K.C.B.'s—6.
K.B.E's—3.
Knights Bachelor—52.

Sir Wm. McKenzie to-day stated that he would, willingly burn his title like Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

OTTAWA, April 8. — Hereditary titles may be abolished in Canada, and tites and honours of every description, save those granted in recognition of military service during the present war, may not in future be conferred upon residents of Canada, except with the approval or on the advice of the Prime minister of Canada.

Announcement to this effect was made in Parliament to-night by the Prime Minister, in the course of a debate on the resolution of Mr. W. F. Nickle (Kingston), praying that his Majesty the King may be graciously pleased to refrain from conferring any hereditary titles upon his subjects domiciled or living in Canada.

Already the Government, Sir Robert Borden announced during the debate to-day, has communicated to the British Government proposals that in future the royal prerogative be not exercised to confer any hereditary title upon a subject of his Majesty resident in Canada. This request was embodied in an order-in-Council which was passed by the Government on March 9th last, and which was approved by the Governor-General after correspondence with the Colonial Secretary, on March 25th. The Government, in the same order, further suggests that after a reasonable time the hereditary character of titles already borne by Canadians be extinguished, and that in future non-hereditary titles such as the Order of Knighthood, be conferred only with the approval and advice of the Canadian Government unless such honours are given for service during the present war, or by the Sovereign upon his own motion. Sir Robert expressed confidence that all these requests, except possibly that providing for the abolition of the hereditary character of existing titles, would be readily acceded to.

Fall Wheat Has Suffered From Frost Farmers Say

That a large acreage of the fall wheat crop in this district has been destroyed by frost was the rather gloomy assertion ex-Warden Robert Scott of Smith Township made to-day.

His information he stated referred particularly to Smith and Otonabee townships. For three weeks now the weather has been an almost unbroken succession of sunny days and cold frosty nights. Thus the ground was frozen at night and relaxed during the daytime. Alternately contracting and relaxing, the ground was heaved and the roots of the sprouting grain torn and exposed to the killing frost. Only in the protected fields or along fences has the crop escaped, Mr. Scott stated. His Otonabee informants are ex-Reeve Fife, Sam Redmond and others. The loss will be a severe one to farmers, Mr. Scott fears.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

TUESDAY, APRIL 9TH, 1918.

FRENCH CHEERFULNESS.

A feature of the latest news from France is the cheerful optimism which prevails among the French people, including the officials. There is every confidence in General Foch and in the army, and the attitude by the people of the war-stricken country is an object lesson to the pessimistic Canadian who finds only gloom in the war despatches. Premier Clemenceau is setting the example so successfully that he has earned the title of "Confidence Barometer." General Foch calmly advises the people to "wait a bit" when asked about the future, and other high officials are cheerful and optimistic about the outcome of the great battle.

"Germany's gains look like a fat, juicy pear to the newspaper reader," says one, "but the Kaiser knows how hollow it is."

"If it is no time for bragging and over-confidence neither is it the time for nervousness over little fluctuations in the battle fronts."

For Canada, too, there is the lesson that Paris is learning, and that is to neglect in the official communiques the smaller details, the significance of which appeal only to those having the whole situation before them.

"What has happened in this battle does not show on the map," says one French official. A very good thing for our people to understand.

ENFORCED IDLERS.

The Government measure against idleness, if properly administered, may be a proper step in the direction of efficiency, but there is a class of unemployed who are not covered by the regulations, and who should be the first consideration of the Government. We refer to the men who have fought for Canada overseas, and who now, crippled or broken in health have to be fitted back into life. Some of these men are forced to be idlers simply because they cannot find employment. We have them in Peterboro at the present moment, and their numbers are increasing each week as the transports bring back to our shores the men who have gone on to the great adventure, and who have been wounded by bullet or shell, poisoned with gas or incapacitated by ailments brought on by service.

The problem of finding employment for some of these men is a difficult one, and calls for a more vigorous policy than the Government has yet inaugurated. There is a certain amount of work to be had but, in the main, it is heavy labour, requiring the men who undertake it to be sound in body and in health. A man whose arm is crippled by machine gun bullets or whose condition of health makes heavy work impossible, cannot hope to successfully cope with such labour. Some have pluckily tried it, and have had to admit the task was too much for them. The Examiner knows a number of such cases, and unfortunately there will be many more in the days to come.

These men do not want to be idlers—some of them are married, and they desire to get work, and be in a position to properly support themselves and their families. Finding work that they can do seems however almost an impossible task, and the seriousness of the problem is that it will grow steadily worse, if the matter is not taken up as a national duty. The system of vocational training at present being carried on, does not go far enough. It seems to be a difficult thing for a returned man to be recommended for such training and in some of the courses the training given does not seem to be extensive enough to fit the man to take up the battle of civil life.

In the midst of our efforts to get men overseas, and to produce food for our allies, the government should not lose sight of the duty we owe to the men who have returned.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The editor of a Sault Ste. Marie paper published an article complaining that Canada was sending too many recruits overseas, and his paper was suspended. Henri Bourassa has maintained for nearly four years that Canada shouldn't send any recruits, and Le Devoir continues to draw money from the Government on advertising contracts.

A "special" despatch from Ottawa to a local paper says that Canada will never forget the twenty-one members of the House who stood up to support Col. Currie's motion for a debate on the Quebec situation. There is a lurking suspicion that one of the twenty-one wrote the despatch himself.

Selling real estate to the Germans at the price of fifty dead per acre, is the way that one French officer describes the battle for Amiens.

We have had wheatless, heatless, and meatless days, but there seems little chance of Peterboro experiencing any dustless days.

The Original Firsts will be returning soon. A send-off and a presentation would enable them to go back to France with the message that Peterboro appreciates her gallant sons of the Canadian army.

Germany is keeping the war news away from her troops but it is a safe venture that the soldiers who are facing the British and French have every reason to believe that the war is still going on.

The part that the Canadian cavalry has been taking in the defence of Amiens is evidenced by the casualties which are coming in. The Fort Garrys, Strathconas and Royal Canadian Dragoons had to wait a long time to show their ability as mounted men but they were ready when called upon.

51 TRESPASSERS ON C. P. R. HAVE PAID $234.00 TO THE CITY

"It's no pleasure for me to take money out of people but I have to enforce the law," said Magistrate Dumble this morning as he imposed the first fine on a new batch of the trespassers on the C.P.R., who had been apprehended by Mr. George Greenham, the railway's detective at Havelock.

The fines collected from trespassers up to this morning totalled $234.60, fifty-one having cashed in at $4.60 each. Five-dollar bills were flashed at Chief Thompson until his small store of silverware was exhausted. This morning's list of trespassers was as follows: Albert Birdgenau, Bruce Beatty, Miss Mary Houston, Miss Jennie Watt, Mrs. E. Murray, Albert Bonnie, Wm. J. Kennealey, Lawrence Gibson, Anthony Busby, Evans White, Harvey Little, Fred Convery, Andrew Armstrong, Carmen Asta, Edward Davey, W. H. Merrill, James Jackson, Mrs. Josie Farnell, Bert Hubbard, Benjamin Bingham, William Weaver, Robert Thorndyke, Fred Scriver.

WORK IS APPRECIATED.

Miss H. S. Peck, President of the Peterborough Progressive Club, has received the following, which speaks for itself.

Special Garrison Order

By Major-General S. B. Steel, K.C.M., G.C.B., M.V.O., Commanding the Troops, Shorncliffe, Kent., England.

On vacating this command on the 1st March, 1918, the G. O. C. desires to take the opportunity to bid farewell to all the troops stationed in this area, and to convey to all ranks his appreciation and thanks for their loyal support at all times.

The G. C. O. further desires to mention the good work which has been carried on by the Canadian Field Comforts Commission in providing material comforts for the troops overseas and in this area.

The work of the ladies of this commission cannot be appreciated too highly.

Individualized Spring Suits $25.00
Elegnat, Refined Types Possessing Individuality in Design and Style
One of the secrets of the difference in these and other suits is that while those at lower prices are made by moderately paid workers, these show the hand touches of a master-designer. The trimmings have been placed with an eye to beauty in every detail and each embellishment receives most careful consideration. For striking suits are not made with a high-priced material or abundant trimmings; it is the result of a MASTER-HAND. Fashioned of serge and the richest fabrics of the season. One of a kind—each trimmed to suit a woman of discriminating tastes and who insists on having everything of the finest.

Gloves
The New Shades
Whether in kid or silk, you will find a complete collection of the newest colors now on hand. For this very reason, it is wisdom itself to make selection now rather than delaying even for a week or two.

Of soft white nainsook and superior quality batiste; slip-over and loose styles. Embroidery trimmed.

Corset Covers 29c
At last we have a reliable corset cover to sell at 29c. Nicely trimmed and made of good nainsook.

Fruit Trimmed Hats $6.00
Each hat bewitchingly trimmed with the perkiest-looking fruit decorations you ever saw. At the same price also are shapes trimmed with flowers and feathers strikingly combined to lend the utmost charm to your new costume. There are the new shiny straws, the dull rough straws and practically all shapes.

Fine Cotton Hose 29c
Not seconds but full-fashioned, reinforced and the finest cotton hosiery we could buy in the market.
Good Ribbed Hose 49c
Of excellent cashmere, or strong boys maco cotton. Noted for wear, seamless feet and neat looking. Buy enough.
Batiste Corsets 89c
Made with four supporters, reinforced steels, in low bust style and neatly trimmed with lace. A Wednesday snap.
Big Overall Aprons 89c
Of washable dark-colored print. Trimmed with binding and pocket and belted back. A new shipment just in.

More Neckwear at 93c
There are not a thousand different styles here—nearly. But you can select 20 or even two dozen and have them different from each other and you'll not find them being worn by most every other woman on the street either, for styles are rarely—very rarely—duplicated here.

ELLIOT'S STORE

HIGHER TAXES.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Having noticed by the reports of the City Council that the hotelkeepers are asking to be exempt from paying taxes, I would like to ask who is going to pay these taxes if the hotelkeepers are exempt. A fixed amount of money has to be raised each year by taxes, and if the hotels do not pay their share, then the other ratepayers will have to pay the hotelkeepers' taxes as well as their own.

Just wait till the tax bills are delivered this year and there will be lots of kicking without adding to the amount by letting the hotelkeepers off free.

The taxes are going to be away higher this year than they were last, and next year they will be higher still, as in addition to our regular taxes anl taxes for patriotic purposes, we will also have a big tax for the new high level bridge to Ashburnham, and quite likely another and still heavier tax for the outfall sewer.

If the Council have any notion whatever of letting the hotelkeepers off without paying taxes, I would suggest that the ratepayers be given a chance to vote on this question, and if they are permitted to do this the answer will be so emphatic that no one will mistake its meaning.

TAXPAYER.

Mayor Duncan, City.

Your Worship,—During the past week about seventy-five citizens, mostly workmen of our fair city, who have never before been hailed to the Police Court as offenders against existing laws, have been summoned, through the instigation of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company officials, and forced to pay the sum of $4.60 for trespass on the Company's tracks.

Undoubtedly, the Railway Company is within its rights in forcing obedience to the letter of the law in this manner; they surely have the interests of the people paramount in their minds, ever solicitous for the people's welfare and safety, to say nothing of their good will. We appreciate the fact also that the Railway Company is ever anxious for its own interests and protection against damages.

Our city is traversed by numerous branches of Railway Lines; the south end in particular, where most of the factories are located, is almost a net work of railroad tracks. It necessarily follows that there must be a great number of places where the railway and high roads intersect, in other words, railway crossings. In the absence of necessary protection and trespass signs at these points, and in view of the fact that the lines generally cut diagonally across from one street to the next, the situation really resolves itself into the fact that the lines are really inviting short cuts to pedestrians.

As pointed out above there is absolutely no protection for vehicles and wayfarers at these crossings, not much more so than upon the tracks, themselves, and now that the Railway Company have so fittingly demonstrated their desire to save life, the time seems most opportune, if they are consistent in their methods, when the question of crossing protection should be vigorously taken up and something done at once to relieve the situation, and prevent in, so far as possible, the danger of loss of life at these junctures within the city limits.

This is an obligation on all Railway Companies, in all well regulated cities, and our city should be placed in the well regulated class.

The writer has tried to voice the sentiments of a great many on this important question, and is taking the liberty of having this letter published in the Examiner, hoping we may have your comments either through the press or in Council assembled.

Yours obediently,
F. E. CONVERY.

MUSIC AS RECREATION

Recreation is essential for the health and well-being of the family, and music is essential for a recreation that is totally relaxing and instructive.

Are you doing without music in the home because no one plays? In these days of marvelous inventions, that is no excuse for the lack of music.

There are people who have been wise enough to purchase player-pianos, organs and phonographs, slightly used, therefore cheaper, by securing them through Heintzman Hall, Peterborough, Royal Bank Buildings, Hunter Street.—B. H. Britton, Manager. 'Phone 250.

Oddfellows Held A Field Night

Millbrook, Lakefield and Other District Lodges Represented—Degrees Conferred

Field night at the Oddfellows' Hall was an affair attended by most satisfactory results to the Peterborough and Otonabee Lodges. About 125 of the brethren attended. The district lodges were represented by nine members from Millbrook, six from Lakefield and nine from Pontypool. Mr. T. C. Elliot occupied the chair.

Conferred Degrees.

The Otonabee Lodge No. 13 conferred the first degree to a number of members, Peterborough Lodge No. 111 the second and the combined lodges the third degree.

The Toasts.

The toast list was:

"The King," proposed by the chairman.

"The Grand Lodge," proposed by B. Watts, P.D.D.G.M., responded to by J. H. Vallery, D.D.G.M.

"The Visiting Brethren," proposed by Ald. R. J. Jones, responded to by Brother Bentley.

"The Empire," proposed by T. C. Elliot, responded to by Capt. McNab.

"Absent Brethren," proposed by T. Sills.

"District Committee," proposed by R. Reid, responded to by R. Hillier.

The Speeches.

Brother T. Pacey, Noble Grand of Otonabee Lodge No. 13, made a few fitting remarks on the success of the lodges, while Brother R. Reid, Noble Grand of Peterborough Lodge No. 111 spoke of the work accomplished and the bright prospects.

Dainty refreshments were served by T. H. Hooper who catered for the occasion.

The evening wound up with God Save the King.

THE WORK THE Y.M.C.A. DOES AT THE FRONT

Copy of a Letter of Appreciation From the Adjutant-General

That the Y.M.C.A. has done a great work for the boys overseas is generally admitted and high praise is given the organization for its efficiency by men who know. As an additional acknowledgment the following letter from Adjutant General Ashton will be read with satisfaction by those who are contributing and supporting in every way the Y.M.C.A. work at the front Full value is received for every dollar expended.

Adjutant-General's Office,
Military Headquarters,
Ottawa Canada,
March 28, 1918.

John Brown, Jr.,
General Supervisor
Y.M.C.A. Military Work,
Toronto.

Dear Sir,—I am glad to have the opportunity of expressing my deep appreciation of the splendid work of the Y.M.C.A. at home and overseas. The opportunities furnished the men for rest, recreation and education in your huts, the facilities for letter writing and encouragement to keep up correspondence with their homes, the organization of concerts, and the direction of sports have had a wonderful effect in keeping up the spirits of the men and in maintaining a high moral tone throughout the force.

I do not know of any men who have shown greater self sacrifice and devotion to duty than have your officers overseas, and from close association with your work have reason to know that every dollar entrusted to your care is wisely and usefully expended. The profits of sales in your institutions are all turned in towards expenses, but go a very small way towards carrying on the work which cannot be maintained without strong financial support in the form of voluntary subscriptions.

Sincerely yours,
(Sgd.) E. C. Ashton,
Adjutant-General.

Promotion To Rank Of General To Be By Selection

(Canadian Press.)

London, April 9.—King George has signed a Royal warrant providing that promotion to the rank of General shall be by selection instead of by seniority.

Bishop Advocating Greater Production

Few opportunities of exhorting his congregation to prepare for a season of Greater Production have been overlooked by His Lordship Bishop O'Brien. On Sunday he spoke on the part that the school children are expected to play. The schools would as they had done last year, assist in placing the children where they would be most needed.

Glad Play From Glad Books

"Pollyanna," a comedy of good cheer has been brought to the stage by Klaw & Erlanger and George C. Tyler, just at an opportune time when playgoers are surfeited with morbid themes and wearied by a long procession of crooks, detectives, and hectic exponents of the sex triangle, Optimism was never more needed than now in the world's affairs and the amusement of the people. It is a tremendously popular play that Catherine Chisholm Cushing has fashioned from the rapid-selling stories by Eleanor H. Porter, read by hundreds of thousands, young and grown-up. The comedy is best enjoyed by men and women of experience and understanding. "Pollyanna" will be seen at the Grand Saturday, matinee and night acted by the original and only company, including Patricia Collinge, Oswald Yorke, Beatrice Morgan, Jos. Jefferson, Helen Weathersby, Mattie Ferguson, Maud Hosford, Stephen Davis, Harry Barfoot and Selma Hall, whose names and achievements are familiar to every sophisticated theatregoer.

GREATEST RULE OF HEALTH

With all their differences in regard to disease, its cause and treatment, doctors are of one mind in regard to the one greatest rule of health, viz: "Daily movement of the Bowels." Unnumbered thousands of people suffer almost continuously as the result of constipation who could be readily cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Music & Drama

GUS HILL'S MINSTRELS.

Gus Hill's big minstrels scored heavily in their first visit to Peterborough last night, a large audience enjoying the appearance of the talented singers, dancers and comedians at the Grand. Ornate stage settings, smart costumes, a splendid orchestra, a cast of soloists who knew how to use their voices, and dancers who knew how to use their feet, funny comedians and clever vaudeville artists combined to make the performance a bright, snappy, and altogether meritorious one. The veteran minstrel Geo. Wilson of "Waltz Me Again" fame, and Eddie Mazier, a comparative new comer to the burnt-cork kingdom, were the principal funmakers, and although different in method, both were successful in convulsing the audience. Wilson had a monologue on "Topics of the Day" that was a scream, and Mazier's jokes were cleverly delivered. He informed the audience that he was getting some barbed wire to knit a sweater for the Kaiser.

The musical Cates showed themselves wizards with the saxaphone and xylophone, their work being a feature of the olio.

Patriotic numbers played a big part in the programme, the scenes on board the United States transport, and on the U. S. battleship Alabama, being a striking feature.

Another big number was the mammoth song and dance sketch, "Scenes in Blackville," in which nearly all the members of the cast had an opportunity of showing their dancing ability.

The first part was replete with good solo numbers by Jack McShane, Thos. Hughes, W. H. Thompson, John P. Rodgers, and John Burke.

The whole performance was most successful and a return engagement would be welcomed.

Children Had Whooping Cough

Whooping cough, although specially a disease of childhood, is by no means confined to that period, but may occur at any time of life. It is one of the most dangerous diseases of infancy, and yearly causes more deaths than scarlet fever, typhoid or diphtheria, and is more common in female than male children.

Whooping cough starts with sneezing, watering of the eyes, irritation of the throat, feverishness and cough. The coughing attacks occur frequently, but are generally more severe at night.

On the first sign of a "whoop" Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup should be administered, as it helps to clear the bronchial tubes of the collected mucous and phlegm.

Mrs. George Cooper, Bloomfield, Ont., writes: "It is with pleasure I can write and tell you that there never was a better cough medicine made than Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Our children had whooping cough last winter, and that is the only thing that seemed to help them. It loosens up the phlegm so that they could raise it easily. I will never be without it."

"Dr. Wood's" is 25c. and 50c. a bottle; put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; manufactured by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

PRESENTATION TO MR. HENRY GREENE

Mr Greene has Completed a Quarter of Century of Service with J. J. Turner Company.

After twenty five years of faithful service with the J. J. Turner Company, Mr. Henry Greene, "Greeneoak," 302 Perry street, has retired into private life, and it was in recognition of this that the Messrs. J. J., Reginald, Achilles and Webber Turner, surprised him at his home yesterday afternoon, to present him with a handsome illuminated address, the work of J. Kennett:

THE ADDRESS.

To Mr. Henry Greene:

In connection with your retirement from business activities, we feel that we could not allow this to pass after 25 years of faithful service with the firm, without expressing our deep appreciation of the same.

You have been so long connected with the business, first as a traveller, and we might add, the first sent out on the road canvassing orders for of the success of the business is due to the energetic and faithful manner in which you worked.

Later on, as the business developed it was found necessary to have additional help in the office, you took charge of the books, a duty which you preformed in a most creditable manner both as regards neatness and accuracy.

Being so long around the establishment you naturally not only watched the business develop but have also watched particularly the younger members of the firm grow up with the business. This has all tended to bind us together, and so much so in fact that we have always felt you were one of us.

In recognition of your long and faithful service we would ask you to accept the accompanying gift to show our appreciation in some small way of the esteem in which you are held by the members of the firm.

That you will be spared to have many years of health and comfort, and when the "evening shadows fall" may happy memories of the days spent with us, crown your years with gladness, is the ardent wish of

J. J. TURNER, JR.,
ACHILLES TURNER,
REGINALD TURNER,
WEBBER TURNER.

Peterboro, February 1, 1918.

The address was accompanied by a presentation of a handsomely bound leather case containing $100 in gold (five $20 gold pieces) one from each of the Turner boys, and the fifth in memory of Mr. J. J. Turner, Sr.

MR. GREENE'S REPLY.

To the address and presentation Mr. Greene, after expressing himself as overcome by surprise, made a gracious reply to the address, and assured the Messrs. Turner that his connection with the firm had always been of the happiest order.

FALL WHEAT IS "COMING THROUGH FINE," SAY THE FARMERS.

Lindsay, April 9. — In conversation with farmers from different sections of the country in respect to the outcome of the winter crops the verdict is that fall wheat when sown appears to be coming through quite safe so far but that clover and crops of that nature are not so very promising except where sown in favored places. A warm rain no doubt would greatly help in restoring these crops.

As yet very little work is being done on the land.

The great lament with the farmers is the scarcity of help and the average wages offered is from $45 to $50 per month.

Another Son On Casualty List

Pte. Gordon Hartshorn Has Been Wounded—His Brother Was Reported Ill Yesterday

Yesterday Mrs S. Hartshorn, 496 Patterson street, received word from Ottawa that her son, Pte. Herbert W. Hartshorn, former Company Sergeant-Major, of A Company of the 93rd Battalion, had been wounded. To-day another message from Ottawa conveyed the information that her youngest son, Pte. Gordon Hartshorn had also been wounded in the recent fighting. Like his brother, Pte. Gordon Hartshorn enlisted here in the 93rd Battalion and went overseas as a member of the Paymaster's staff, afterwards being transferred to another Canadian battalion in France.

The two are brothers of Mr. Fred Hartshorn, well known for his work in "A Greek Slave," and other amateur productions.

MEXICAN RAN AMUCK, DEAD.

PITTSBURG, Pa., April 9.—Carmino Carizo, a Mexican, was shot and killed in the Pennsylvania Station here by a railroad policeman, after he had terrorized passengers on the Chicago and Pittsburg express train over the Pan-Handle Railroad.

IN MEMORIAM

In ever loving memory of Private Harry Clappison, killed on April 9.
We mourn in silence and sorrow unseen,
And dwell in the memory of days that have been.
—From his Loving Wife and Children.

In loving memory of Eddie, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. William Saxby, who died Easter Monday, April 9, 1917, aged 13 years.
He is not dead—the child of our affection,
But gone into that school,
Where he no longer needs our poor protection,
And Christ Himself doth rule.

In memory of my beloved husband, the late Pte. John Jinks, who fell at Vimy Ridge, one year ago, on April 9th, 1917.
Asleep in Jesus! Blessed sleep!
From which none ever wakes to weep;
A calm and undisturbed repose
Unbroken by the last of foes.
"Gone but not forgotten." From his affectionate wife and child.

Of Private Percy Mann, aged nineteen years, beloved son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Mann, killed in action at the Battle of Vimy Ridge, April 9, 1917:
"Gone but not forgotten"
In Foreign Fields.
In a far and silent graveyard,
Where the trees their branches wave,
Lies a loving son and brother,
In his cold and silent grave.

We think of him in silence,
And his name we often call,
But there's nothing left to answer,
We could not stand beside him
To hear his last farewell;
And not a word of comfort
From those who loved him well.

Often we pause and think of him
And think of how he died;
To think we could not say goodbye,
Before he closed his eyes.
Inserted by the family.

KENNEDY—In loving memory of Pte. M. S. Kennedy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dawson Kennedy, of this city; killed in action at Vimy Ridge, April 9, 1917.—Parents and Family.

In loving memory of John Simmons, who died April 7th, 1913.

No doubt he oft was weary,
With the toiling of the day;
With God's entrusted duties
Still working, yet time to pray.

Yet again we hope to meet thee
When the day of life hath fled,
And with joy to greet thee
When no farewell tears are shed.
—His Wife.

93RD BATTALION

SOLDIER DEAD

Mrs. John Hendren of Norwood, has been officially notified that her son, Private John Carn Hendren, a member of the 93rd Battalion, died at Casualty Clearing Station No. 57, April 2nd, of pneumonia. The deceased was a son of Mr. and Mrs. John Hendren, of Norwood.

PAINS QUIT! BACK-SORENESS GOES! TORTUROUS LUMBAGO CURED BY "NERVILINE"

This Wonderful Curative Liniment Has Almost Magical Powers

You can compare a congestive pain to a little fire. When congestion smoulders, pain comes and goes. Congestion grows into inflammation, but pain, now intense, grows excruciating, and stays, too. There is an absolute antidote of pain—it is Nerviline.

Now to you, perhaps is Nerviline, but known well in many lands as the most penetrating and pain-subduing pain remedy ever discovered. Not oily or ill-smelling, but pleasant—it rubs on. Not temporary action, but permanent in its control of pain.

Not an ache or a pain anywhere that it cannot reach. No soreness or strain that it has not the power to relieve.

Nerviline is the only remedy in the world sold under guarantee—if it does not relieve you, you get your money back. Proof enough that Nerviline is a remedy that will fulfill absolutely every requirement of a pain-reliever, both for internal and external use.

Backache it cures like magic. For rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, neuralgia, stiffness, sprains or strains, it is the only thing. Large bottle 25 cents; at druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

Dr. Hammond Is President Of The Lawn Bowling Club

The Lawn Bowling Club held their annual meeting in Mr. J. E. A. Fitzgerald's office last night.

The following officers and committees were elected:

Past President—T. Brightman.
President—Dr. Hammond.
Vice-President—W. J. Oke.
Sec.-Treas.—E. Walton.
Green Com.—W. J. Oke.
Games Com. and Publicity Com.—T. C. Elliot.

All the above mentioned members form the executive.

The annual fee was fixed at $5.00. This is the total expense for the members for the season. New members do not need to purchase bowls. In fact it would not be wise to do so the first year, as it needs some time to know just the kind of bowl that would be most suitable.

GOLF NEWS

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Golf and County Club will be held this evening. Officers will be elected and other general business disposed of.

• • •

Over 3,000 golfers throughout the Dominion of Canada are in khaki, and over 200 have paid the "supreme sacrifice." There is not a young man of fit, fighting age playing the game, but in spite of all this the clubs almost without an exception can show an increased membership for last season.

• • •

So far what promises to be the outstanding feature of the golf season in Canada in 1918, is the formation of a Seniors' Association. Mr. W. R. Baker, C.V.O., president of the Royal Montreal, has called a meeting at the Royal Montreal on Saturday, May 18th, for organization purposes. All the leading clubs in the Royal Canadian Golf Association have been asked to send delegates.

Military Honours For Corp. Dawkins

Miss L. Booth of this city has received word that Corp. Barry Dawkins has been awarded the "Croix de Guerre" and the Military Medal. Dawkins enlisted in the 59th Battalion and was transferred to the 38th Battalion. He was severely wounded about a year ago but subsequently returned to the trenches.

Alimony Case To Be Heard Monday

Two actions have been filed with Registrar Sherry for the non-Jury Sessions of the Supreme Court with Mr. Justice Middleton presiding here next Tuesday. Mrs. Maye Kingsley, wife of Ed. J. Kingsley, G.T.R. train despatcher, Lindsay, is bringing suit for alimony, alleging cruel treatment. Moore and Wearing are counsel for the plaintiff.

Mr. M. Carton, real estate dealer, is the plaintiff in the other action which asks the court to declare that the defendants have forfeited all rights to part of lot 10, N. Charlotte street, and W. George street, extending westerly 147 feet. The defendants are Abraham Low of Peterborough, Fanny Eisenberg of Toronto, Mandel Mandel, Sisuan Mandel and Samuel Brenzel, merchants in Toronto, and Max Mandel, formerly of Toronto, and now a soldier in the Russian army.

Cash-and-Carry Plan AT JOHN MERVIN'S
Meat Shop 234 Hunter Street

On and after this date, we will conduct our Meat Business on the Cash-and-Carry Plan. This will mean much to our patrons in dollars and cents, as they will now be able to buy their Meats from us at from TWO to THREE CENTS LESS per pound.

It costs money to say "Charge It," in the meat business, and deliver it too. But cash means lowest prices to you and puts us in a position to secure supplies which spot cash always commands.

Our customers can also help us to cut down the delivery business by carrying all small parcels.

MONTREAL MEN APPREHENDED BY THE PETERBOROUGH POLICE

Are Accused of Stealing—Several Ennismore Homes Entered—Those Entered in the City.

WERE REMANDED

Edmund Gaulin and Roland Laramer, the Montreal thieves, appeared this morning at 9.30 before County Magistrate Langley and, on pleading guilty to the charges laid against them, were remanded for a week for trial.

On Sunday morning Gaulin and Laramer entered the home of George McMurney, lot 8 concession 9, Ennismore, and stole two gold watches and a suit of clothes. They next entered Dan Costello's home, lot 6, concession 9, where they stole a gold watch and $3.60 cash. The occupants of both houses passed the thieves on their way to church.

After robbing the houses Gaulin and Laramer drove up through Gannon's Narrows, Buckhorn and Lakefield, on their way disposing of a watch in exchange for a whip to a farmer who has not yet been located.

The men admitted having stolen the articles mentioned, but denied the theft of a $50 ring from McMurney.

The horse and carriage they used were traced and found to have stolen from a farmer near Brampton.

The arrest of the two was accomplished through High Constable Moore and the city police.

Were Run to Earth Here.

Chief Thompson's men had been notified to keep a lookout for the young strangers, and about five o'clock yesterday afternoon, Sergt. Reid received a telephone message from the proprietor of a livery stable stating that he had seen two strangers driving west on Brock street. Luck played into Sergt. Reid's hands. When he rushed out of the station he saw Sergt. Blade, who was off duty, driving past in his automobile. Together they sped to Brock street, but there was no buggy in sight. They drove up Aylmer to McDonnell street, where they caught sight of a carriage out near G. Walter Green's factory. The chase led up Park street to London and thence east. One of the men had stood up in the buggy to give directions to his pal who was driving, but they were overhauled on London street. Sergt. Blade drove his car abreast of the horse and turned sharply across the road blocking the road. He jumped out on one side and Sergt. Reid on the other. It was all over in a few seconds. Gaulin and Laramer were handcuffed and driven to the police station.

According to the police reports, the Ennismore homes were broken into while their owners were attending mass at St. Martin's church.

Sergt. Kidd stated that the horse and buggy belonged to Wm. McClure of Brampton.

Another Twenty Millions For The Canadian Northern

The Government Has Already Paid Over Twenty-five Millions—Denies System Has Been Taken Over

(Special to Examiner.)

Ottawa, April 9.—The government has issued a statement on the Canadian Northern Railway situation which asserts that no part of the system has as yet been taken over, and denies rumors that the government has been paying bond coupons or notes for the Canadian Northern or its subsidiaries. The government has, however, paid twenty five millions to the C.N.R, which has been utilized as follows:

Reducing construction loans, $3,550,000; equipment, $6,051,502; interest and sinking fund on mortgage securities, $15,398,498.

This is in addition to $853,894 cash subsidies paid last December, and a payment of $1,867,858 made under guarantee acts.

The comparatively small amount of $25,000,000 which has been spent for rolling stock and equipment, indicates that an additional sum will be asked from Parliament later this year, as the twenty-five millions already in the estimates is exhausted, and the greater part of the required rolling stock still unbought.

Unofficial conjectures name $25,000,000 as the further sum which will be required for C.N.R. equipment within a measurable time.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

Lansdowne's League.

(Toronto Star.)

Lord Lansdowne favours a league of nations after the war, but he would include the Central Empires. But wouldn't this be like starting a police force and letting the burglars wear its uniform?

Germany's Holy War.

(St. Louis Post-Dispatch.)

Jerusalem, Bagdad and Mecca — the three holy cities of Islam—are all in the hands of the allies. This is the entente's answer to the holy war that Germany sought to foment in the Mohammedan possessions of Great Britain and France.

"Our Flags."

(London Canadian Gazette.)

The following is an impromptu verse, composed and recited at the Rotary club by Lieut.-Colonel Bullock of the Canadian forces, on America's part in the war:

Your flag and my flag! How proud they float to-day
O'er your land an my land and half the world away.
Sky blue—the true blue—and stripes of red and white—
Saints' cross and knights' cross, aglow with glory bright,
Hail proud flags—our own flags!
Hail flags—our own flags!
Hail flags of nations free!
For no flags like our flags
Nok float o'er land or sea.

A Fit Subject For Hemp.

(New York Herald.)

A German, who says he is one of the kaiser's men and is proud of it, and who boasts that the German and Austrian spy system "already has this country beaten," deserves some special consideration at the hands of the responsible authorities of the American Government. If he is, as he is described, a "dangerous enemy," he should be put beyond the danger zone without delay. Neither internment nor imprisonment is good enough for him. Mr. Gerard's suggestion about lamp posts fits. A gallows is a good substitute.

Get After Le Devoir!

(Kingston Standard.)

Le Devoir, with its inflammatory articles, continues to be published each day but the Government did not hesitate an instant to suppress a poor little weekly in Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., because it breathed above a whisper about certain things. Bourassa, however, can howl himself black in the face and make all sorts of disloyal utterances in his newspaper, but in respect to his case the authorities at Ottawa seem to have so acute an attack of myopia and astigmatism that it is strongly suggestive of total blindness.

One Unfortunate Thing.

(Arkansas Gazette.)

In the saving of daylight we can set the clock ahead, but what are we going to do with the sun-dials?

Nothing on Russia.

(Bonner Springs Chieftain.)

This office has a motor which makes two thousand revolutions a minute, but at that we have nothing on Russia.

Moving Pictures Of Canadian Water Powers

The Engineers' Club of Peterborough has procured from the Dominion Water Power Branch of the Department of the Interior at Ottawa the moving picture films illustrating the "Water Powers of Canada." These will be shown at the "Empire Theatre," Charlotte street, on Thursday, April 11th, at 5:30 p.m. No admission fee will be charged.

These films cover the beautiful mountain lake storage systems of the great British Columbia water powers, together with pictures of the power houses, generators, means of transmitting and distributing and pictures of the cities served and other interesting features. The Vancouver Power Company, Lake Buntzen, The Western Canal Power Company showing agricultural applications as milking, hatching chickens, and other applications; the Bow River Development in the Rocky Mountains, Lake Louise, Banff, and the Calgary Power Company, with views of the cities and other applications are shown.

The Winnipeg River Developments and the City of Winnipeg are included.

The Quebec Developments, including the Richilieu River, the Lachine Rapids, Cedar Rapids, St. Timothe, Shawinigan Falls, Grand Mere, Montreal City, and others will be illustrated.

These pictures are as interesting from the scenic as from the engineering standpoint. The Government has employed the highest artistic and technical skill in preparing these pictures to illustrate the wonderful facilities already developed and capable of future development for producing electricity for the industries, municipalities and homes of Canada. A large part of the machinery and equipment of these water power developments was designed by Peterborough engineers and built by Peterborough mechanics in Peterborough factories.

As these pictures will interest many outside the engineering profession, the Club cordially invites the public, ladies as well as gentlemen, to attend this exhibition. The pictures will run from 5:30 to about 7 p.m.

After the pictures a Club dinner will be held at the Empress Hotel at 7:30, to be followed by a meeting in the hotel parlours at 8:30. A paper on "Canadian Water Powers and their Relation to the Fuel Situation" by Mr. J. B. Challies, M. Can. Soc. E.E., superintendent Dominion Water Power Branch, of the Department of the Interior will be read by the Honorary President of the Club, Mr. R. B. Rogers. This paper was presented by Mr. Challies last week before the Canadian Society in Toronto. Engineers and others interested in this branch of the subject of Water Powers are invited to attend the dinner and evening meeting.

Turks Pay $5 For A Loaf Of Bread

ROME, April 9—Berne reports that Constantinople is reduced to economic ruin. The Germans, with the consent of prominent young Turks, have requisitioned the food, while uncontrolled speculation renders the city the dearest in the world to live in. A two-pound loaf of bread costs $5, meat is $4 a pound, flour $5, potatoes $2, butter $16 and sugar $10. Eggs are rare at 50 cents apiece, chickens are $9 each, and shoes from $100 to $200 a pair. A man's suit costs from $300 to $400.

LARGE ATTENDANCE AT GEORGE STREET
There was a large attendance last night at the opening meeting of the special services in the George Street Methodist Church.
The indications are that as the interest grows, the school room will hardly be able to accommodate the people.
Rev. Mr. Crookshanks was the speaker last evening, his text being "Be Filled With the Spirit."
A bright song service will be held each night at 7:45.

May Consolidate Power Companies

SUCH A MOVE WOULD DOUBLE POWER OUTPUT.

(Special to Examiner.)

Washington, April 9—Consolidation of Niagara Falls Hydro Electric Power Companies to relieve the power shortage for power industries at Buffalo, is being urged by the officials of the War Industries Board and the War Department, it was learned today. In the event of the amalgamation of the two leading power companies there would be more than double the present capacity of 250,000 horse power, it was stated.

MOVEMENT TO SUPPLY FARMERS WITH LABOURERS

Dr. W. A. Riddell Head of the Resources Committee Will go Out on a Farm for a Period of Two Weeks—Cheap Railway Rates

(Special to The Examiner.)

Toronto, April 9. — Dr. W. A. Riddell, head of the Provincial Organization of Resources Committee, will don overalls and go out on an Ontario farm as a farm laborer for a period of two weeks, during the coming summer. He will with the use of a fictitious name and proper disguise in the way of clothing, conceal himself from identity as the head of the big movement for the suppying of farm labor to the farmers of the province, and in furtherance of the campaign for greater production.

The farmer who is fortunate enough to engage Riddell's services will not get an inexperienced man, for Dr. Riddell worked for many years upon his father's farm in southern Manitoba before he received his university training and gained distinction as an expert advisor in industrial problems affecting Dominion. Dr. Riddell by his decision will have an opportunity of studying the farm labor problem at close range, and getting in closer touch with the situation as it affects both the farmer and the farm laborer.

RAILWAY RATES.

A meeting of Eastern Canada Passenger Agents Association is being held at Montreal to-day at which a decision will be reached as to the railway rates to be allowed farm laborers sent from the cities to the farms of Ontario. Last year a single fare return rate was allowed.

Dr. Riddell, who has just returned from Montreal, where he interviewed the railway officials, declared to-day he expected quite as good a rate as last year. He expects 7500 men will be sent to Ontario farms between July 1 this year as compared with 2500 up to that date last year.

Medals for Cavalrymen.

Since April 1, 1917, the Canadian cavalry in France has received no less than one hundred awards for deeds of gallantry, according to information received by the Militia Department from overseas. The list of awards includes two Victoria Crosses, one C.M.G. (Commander of the Order of St. Michael and St. George), four Distinguished Service Orders, twenty Military Crosses, twelve Distinguished Conduct Medals, fifty-two Military Medals, four French decorations, and four mentioned in despatches. The officer awarded the C.M.G. is Brig.-Gen. J. B. Seeley, C.B., D.S.O., and the two officers who won the Victoria Cross are Lieut. F. M. W. Harvey and Lieut. H. Strachan, M.C. Previous to April 1, 1917, Canadian cavalry had received 45 honors.

Sir Charles M. Cavanagh, officer commanding the British Cavalry Corps in France, declares the Canadians proved themselves "a fine fighting brigade," and that there was no regular brigade in the corps which he regards more highly.

Interior Adornment.

"What has become of my cherry cream?" cried Mrs. Subbub.

"Your cherry cream?" repeated the cook.

"Yes, my complexion cream."

"I thought that was some fancy paste you got for the party last night, so I spread it on the sandwiches!"

GRAIN MARKET

The demand for cash oats apparently slackened a little yesterday, the market declining about 5-8c. from Monday's prices. Receipts, however, continue to be light at country points, the farmers being busy on the land. Barley is weak, particularly in the local market, recent buyers in this market now being well supplied. Car lots at outside points are quoted at $1.70, but smaller lots, city delivery, are quoted 8c. under that price. Rye and buckwheat continue in good demand at firm prices.

Manitoba wheat —No. 1 northern, $2.23 1-2; No. 2, $2.20 1-2; No. 3, $2.17 1-2; No. 4, $2.10 1-4, including 2 1-2 cent tax, in store, Fort William.

Manitoba oats — No. 2 C. W., 95 5-8c.; No. 3 91 5-8c.; extra No. 1 feed, 90 7-8c.; No. 1 feed, 88 5-8c., in store, Fort William.

American corn—No. 3 kiln dried, U.S.A. War Board prohibits importation.

Ontario oats—No. 2 white, 93c. to 94c., nominal; No. 3 white, 92c. to 93c.

Barley—Malting, $1.68 to $170.

Ontario wheat—No. 2 winter, $2.22, basis in store Montreal.

Peas—No. 2, $3.60 to $3.70, according to freights outside.

Buckwheat—$1.83 to $1.85.

Rye—No. 2, $2.60.

Manitoba flour—War quality, $11.10, Toronto, new bags.

Ontario flour—War quality, $10.70, Toronto-Montreal, $10.70, new bags.

Millfeed—Car lots, delivered, Montreal; shorts, $40.40; bran, $35.40; feed flour, not quoted; middlings, not quoted.

Hay—Baled, track, Toronto, car lots, No. 1, $17 to $18; No. 2, $14 to $16; mixed, $13 to $16; straw, car lots, $8.50 to $9.

NOTHING CAN COMPARE WITH IT

Mr. Fred Adams, New Rose N.S., writes—"I have tried many medicines for coughs and colds but never found anything to compare to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. We have had the greatest never fails to relieve a cough and loosen satisfaction with this medicine for it it up."

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards—Receipts, 47 cars, with 689 cattle, 642 calves, 636 hogs and 89 sheep and lambs.

Market was good and firm at Monday's prices. Choicest heavy steers again sold at $13 for another full load, and good to choice butcher steers and heifers firm at $11.75 to 12.

Cows firm at $9.50 to $10.50 for choice.

Bulls firm.

Sheep and lambs firm, but still very few offering.

The hog market is weaker, and from 50c. to 75c. lower. One or two sales were completed at a dollar lower, or $20 fed, the price the packers are bidding, but shippers were slow to settle at that figure.

YOU CAN TELL THE PEOPLE WHO HAVE IRON IN THEIR BLOOD STRONG, HEALTHY, VIGOROUS FOLKS

City Physician Says Ordinary Nuxated Iron Will Increase the Strength of Nervous, Run-down People in Two Weeks' Time in Many Cases.

ONE glance is enough to tell which people have iron in their blood. They are the ones that do and dare. The others are in the weakling class. Sleepless nights spent worrying over supposed ailments, constant dosing with habit-forming drugs and narcotics and useless attempts to brace up with strong coffee or other stimulants are what keep them suffering and vainly longing to be strong. Their real trouble is lack of iron in the blood. Without iron the blood has no power to change food into living tissue and therefore, nothing you eat does you good; you don't get the strength out of it. When iron is supplied it enriches the impoverished blood and gives the body greater resistance to ward off disease. Numbers of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while have most astonishingly increased their strength and endurance simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this, after they had in some cases been going on for months without getting benefit from anything.

If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test—See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. There is nothing like good old iron to help put colour in your cheeks and sound, healthy ashy on your bones. But you must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like Nuxated Iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless.

Manufacturers' Note: Nuxated Iron recommended above is one of the newer organic iron compounds. Unlike the older inorganic products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed in this city by McDermid & Jury and all other druggists.

CUTICURA HEALS ITCHY SCALP RASH

That Burned and Pained Four Years. Hair Came Out. Loss of Sleep.

"My scalp was red and very itchy, and a fine rash developed which burned and pained incessantly. This seemed to destroy the hair roots, causing my hair to come out, which disfigured the top of my head. It also caused loss of sleep.

"The trouble lasted four years. Then I sent for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment which encouraged me so I bought more and I had one cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Ointment and I was healed." (Signed) John Cunningham, Church St., Antigonish, N.S., April 4, 1917.

Why not make Cuticura your everyday toilet soap and prevent skin troubles? Absolutely nothing better.

For Free Sample Each by Mail address post-card: "Cuticura, Dept. A, Boston, U. S. A." Sold everywhere.

Save Tin Plate.

The housewife will do her bit in the conservation of the limited supply of tin plate by soaking and cooking her own dried peas and lima beans in the kitchen and thereby releasing a proportional amount of tin cans for use in the packing of perishable foods, where they are greatly needed. Consumers are urged by the department of agriculture, to read labels of canned peas and lima beans carefully in order to see whether they are getting a fresh or a soaked dried product.

Vacuum the Horse.

The latest application of the vacuum cleaning principle is to the grooming of horses. Walter B. Wallis of Roxbury, Mass., has invented a kind of glove which takes the place of the old curry comb and brush and cleans the hide thoroughly and quickly, says Popular Science Monthly. Between the fingers of the glove small, stiff bristles are set. These stir up the dust in the hide. The brushes are separated from the walls of the glove.

Try This If You Have Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

Non-Freezing Mixture.

Protection against possible freezing of wet materials in a cement mixer during cold weather is obtained at low cost by using an oil-burning heater which can be attached to practically any mixing machine. Such a device unquestionably can save money for a contractor by making it safe to operate continuously when the temperature is low, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The heater is provided with a 25-gallon tank which is mounted above the mixer and is connected by a pipe with a burner situated at the opening in the side of the mixing drum. Compressed air, obtained either from a hand pump or a compressor, is used to vaporize the oil and in this way a flame is forced into the interior of the drum, keeping the materials there thoroughly warm.

Our War Mission.

Ross H. McMaster, of Montreal, assistant general manager of the Steel Company of Canada, will go to Washington to act on the new Canadian war Mission, of which Mr. Lloyd Harris, of Brantford, is to be the head. The commission about to be formed will handle Canada's affairs in the United States until the end of the war, and Mr. McMaster's work with the mission will be principally in connection with the iron and steel industry, in which capacity he will be the buying agent.

Would Have Only Pleasant Memory.

"I never," a wife told me, Margaret E. Sangster writes in the Christian Herald, "say an unpleasant thing to my husband when he is leaving for work in the morning. If he's done something inconsiderate that has annoyed me, I forget it. If there is any little worry to confide in him, I keep it for another time. Life, it seems to me, is very involved in the city, very uncertain. There are so many trucks and cars on the street, so many accidents every day that I would hate to think that my husband, in the midst of all the hurry and worry, carried an unpleasant picture of me—a picture that I had created. I would hate to think, if anything did happen, that my face, when he saw it for the last time, had a frown on it. That's why I smile at him always when I say good-by in the morning and let nothing but love shine out of my eyes!"

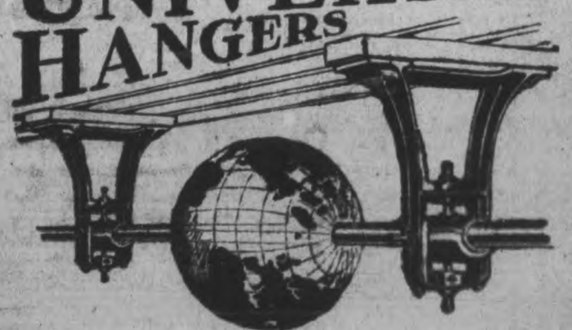
Uses Chinese Wood Oil.

Tung-yu, or wood oil, is widely used throughout China as a paint oil for outside purposes. As a drying oil it excels even linseed oil. One of its greatest local markets is found among the boatmen, who never paint their boats, but coat them with the cruder grades of wood oil, which not only gives the woodwork a bright, lustrous finish, but also acts as an excellent preservative. When certain mineral substances known as t'utzu and t'o-shen are added to the wood oil and the resulting mass is heated for about two hours, kwang-yu, or wood oil varnish, is produced. This wood oil varnish is used as a waterproofing substance for silks, pongees, etc., and also as an ornamental varnish when coloring materials are added.

Organized Great Team.

The man who was influential in organizing one of the greatest lacrosse teams that ever showed the public the fine points of our national game has just passed away. James Gow, who died in Toronto, went out to the Pacific Coast some years ago, and while living there he helped put the New Westminster team on its feet. His energy and interest in Canada's great game kept the team alive during the trying years of the '80's when the organization was still young. He lived to see the team produce men like Spring and Turnbull, who were famous as lacrosse players from coast to coast.

UNIVERSAL HANGERS



In all that the word implies, the Dodge is the Universal Hanger. It is strong, has wide adjustability, and insures perfect alignment of shafting.

It is easy to erect and pleasing in appearance. The castings are accurate, well-finished and sound.

They are machine-moulded from metal patterns.

The Dodge Universal Hanger may be had in "drop" and "post" styles. Large stocks ready for immediate shipment are carried at our factory, branch warehouses and stockers. 'Phone orders carefully attended to.

Brontides.

Mystery still attaches to certain explosive sounds, heard in various parts of the world and known to science as "brontides." On the coast of Belgium these sounds seem to come from the sea, and are called locally "mistpieffers." In the Ganges delta of India, similar sounds are called "Barisal guns." Brontides are well known in some parts of Italy, where they bear a great variety of names. In Haiti a sound of this character is known as the "gouffre," while in parts of Australia it is called the "desert sound." Brontides mostly take the form of muffled detonations, of indefinite direction. Probably they are of subterranean origin. Studies of eccentricities in the transmission of sound through the atmosphere lead to the conclusion that some of the sounds hitherto reported as brontides were really due to cannonading or blasting.—Popular Science Monthly.

BISURATED MAGNESIA

For Dyspepsia, Indigestion

Heartburn, Belching, Sour Acid Stomach, Gas in Stomach, etc., take a teaspoonful of Bisurated Magnesia in a half glass of hot water after eating. Is safe, pleasant and harmless to use and gives almost instant relief. It neutralizes stomach acidity and sweetens the food contents so that digestion is easy and painless. MRS. SEXTON ARRIVES

MRS. SEXTON ARRIVES.

CHAPTER 37.

About four o'clock I heard a commotion in the front hall and upon looking out I saw that Mrs. Sexton had arrived, "bag and baggage," as I afterwards told Evelyn.

I wondered if she would have me called, if she would think it necessary to consult me in any way. I needn't have been in any doubt. Everything had evidently been attended to by George before he left.

I heard James talking to her; then they both came up the stairs, past my room, and to my relief, James ushered her into a guest room across the hall, and a little further down than was my room. I had been so afraid she would stop at the room connecting with mine that I breathed an audible sigh of relief when they passed on down the hall.

I saw nothing of her until dinner time. She informed me she had been unpacking and making herself feel at home.

"A hard thing to do in unaccustomed surroundings," she said pleasantly.

"I should imagine so," I curtly replied.

But she had evidently made up her mind not to pay any attention to my inhospitality, as she at once commenced to talk of other things. The last book she had read, which she pronounced most interesting; the latest play, which she pronounced as rubbish, and not worth seeing, and adding that she hoped that something worth going to would follow it, as then we might enjoy going. In every way she seemed to be endeavouring to make me, her whilom hostess, and the mistress of the house, at ease—instead of trying to be entertaining on her own account.

A BETTER IMPRESSION.

Before we had finished dinner I was quite enjoying myself. I knew I had made one or two slips in what I said but to my surprise she had not corrected me. Simply answered in a slightly indulgent manner, as she might to a child. It nettled me, but was better, far easier to endure than correction.

After dinner she asked:

"Do you play cribbage?"

"No; I never have learned."

"Suppose I teach you. I am called rather an expert at the game and often when there are two people spending the evening together, it helps to pass the time."

I agreed and was soon completely absorbed in the game. So much so, that I was surprised when she laid down the cards and said:

"It's eleven o'clock. Suppose we stop for to-night. I am a little weary. You know that I am not as young as you. We will play frequently. You are a very apt pupil," and bidding me good-night, she left me.

To my surprise I had no uncomfortable thoughts as I picked up a magazine after she left me. The evening had passed quickly and very pleasantly. Had I been alone, I should have wandered around the rooms unhappy because George had left me alone; and wondering if he loved me.

"She wouldn't be half-bad if she were always like she was to-night," I said aloud as, half an hour later, I followed her example and went to bed.

A DAY OF SURPRISE.

At breakfast the next morning she remarked:

"Mr. Howard said we were to use the cars all we wished. How would you like to take the touring car—it is too lovely to use the closed one—and call for Mrs. Reeve and take a spin out in the country? Perhaps we might lunch somewhere, and then come home in the afternoon."

"Oh, that would be lovely!" I exclaimed enthusiastically, then, remembering who had proposed it, I said more coldly: "I should enjoy it very much—if Evelyn can go with us."

"Suppose you telephone and find out," she said brightly, ignoring entirely my implication.

"I will do so at once."

Evelyn was delighted with the invitation. And was all ready when we called for her. Mrs Sexton had seated herself in the tonneau with me, but now she got out and, yielding her place to Evelyn, said graciously:

"You two friends will have much to talk over I will ride with the chauffeur."

"I could hug her for that!" Evelyn whispered.

"It was thoughtful!" I grudgingly admitted.

We had a wonderful ride. Never once did Mrs. Sexton interfere, or speak to us, save only to draw our attention to some bit of scenery and then she would immediately ignore us again.

"She isn't half bad," Evelyn said in a whisper.

"Not to-day, but wait," was my enigmatic reply.

After riding about two hours, Mrs. Sexton turned to me:

"We are nearing an excellent road house. Shall we stop?"

"Certainly, I am hungry; aren't you, Evelyn?"

To-morrow:—The Road House Luncheon.

To Laugh At—A Lost Hat.

One of the funniest sights in the world is a man whose hat has been knocked in or ruined by being blown off—provided, of course, it be the other fellow's hat! All the jokes in the world are based on a few elemental ideas, and this is one of them. The sight of other people in trouble is nearly always funny. This is human nature. If you will observe your own conduct whenever you see a friend falling down on the street, you will find that nine times out of ten your first impulse is to laugh and your second is to run and help him get up. To be polite you will dust off his clothes and ask him if he has hurt himself. But when it is over you cannot resist telling him how funny he looked when he was falling. The man with the real sense of humor is the man who can put himself in the spectator's place and laugh at his own misfortunes.—Bert Williams, in the American Magazine.

World's Ultra-Gest City.

The most curious of cities consists of wooden huts on wheels, to the number of about one hundred and thirty, which, when the season arrives, are rolled on to the ice on Saginaw Bay, Lake Huron. The population of this city without a name is about five hundred. Each hut is fitted with cooking utensils, hammocks, and a stove, and is occupied by three men, whose business on the ice is to follow a peculiar method fishing.

In the centre of each hut a hole, about a yard square, is dug to the water. One of the fishermen then takes a live fish of the herring tribe, and after fastening it to a piece of pack-thread drops it into the water. The fish dashes away as swift as an arrow until it is pulled up by the thread, when it returns towards the hole followed by a host of pike and other fish desirous of feasting on the dainty morsel. Besides the hole stand the fishermen, harpoon in hand, waiting the arrival of the pursuers, who are received with thrusts of the four or five-pronged instrument, which rarely fails to bring up some writhing victims.

Some nuts can show two hundred or more of fine fish at the end of the day's work. The most weird appearance of this city is at night, when the fishermen prosecute the work by the light of torches, which, as is well known, attract fish without the aid of the herring bait. The flaming torches and the shadows of the men leaning over the holes make a strange spectacle. If fish are not abundant in the spot chosen the hut is wheeled to another site.

Wind whipped $57 in bills out of the hand of Mrs. Mary Guis, of Shepptton, Pa., and not a dollar was recovered.

Statues for Bee-Hives.

A landowner in Silesia, Germany has a collection of statuts representing Biblical and ecclesiastical characters which he prizes very much. Lifesize figures of Moses, the twelve apostles and ancient dignitaries stand solemnly in a row. But the owner mixes business with his fine art, which the highest art critics say never should be done, and has fixed these figures as homes for the busy bees. There is this record of bees selecting a stranger kind of hive than the solemn figure of Moses or Paul: "And he turned aside to see the carcass of the lion: and behold, there was a swarm of bees and honey in the carcass of the lion." (Judges 14:8.)—Christian Herald.

Legible Finger Marks.

Theoretically, a finger or thumb that is perfectly clean will leave no mark upon the surface of another perfectly clean skin for a longer time than it takes the natural perspiration of the impressed skin to efface these slight marks. And this is not for many minutes. But as no skin is absolutely clean, the clutch of a hand leaves behind on the skin an imprint in its own accumulations, and on the accumulations on the clutched skin, that can be brought out and deciphered. Of course, the more there is on the hand to leave or on the other skin to receive impressions, the easier is the task of reading the marks.

Trip to Ocean Well Worth While.

The United States of America has 12,603 miles of seacoast, and, as one-half of the population lives in the Atlantic, Pacific and Gulf states, there must be 30,000,000 people who have the sea within comparatively easy reach. There are, to be sure, millions of people who are so far removed from the coast that the sea is to them almost a myth, but it is safe to say that there are not a thousand people within our boundaries who would not see the ocean if they could. Perhaps there are many who will never have their eyes gladdened with the sight, but the present great facilities of railroad travel are lessening the number of unfortunates every year.

SUFFERED WITH NERVES COULD NOT KEEP QUIET

Diseases of the nervous system are very common.

All the organs of the body may be sound while the nerve centres may be affected.

Many women become run down and wornout by household duties never ending, and sooner or later find themselves with their nerves shattered, and the heart action weakened.

On the first sign of any weakness of either the heart or nerves, flagging energy, or physical breakdown, do not wait until your case becomes hopeless. Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will at once quieten the shaking nerves, strengthen the weak heart and build up the entire system.

Mrs. F. Bailey, 221 Earl St., Kingston, Ont., writes: "I was suffering very much with my nerves, so much so that I could not keep myself quiet at all. I was recommended to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills so I bought three boxes, and I must say I have derived much benefit from them, so much so that my friends have all noticed the change in me."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. per box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Don't Spoil Your Hair By Washing It

When you wash your hair, be careful what you use. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else that contains too much alkali, for this is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

Has Hand-Written Bible.

Hugh Russell, of Notre Dame de Grace, Que., is the reverent possessor of what is one of the most wonderful books in the world. His copy of the Bible written entirely in his own hand, and, as now bound, is not larger in size than the old style family Bible. It is beautifully written, too, bearing evidence in every word of an infinite patience and reverence, recalling the work of a mediaeval monk. It is certainly a wonderful piece of caligraphy throughout.

Mr. Russell is very modest about his achievement. "No, I am not a minister," he said, "I am only an ordinary commercial traveller — a knight of the road — but I was brought up by godly parents, both of them living still in Montreal, and I have love for the Book of Books.

"People should turn to the Bible to-day, and maybe my work may help a little bit in that direction. Yes, it is a sadly neglected book and some steps should be taken to have more attention paid to the Book of Books, in which this great conflict is assuredly foretold."

Mr. Russell, who is a Presbyterian Scotsman, began his work in 1894 and finished it on St. Andrew's Day, Nov. 30, 1916.

The work was done in odd moments of leisure, although more than half of it was done since the present war began.

It is written in what Mr. Russell himself calls "a peculiar handwriting, almost half printing it." It is perfectly legible, and, says Mr. Russell, "without making any boast, I would be willing, if I had money, to offer $100 for every error or omission anyone could find in it." There are altogether 1,987 pages, the New Testament taking up 471 of these. There are double columns on each page. It was written in sections of twenty-four pages each.

The Dew.

Dew is merely aqueous vapor which has condensed on bodies during the night in the form of minute globules. It is occasioned by the chilling which bodies near the surface of the earth experience in consequence of nocturnal radiation. Their temperature then having fallen several degrees below the temperature of the air, it frequently happens, especially in hot seasons, that this temperature is below that at which the atmosphere is saturated. The layer of air which is immediately in contact with the chilled bodies, then deposits a portion of the vapor which it contains; just as when a bottle of cold water is brought into a warm room, it becomes covered with moisture, owing to the condensation of aqueous vapor upon it.

Spanish Blood in Conquered Races.

Spain, in colonizing the new world, always followed the policy of sending soldiers, but few or no women. It was the inevitable result that in every land conquered by Spain the population is to a considerable extent of mixed Indian and Spanish blood. Thus in Chile, Valdivia, one of the early Spanish explorers captured an Araucanian chief, Michi-Malouoco, and held him for ransom. The cacique of the tribe offered 500 Indian virgins for the release of the chief, and this offer was accepted by the Spaniards. In this way originated the Chilean race of today, although it has subsequently been modified by accession of other racial strains.

OUR DALY SHORT STORY

A Mining Story of the Early Days

By ELIAS KILLIAN

Copyright, 1917, Western Newspaper Union.

A party of young people stepped into the dingy rooms of a fortune teller of San Francisco and asked her to tell their fortunes.

"I'm tired of this business," she said, "but I would like to make a little money for my present needs. I will tell you the fortune of a couple whose life is more strange than that of anyone whose fortune I have ever told."

All agreed to hear the story, and, finding whatever seats they were able, they settled down to listen. The old woman began:

"In the early days of Virginia City there lived there a teamster with his wife, a Scotchwoman, who took in washing and kept a miners' boarding house. Neither of the two had ever had any education, and neither could read or write. They were just a plain teamster and a plain washerwoman.

"One day some men came to the teamster and told him they wished to buy a claim of a few hundred feet on Gold hill, but they hadn't quite enough money to pay for it. Had he any savings, and would he, if he had, like to go in with them? The teamster talked the matter over with his wife, and after a long discussion they agreed that they might as well put what they had in the claim since they knew of no way to invest it to get an interest from it. That was a time when no one knew what great wealth there was in the ground thereabouts and whatever the couple bought could be bought for very little money. So they got out their stocking and dumped the bills and gold and silver and copper coins on the table, counted it and took it to the men who were going to buy the claim and paid for their share in it.

"By and by the owners began to take gold out of the mine, and the more they took out the more, it seemed, was there to take out. Suddenly the teamster and his wife found themselves so rich that they didn't know what to do with their money.

"'What's the first thing to do, wife?' asked the teamster.

"'Give a big blowout,' she answered.

"So they gave a big 'blowout' at the International hotel, asking everybody they knew and everybody they didn't know, and told the landlord not to pay any attention whatever to what anything cost.

"Then they went away to Europe to see all the sights there. They enjoyed the Alps pretty well, for they are much finer than the Rockies. But in Rome and Florence and Naples they saw a lot of old buildings not so much use as an adobe shanty and miles of paintings of men and women without any clothes on, and they got tired of it. Then they went to Egypt, where there's nothing but sand and obelisks and mummies, and to Greece, where there's a big stone house on a high hill, with the wind blowing through it. They call it the Acropolis, or something like that, but they didn't see any comfort in it, so they went away.

"Next they went to Paris and rode up and down the boulevards and the 'Champs Elizas' and saw shows such as never was seen in a dance house in a mining town and walked through miles of pictures, in the galleries and past indecent statues. From Paris they went to London, where they saw a lot of sights of old piles of stones and castles hundreds of years old. But

To drive a tank, handle the guns, and sweep over the enemy trenches, takes strong nerves, good rich blood, a good stomach, liver and kidneys. When the time comes, the man with red blood in his veins "is up and at it." He has iron nerves for hardships—an interest in his work grips him. That's the way you feel when you have taken a blood and nerve tonic, made up of Blood root, Golden Seal root, Stone root, Cherry bark, and rolled into a sugar-coated tablet and sold in fifty-cent vials by almost all druggists for past fifty years as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This tonic, in liquid or tablet form, is just what you need this spring to give you vim, vigor and vitality. At the fag end of a hard winter, no wonder you feel "run-down," blue, out of sorts. Try this "Medical Discovery" of Dr. Pierce's. Don't wait! To-day is the day to begin! A little "pep," and you laugh and live.

ST. CATHARINES, ONT.—"Several years ago, when convalescing after a serious illness, I took a half dozen bottles each of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Favorite Prescription as tonics. I cannot praise these medicines too highly for the benefit I received—my health was completely restored. I always take pleasure in recommending these two of Dr. Pierce's remedies."—MRS. FLORENCE LOGAN, 33 Beach Street.

n London they found the first thing to really amuse them while they were gone. That was riding on the busses. They rode all day and some time late into the night, but they got tired even of this and came home thinking that, after all, there was no place like Nevady.

"On the shore of Washoe lake they built a big mansion. The site was a beautiful one, with the wall of snow-capped Sierras behind it and water in front. Money was no object in its building. It was built of quarried stone and furnished with the costliest San Francisco could supply. A library of books with the name on every volume was one of the furnishings. The door handles were silver, the table furnishings the finest to be had at that place at that time.

"The house was big enough for a hundred families, but they didn't have even a single chick of their own, so they adopted a little girl they named Persia. But the child sickened. They loved her dearly—so dearly that they would have gladly given all their wealth to save her, but the Lord wouldn't take it in exchange, and Persis died, and that left no one in the big house but themselves.

"Next the teamster died and was buried under the shadow of the Sierras, and after her husband's death everything seemed to go against the widow. Her fortune was melting away, and she undertook to save it by speculation. This made matters worse. Her mansion on the lake went with everything else, and at last she was as poor as when she took in washing and kept a miners' boarding house.

"She had to do something to keep the life in her lonely body, so she came to Frisco and opened a fortune teller's shop, and here she is. A quarter each, please, for the story."

"What was your husband's name?" asked one of the young men of the party.

"Bowers—Sandy Bowers."

SAFEGUARDING INDUSTRIES.

Some of the Problems That Face Our Nation.

Very serious difficulties confront a number of industrial enterprises as a result of the embargo placed by the United States upon certain classes of exports which they require in large quantities. With a view to removing some of these difficulties, a representative deputation of Canadian manufacturers has urged the Government to establish a War Industries Board for the purpose of conciliating as far as possible the importation of essential raw materials. With this proposed body, committees representing various industries will co-operate by supplying the necessary technical information. It is hoped, says the Canadian Bank of Commerce, in its circular letter that it would be possible through such a board to reach the authorities at Washington directly and thus to eliminate official delays. The difficulties are very real, and affect the entire fabric of Canadian industry.

Another difficulty, not less grave is the delay incident to the inefficiency of transportation facilities. Not only does this apply to the distribution of factory products, but also to the movement of the raw materials required to keep industrial plants in operation. During the past winter lack of fuel—one of the immediate consequences of inefficient transportation — caused many factories to close down. A spell of unusually cold weather necessitated the diversion to domestic use of fuel intended for industrial purposes. To grapple with the situation the Canadian Railway Board is asking the Government to permit drastic measures to be taken, one of which is to tear up the rails on non-essential lines, so that they may be used on lines upon which traffic might be heaviest.

The plans for making the Dominion self-contained with regard to shipbuilding are expected to provide a sound basis for the revival of a valuable industry, which had declined to negligible proportions as a result of European competition. Practical shipping men do not expect the return of normal conditions until three or four years after the war, and the policy of subsidizing dry docks and shipbuilding for a time, and permitting free entry of necessary materials is regarded as likely to ensure the permanency of this industry on a considerable scale.

TORTURING, ITCHING ECZEMA

Mrs. J. B. Horth, Pasgebiac, Bonaventure Co., Que., writes:—"Thanks to Dr. Chase's Ointment I have been completely cured of that horrible disease eczema. I was held as if in prison from going among other people, for I was ashamed of the raw, flaming sores. Doctors could do nothing for me and I was almost desperate with suffering when I began to use Dr. Chase's Ointment. In one month I was completely cured and think that this was little short of a miracle."

A READY WIT.

Stories Told About the Late Joseph Choate.

The following paragraphs are from Theron G. Strong's new biography of Joseph H. Choate, one of America's foremost lawyers and citizens, and formerly ambassador to Great Britain:

A story went the rounds of an incident said to have occurred at a ducal house, where a nobleman of high rank, seeing Mr. Choate at the door, and mistaking him for the butler, said: "Call me a cab." To which Mr. Choate responded: "You are a cab." The nobleman naturally took offense and complained to his host, but was placidly informed that it was his error in mistaking the American Ambassador for a butler. Full of apologies to Mr. Choate, he expressed regret that he did not know he was the Ambassador. "Oh," Mr. Choate replied, "pray don't apologize; if I had known whom you were I would have called you a hansom cab." Mr. Choate, I believe, disclaims and repudiates this incident as a part of his English experience, but the story has been so often applied to him that it is generally accepted as a Choate anecdote.

During his sojourn in England Mr. Choate's well-proportioned figure underwent quite a transformation. He who had been rather slight returned with a corpulence quite astonishing. Some one, observing this, remarked: "Why, Mr. Choate, you have been getting stout since you went abroad." "Oh, yes," replied he, "it is necessary to meet the Englishmen halfway."

A witticism of the same character occurred in a case in which I was concerned. One of the lawyers, exceedingly corpulent, was making an argument. Mr. Choate leaned over where I was sitting and remarked: "Strong, look at Blank, he carries all before him."

The cockneyism of London must have offered him opportunity for making a great deal of fun. The dropping of the h's called forth a delicious mot. Observing on the street a box marked "drop-letter box," he said, "Well, that box must be full of h's."

A story he told at a Thanksgiving Day celebration held in London by the American society, concerned a former lord chief justice of England, and Mr. Evarts, then Secretary of State. Lord Coleridge, visiting in the United States, was taken by the Secretary of State to visit the tomb and home of Washington, at Mount Vernon, on the banks of the Potomac. Lord Coleridge inquired if it was really true that Washington threw a dollar across the Potomac. The Secretary of State said, "I think so because you know a dollar would go much farther then than it will now." (Laughter.) Lord Coleridge afterwards returned to the question, and asked, "Do you think it possible that Washington could have thrown a dollar across the Potomac?" "Why, certainly," said the Secretary, "because you know he threw a sovereign across the Atlantic."

On the same occasion he reminded the audience that the American colony was one of the greatest colonies that was ever planted under the British flag. As they knew, in the twelve years that preceded the Long Parliament, there was a perfect exodus from England to New England. Twenty thousand was the number that history recorded as making that fateful voyage, and he understood that in and about London there were twenty thousand Americans who had returned to stay—(Laughter and cheers)—out of whom the American society had been formed. They returned after 250 years as prodigal sons of England. (Laughter.) They did not claim in that capacity the fatted calf, because they would be contented with nothing less than the stalled ox.

Ostrich Feathers.

Since the slump in the ostrich feather market occurred in 1914, schemes have been devised to minimize the losses to ostrich farmers, many of whom had no other capital than their flocks of these giant birds. The eggs of the ostrich have long been a staple product on the market of Port Elizabeth and other ostrich centres, and have been mixed with hens' eggs by bakers in the manufacture of cakes and pastry. Lately two sealed cans, each containing 20 ostrich eggs in liquid form, have been shipped to London as an experiment. The results are awaited with interest. In large quantities, ostrich eggs packed are quoted at Port Elizabeth at 14 to 18 cents each. One of these eggs weighs between two and three pounds, and is equivalent to about two dozen hens' eggs.

About Pinchbeck

Pinchbeck, where the old Lincolnshire flax industry is being revived, bears a bad reputation among metallurgists, and is accused by the unlearned of having originated an opprobrious epithet which has spread from the material to the intellectual and moral worlds. As a matter of fact, this is a cruel libel on a charming rural village which has always been more concerned with agriculture than with metals. Our term "pinchbeck" applied to anything that is sham or unreal, comes not from the village but from Christopher Pinchbeck, a watch and toy maker, who invented an alloy of copper and zinc that ruined his trade rivals at the beginning of the 18th century. Pinchbeck's place of business was, alas, situated in Fleet street.

Petrograd Wine Cellars.

The imperial wine cellars underneath the winter palace at Petrograd have been sacked, and nothing remains of what was the largest and finest collection in the world of the best wines of the choicest growth of the most famous years. A great deal had been quietly stolen during the last six months by enterprising patriots, and in the end the soldiers on guard obtained possession of the cellars, and were joined by a huge mob recruited from the dregs of the populace. Tens of thousands of bottles were destroyed, and the floors of the immense cellars were knee-deep in liquor, the end of the orgies being that muddy water from the Nava was pumped into the cellars, after which the mixture of wine and water was pumped back into the river. Thousands of bottles were fired upon to facilitate the destruction. Numbers of the rioters are reported to have been drowned, as they were lying dead drunk on the floors of the cellars in heaps.

Get Behind the Wheel of a Ford and Drive

TRY it just once! Ask your friend to let you "pilot" his car on an open stretch. You'll like it, and will be surprised how easily the Ford is handled and driven.

If you have never felt the thrill of driving your own car, there is something good in store for you. It is vastly different from just riding—being a passenger. And especially so if you drive a Ford.

Young boys, girls, women and even grandfathers—thousands of them—are driving Ford cars and enjoying it. A Ford stops and starts in traffic with exceptional ease and smoothness, while on country roads and hills its strength and power show to advantage.

Buy a Ford and you will want to be behind "the wheel" constantly.

FACE COVERED WITH PIMPLES
ASHAMED TO GO OUT

Many an otherwise beautiful and attractive face is sadly marred by unsightly pimples, blotches, flesh worms and various other blood diseases.

Their presence is a source of embarrassment to those afflicted as well as pain and regret to their friends.

Many a cheek and brow cast in the mould of beauty have been sadly defaced, their attractiveness lost and their possessor rendered unhappy for years.

Why, then, consent to rest under this cloud of embarrassment?

There is an effectual remedy for all these defects.

It is Burdock Blood Bitters. This remedy will drive out all the impurities from the blood and leave the complexion healthy and clear.

Mrs. Katherine Henry, Port Sydney, Ont., writes: "Two years ago my face was so covered with pimples I was ashamed to go out at all. I tried several remedies, but they were of no use. At last a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I got a bottle, and by the time it was used I could see a difference. I then got two more, and when I had used them the pimples were completely gone. I can highly recommend B.B.B."

EFFECTS OF NOTED BATTLES

Probable Results if Outcome Had Been Different, Explained in Book by English Writer Years Ago.

About 60 years ago an English writer, Sir Edward Creasy, published a book which he called "The Fifteen Decisive Battles of the World." His purpose was to describe those great military events which have had the greatest influence upon human history.

Each battle described, had it resulted differently, would have completely changed the course of civilization, says the World's Work. Had Charles Martel not have won the battle of Tours, for example, the whole of Europe, and that means also North and South America, would very likely have become Mohammedan in religion. "Perhaps the interpretation of the Koran," says Gibbon, describing the consequences of this battle, "would now be taught in the schools of Oxford and her pupils might demonstrate to the English people the truth of the revelation of Mohamet."

Ten of Creasy's epochal battles have been fought since the beginning of the Christian era. Four of them represent victories which were won on French soil—the battle of Chalons, A. D. 451; the battle of Tours, 732; Joan of Arc's victory at Orleans, 1429, and the battle of Valmy, in 1792. Another was a great French victory won on English soil—the battle of Hastings in 1066. Two others—the battle of Blenheim, in 1704, and the battle of Waterloo in 1815—were great French defeats. It appears, therefore, that of the ten most decisive battles fought in the Christian era five were great French victories and two were French defeats. No other nation has any such military history as this. This mere record indicates the part which France has played in advancing civilization. So far as Europe is concerned the greatest events in modern history have taken place on French soil. At this time, when the democratic nations have joined hands to deliver France from the cowardly attack which Germany has made upon her, it is well to keep this fact in mind.

GET READY FOR GARDEN

How to Plan Your Work and Work to a Plan.

EVERYBODY GROW EATABLES

The Essentials In Planning Garden—Best Varieties to Plant.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

AT NO TIME in many years has the necessity and importance of the home vegetable garden been so clearly shown as for this coming summer. France, our wonderful ally, has since the French Revolution been a nation of small farmers, her people of small means cultivating some available land to produce a portion of their own household foodstuffs and to increase the wealth of the nation. Great Britain, threatened with a shortage of foodstuffs, determined to cultivate all available land possible to offset this shortage and we, in Canada, bending every energy toward facilitating these great nations should do all in our individual power to do something in the hope of helping ourselves and assisting the commercial vegetable growers who are seriously handicapped by the shortage of labor in the production of vegetable foodstuffs. Every city, town and village dweller has an opportunity to help in this great work, in that there are hundreds of available plots now practically unproductive, which could be made grow vegetables and thus add to the wealth of the country.

Vegetables an Important Food.

Vegetables should form an important portion of the daily food of the average human being, for they possess qualities which we are told are essential in the proper digestion of the heavy foods, such as meats.

All backyards cannot be prepared in one year to grow vegetables of an excellent quality. Some portion of the yard, however, may be devoted to this purpose, or, if it is convenient, there are usually many vacant lots which are not too far from one's place of abode which possibly could be devoted to the growing of vegetables.

Some Essentials.

First of all it is essential that the vegetable garden, no matter how small, be planted according to some plan or rule. No one attempts to build a house or to set out a perennial flower border without using some drawing or chart to go by. Why should the vegetable garden be treated differently? Haphazard planting will prove a failure, and in order to overcome this it should be remembered in laying out the garden that—

(1) Tall plants will be most effective if placed behind low ones, not intermingled with them.

(2) All plants closely allied should be grown together, not in the same row, but in rows adjoining one another.

(3) The fences may be decorated with vine crops which may be supported on the fences by means of strings or lattice work.

(4) All quickly maturing vegetables should be planted in a portion of the garden by themselves so that they may be harvested and the ground used for other crops later on.

Secure Seed Now—But Plant Only When Soil Is Ready.

The backyard gardener should decide very early which crops are to be grown and should purchase his seed as soon as possible. It must be remembered, however, that much of this seed may be wasted if it is planted too early in the season. The soil must be warm to receive the seeds, and amateur gardeners must have patience until it is certain that good growing weather has come. It is possible in ordinary seasons to plant some vegetables in April, and yet many backyard vegetable enthusiasts will be well advised to wait until the middle of May before doing very much in the garden.

Suitable Varieties.

A list of varieties suitable for gardens made by city, town and village dwellers follows:

Chinese Problem Again Acute

BRET HARTE once gave a diverting picture of the "heathen Chinee" whose ways, at least in the old Californian days, were "childlike and blaud." Although, on the authority of Bobbie Burns, the inconvenient power to "see ourselves as others see us" is denied to mortals, it might be most instructive and illuminating to know the Chinese impression of the occidental's peculiar ways when East and West are brought into economic juxtaposition. Take, as an example, the Chinese's advent on the Pacific coast of America. At one moment he is declared to be a most desirable immigrant, and at another a very undesirable one. Through the imposition of a poll tax of $500, Canada for years practically excluded further Chinese immigration, but now some men have put forth a sudden demand for at least 100,000 coolies from "far Cathay." The excuse is the acute shortage of labor and the need for increased economic production. The proposal has been greeted with a chorus of dissent by Canadian labor leaders, who, taking the standpoint that the Dominion has already more aliens than is desirable, contend that the coolie influx would lower the standard of living and cheapen the wage rate of the people. They declare that the true remedy for the labor shortage lies in the closing of all unnecessary public works until after the war, the Government in the meantime taking over all the plans for production and distribution. For these uncompromising opponents of coolie labor, there may be some grain of comfort to be extracted from the apparent indifference of the Federal Government, which has not shown the slightest disposition to take seriously the agitation of the Ontario men to throw down the bars against the Chinese.

It is well to remember that the Chinese situation in Canada and the United States is but a symptom of a greater, world-wide movement. The movement affects appreciably the whole status of the Chinese race in the impending reconstruction of international relations. To-day the Chinese is not permitted to share with the white man the virgin lands of the temperate zones; to-morrow it may be necessary for various peoples to broaden their vision and to adapt themselves to an oriental who has, through sheer racial evolution, qualified himself to take up the rights of citizenship with other nationalities. It may be questioned whether he has yet qualified for this right, and there is no apparent likelihood of the prejudice against miscegenation being broken down. But China is in a state of flux, quite apart from that "yellow peril" fearfully foreshadowed by still more perilous kaisers. She has to find a relief for congestion, which will more and more be deemed acute as modern methods continue to be adopted. Unrestricted emigration might afford only temporary relief.

And one might appropriately ask, in this connection, Where is the justice of a system which keeps the Chinese out of North America and allows Europe to have "spheres of influence" upon her territory? Carefully examined, these commercial rights, backed by treaties, appear to be nothing less than incipient infringements of Chinese sovereignty, and ought, in justice to the Chinese, to be abolished, either at the coming peace conference or at the sittings of the projected League of Nations.

There is an urgent need of laws dealing comprehensively with all oriental races on a basis of equality. On the other hand, there should be some well-defined limitations, protecting white laborers from economic disaster. They have rights no less than the Asiatics, who, however, often aggravate the situation by posing as colonists, unwilling to settle down or to identify themselves with the country's institutions and modes of life. Perhaps the immediate problem of Canada, in controlling immigration, is how to apply her restrictions equally to every land, excepting the Mother Country and the various branches of the Anglo-Saxon communities.

SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

When Mixed With Sulphur It Brings Back Its Beautiful Lustre At Once

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks streaked, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred-fold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the recipe at home or get from any drug store a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which is merely the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients. Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully, besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural colour is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Power of the Spirit in Deafness.

The central thought which comes from my experience with deafness is that remedy—recompense. There, as elsewhere, is the natural law—that nature seeks always to balance itself. The only irreparable disaster in deafness is that one which would despoil the spirit—the will; and here again, as was shown in depression, it is within the personality, within the bounds and terms of our own understanding, that exist the laws which reharmonize the discordant condition and reinvest the mind with its conscious power to dominate the forces and events of life. —Margaret Baldwin, in Atlantic.

Mirrors for Household Decoration.

They say that a man's first thought on entering a room is, "Where is there a place to sit down?" but a woman's first thought is, "Where is there a mirror?" It has been woman's thought from time immemorial, for from time immemorial there have been mirrors. It is only since the beginning of the sixteenth century that mirrors have been used as articles of household furniture and decoration, and there are few women of the present day who do not realize and make use of their artistic value in adorning their homes.

New Material for Paper Pulp.

Experiments in the use of lalang grass for paper pulp have been carried out in Australia. There are millions of tons of lalang grass growing in Queensland. It produces three crops a year, and is considered a curse to the country. It resembles esparto grass and, when dried, yields as high as 60 per cent of first-class paper-making pulp.

WON'T OPEN ROSS RIFLE FACTORY.

QUEBEC, April 9.—Owing to the recent events it has been decided not to re-open the Ross rifle factory in Quebec as originally contemplated. It had been planned to manufacture Lee Enfield rifles at this factory and employment would have been found for nearly five thousand men.

The authorities have determined that in the present state of unrest in Quebec City it would be unwise to restart operations at the rifle factory. Part of the premises are now used as barracks for about six hundred troops from Toronto.

IN SOME PARTS OF WEST

WINNIPEG, April 9. — Manitoba was visited with a brief return of winter weather over the week-end, the temperature dropping in some places very near to zero, following a heavy fall of sleet and snow.

The storm was most severe in the Morden district but it extended north to Russell and east to Port Arthur. To-day is cool and clear with promise in the south wind of the return of spring weather in the next 24 hours.

In Alberta and Saskatchewan the weather has been fair and moderately cool. The forecast of all west is "Fair and warmer"

Advance In The Price of The Weekly Examiner

On the First of July next, the Subscription Price of the "Weekly Examiner" will, in future, be at the following rates:

Year - $1.50 Six Months 75c

Three Months 40c

Payable in Advance

Outside of Canada, the yearly rate will be $2.00

In war or peace this is as low a price as a Weekly Newspaper of the size of the Examiner can be published for. The Examiner was established in August, 1856—sixty-two years ago and has been a staunch and faithful visitor to its Subscribers ever since.

Subscriptions will be received at the rate of $1.00 up to May 1st, Subscribers in arrears will be charged at the $1.50 rate as has been the rate in the past.

The Enemy Captured Givenchy But Were Driven Out

"WE MUST BE READY TO THROW IN ALL OUR RESERVES"---Lloyd George

Germans Open New Offensive North Of Somme Battlefield Heavy Fighting Is In Progress

British Are Holding Desperately--Givenchy is Recaptured By the British in a Counter Attack.

THE BRITISH OFFICIAL

LONDON, April 10.—Heavy fighting continued north of the Labassee Canal yesterday evening and last night, Field Marshal Haig reported to-day. The British are holding desperately along the Lys and Lawe Rivers. A counter attack on the southern flank resulted in the recapture of Givenchy, by the British.

East and north of Armentieres as far as the Ypres-Comines Canal, there was heavy hostile bombardment early this morning with fighting on the southern portion of this front.

GIVENCHY RECAPTURED.

In their new attack on the front north of the Somme battlefield, Germans yesterday forced their way into Givenchy, but the British recaptured the town, the War Office announces.

The German front of attack is extending to-day. Early this morning a bombardment was begun of the British positions from the Armentieres region as far north as the Ypres-Comines Canal. On the southern part of this front infantry fighting is reported to have begun.

On the front north of the Labassee Canal fierce fighting continued during the night. Our troops are holding the line of the Rivers Lawe and Lys and are heavily engaged with the enemy at river crossings at Estaires and Bac Stmaur. On the southern flank of attack, Givenchy, into which the enemy at one time forced his way, was recaptured later in the day by a successful counter attack by the 55th Division, which took 750 prisoners in this area. Early this morning the enemy opened a heavy bombardment of our positions east and north of Armentieres as far as the Ypres-Comines Canal. Fighting is reported to have commenced on the southern portion of this front. On the British front south of the Somme there was local fighting yesterday evening at certain points without changing the situation.

SHELL-SHOCKED SOLDIER.

Wandered In Woods Near Tweed — Refused Comforts.

Last Friday a number of returned soldiers passed through Tweed, enroute to their respective homes in Western Ontario. One soldier, Pte. Robert Peterson left his train here and took out into the country, landing in Peter Bergeron's sugar bush. Hunger forced him to ask at Mr. Bergeron's for some food which they very kindly supplied and sought to help him, but he didn't give out much information and refused to stay in the house. He hung about the woods. He went to Mr. Jonas Hawkins where he was fed and Mr. Hawkins induced him to go to bed, but he only remained there for an hour or so, then went outside again. He was minus boots and hat, but the neighbours supplied him with these. Mr. Hawkins learned his name and his people's whereabouts and wired them at Port Colborne. On Monday they lost track of him and the neighbourhood turned out to search for him. He sought to evade them and took to the river. Jack Cournoyea took a boat and another man went with him, and they after some difficulty, succeeded in getting him into the boat. He was hustled to the house and given warm clothing and treatment. Monday afternoon a brother arrived and took him home to Port Colborne. Pte. Peterson was a victim of shell shock. His nerves were in a very serious condition.—Tweed News.

THE MAXIMUM DEPTH OF THE GERMAN PENETRATION YESTERDAY ABOUT FOUR AND A HALF MILES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, April 10.—The Associated Press war summary says to-day:

New German attacks to-day have carried the fighting in the great battle on the western front into Flanders and extended the battle front to a stretch of approximately 130 miles, from near the Belgian town of Ypres in the north, to the vicinity of Coucy-Le-Chateau, on the extreme French right. The fresh German blow, struck yesterday between LaBassee and Armentieres, has already driven a deep salient into the British lines below Armentieres, and the Armentieres region itself was reported under attack this morning. The maximum depth of the German penetration was apparently about four and one-half miles at Estaires. Givenchy at one time in German hands during the attack, was retaken by the British in a counter thrust. The German effort on this front, if it succeeds to no further extent than it apparently has so far, does not seem likely to have any greater effect than to compell modifications in the British line north of the LaBassee Canal. If the British can continue to hold Givenchy the front to the southward would hardly be disturbed and a direct effect to drive on the greater battle to the south would be negligible.

THE CRISIS CAME HOME WITH FULL FORCE TO-DAY

The Washington View of Lloyd George's Address—Troop Shipment Schedule Geared Up.

GRAVE NEED REVEALED

(United Press Service.)

(By Robert J. Bender.)

Washington, April 10. — With Germany staking her all on the western offensive, the allies and America have answered that they will also stake all—and do it now.

That was the view Washington took to-day of Lloyd George's address following President Wilson's "force" address and his pledge to double quickly the sending of American forces abroad.

CRISIS CAME HOME.

The crisis came home with full force to-day from England's action in raising the military age to fifty years and her proposal to conscript Irishmen.

President Wilson cleared the way by side tracking the idea of a political offensive against Austria, and by declaring that hereafter unstinted force will be America's role. Lloyd George, the authorities pointed out, staked his political career and ran the risk of serious rebellion in Ireland, by forcing the conscription issue.

Only a really grave need would force these steps.

Enough now is revealed, however, to convince the military authorities that England and France have drawn heavily on reserves to stop the Germans before Amiens.

A VAST PART.

America will play a vast part in the coming days. Her troop shipment schedule is geared high, and she will have a surprising representation on the western front in the next three or four months.

This addition with Britain's new men, is counted on to definitely check the German ambitions.

The situation in England and Ireland, apart from the question of furnishing Americans more rapidly, offers embarrassing problems for American statesmen. The Alien Draft Treaty, while not now mentioning Ireland, is so framed that when conscription is forced in Ireland it can be used against the Irishmen here.

The general belief here is that conscription in Ireland will stick, and that in time the agitation against it will subside. America will probably take no steps to draft Irishmen until this quieter stage is reached.

The Americans Have Arrived

United States Soldiers Will Likely Be Brigaded With the British FLANKING MOVEMENT

(United Press Service.)

(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, April 10.—The first Americans have arrived at the British front. They include infantry, airmen and engineers.

The arrival of the first of these men at the British front, reported in the above despatch, is just eleven days after the movement began.

The fact that these men have arrived at the "British front" probably located them some place north of the Somme, as the British and French forces are supposed to converge at Hangard five miles south of that river. All that portion of the front from Hangard north to Dixmude in Belgium is held by Haig's troops.

Long Range Guns.

During the German heavy attacks on British and Portuguese positions from La Bassee Canal to a point south-west of Armentieres, the enemy used long range guns to shell Bethune, Estaires, Laventis and practically all the villages in the back areas. General Von Quast used several fresh divisions.

The ground is very muddy owing to rains.

Hindenburg, foiled in his attempt against Arras, Vimy and Notre Dame-Lorette, apparently hopes to flank British positions from the north.

Terrific Fighting.

From the La Bassee Canal to southward of Armentieres there was terrific fighting throughout last night. To-day on the left sector there was momentarily no infantry fighting, but the artillery were mutually blazing away in full chords.

Tuesday afternoon and night there was bloody hand-to-hand fighting around Armentieres and on the high

A SERIES OF NEW ATTACKS

Foch's Apparent Purpose is to Let Hindenburg Wear Himself Out Channel Ports Are Safe

THE PRESENT DRIVE

(United Press Service.)

(By J. W. T. Mason.)

NEW YORK, April 10.—Capture of the channel ports of Boulogne and Calais apparently forms the objective of Von Hindenburg's restless series of new attacks against the British front that centres on Armentieres.

This is the same area in which the Germans attempted to break through to the channel as an alternative programme early in the war when they failed to capture Paris. Having failed now to capture Amiens, second only to Paris in importance, the Kaiser returns to the scene of his former defeat for a resumption of the disastrous adventure.

Nervous Activity.

A spirit of nervous activity is beginning to reveal itself among the Germans such as they have not revealed before. Von Hindenburg seems to realize that he cannot permit his armies to remain at rest. There is evidence of trepidation at the small value of the German accomplishment during the present drive compared with the colossal casualties. Hasty assaults in unrelated sectors of the front are replacing the former German perseverance in face of a single objective.

Within a few days Von Hindenburg has halted his Amiens operations to attack the French fifty miles southeast along the Ailette River, and has curtailed his efforts there to assail the British front nearly one hundred miles further north.

Dogged Pursuit.

The old Hindenburg spirit of dogged pursuit along a well mapped out course is no longer apparent. Harried indecision has taken its place. Von Hindenburg's activities, in fact, are suggesting more and more the idea that the new west front has barred him in, and he is rushing about his cage vainly seeking some way of breaking the bars and gaining liberty of action.

Ports Are Safe.

In this situation, it is Gen. Foch's apparent purpose to let Von Hindenburg wear himself out. Since the German General Staff seems to believe there is still a chance of capturing Calais and Boulogne it is admirable strategy for the Allies to encourage the Kaiser to add to his reputation as the exterminator of human man power.

The channel ports are unquestionably safe. The more Germans that are killed before Hindenburg recognizes that fact, the easier will be the task of America and the Allies when they eventually develop their joint major offensive.

A Special Feature At The Empire

Mae Murray in "A Mormon Maid" —Six Reel Picture

Synopsis.

In the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company's picturization of "A Mormon Maid," Mae Murray, who since her debut on the screen has become one of the most popular photoplay stars in the world, is seen as the daughter of a hardy pioneer under the dominance of the Mormon Church. She is coveted by one of the church heads and both she and her father are being led to believe that the marriage of one will save the other from being forced into polygamy. The maid believes she is to be married to the only man she loves but discovers to her horror that she is to be united to a cruel elder of the church. How she tricks them and escapes the marriage, how her father is left for dead but recovers in time to rescue her, and how the two, with the man she loves, leave the City of the Saints, is depicted in this Paramount Picture in a manner which must be seen to be enjoyed.

See this and other pictures at the Empire to-night. A fine programme.

CONDEMNS COMPULSION

Section of British Press View With Disfavour Lloyd George's Man-Power Bill

T. P. O'CONNOR'S COMMENT

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, April 10. — "Lloyd George comment." The Manchester Guardian considers from the Premier's statements that a case for raising the military age in Great Britain has not been made out. Assuming that the Germans have made up their minds either to succumb of triumph as a consequence of the present offensive, the newspaper says that the particular issue will be settled in one way or the other before men of forty and fifty are trained.

"Has Gone Mad."

DUBLIN, April 10.—The Government has gone mad, says the Freemans' Journal, in commenting upon the proposal of applying conscription to Ireland.

"Lloyd George announced his decision yesterday to carry the war into Ireland. Every one in Ireland knows what the result will be. The only supporters in Ireland of forcible conscription of Irishmen for war are those who want to see Ireland reduced to a welter of confusion in order that their own reactionary views may prevail."

"Grave Decision."

LONDON, April 10.—The Manchester Guardian, probably the most influential of England's provincial newspapers, severely condemns the Government's proposals of calling up forty to fifty-year-old men for fighting service and also conscription for Ireland. It asks whether is is worth while to disorganize the business of the country for the sake of 70,000 or 100,000 men six months hence. The Guardian believes American reinforcements will turn the battle. It calls this the gravest decision announced in the Premier's speech and the one with the smallest attempt at justification. It continues: "As a military measure it will be not merely useless but actively injurious. As political it is folly at its highest power."

"Insane Blunder."

SAN FRANCISCO, April 10.—Application in Ireland of military conscription would be on "insane blunder," according to a cablegram sent to John Dillon, leader of the Irish party in Parliament by T. P. O'Connor, Irish publicist and member of Parliament who is here to-day on a speaking tour.

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, April 10.—"An Irishman does not object to fighting, but on this occasion it the English Government he will elect to fight," declared the Manchester Guardian to-day.

"The present proposal is a concession, not to treason, but to partisanship and prejudice."

HORTICULTURAL SOC. ACCEPTS THE $600

The executive of the Horticultural Society last night decided to accept the city's grant of $600 for the care of the parks, and to give the best service possible for that appropriation. The letting of the tenders for the care and planting of the parks was referred to the Parks committee, and it is expected that this work will be disposed of at once. There was a large attendance of members last night. It was regretted that the Association has been granted only $600 for this year's park work, but the directors decided to make the best of the limitation, and to carry on as well as possible.

Present Battle Must Exhaust German Forces. Says British Premier—For a Long Time There Will Be Cause For Deep Anxiety

LIEUT. J. E. BIRNIE

News was received a few days ago that Lieut. Birnie had been wounded. Mrs. Birnie resides at 309 Brock street. Lieut. Birnie, who is a nephew of Dr. Jesse Birnie, was connected with R. R. Hall's law firm previous to enlistment.

NO GROUNDS FOR PANIC

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, April 10. — "If by any chance or mischance this colossal battle went against us I do not say the war would be over any more than it was when Great Britain fought against another attempt at military dominancy when Napoleon, having overthrown the armies of Europe, had the continent at his mercy," declared Lloyd George at the conclusion of his great speech in the Commons yesterday.

GERMAN PEACE.

"As long as we have a ship afloat we shall not accept a German peace. But if the battle is won, as I believe it will be, the doom of Prussian militarism is sealed. The enemy has attacked at the height of his strength. We have been deserted by one powerful ally and another and more powerful ally is not yet ready to put forth one-tenth of his might."

FIRST INSTALLMENT.

"But on the other hand this battle must exhaust the German reserves. The enemy's last call must be thrown in before this battle is over, and America is only now putting in the first installment of her first call. If we wish to avoid a war lasting for years this battle must be won now, and to win it we must be ready to throw in all or reserves. Men who we propose taking to-day may well be the means of winning a decisive victory of war, and with these measures, and with the promise of America, we have no fear of the ultimate issue.

HOPE AND DESPONDENCY.

We shall pass through many fluctuations of hope and despondency, perhaps even in this battle. Let us go through the vicissitudes of this tremendous struggle with stout and steady hearts. We have had sad and critical days. In these days we have no ground for panic. We have had days when the outlook was brighter.

Make no mistake. There is no cause yet for exultation, except in the valour of our troops. For a long time there will be cause, grave cause, for deep anxiety, and there will always be to the end cause for exertion and for sacrifice, and if these are given with unstinted devotion, with which our brave men in France are offering it, there will be cause for confidence in this country."

Naval Action Looked For

Naval Offensive May Come Before July First—Cannot Afford a Big Gamble

THE OBJECTIVES

(United Press Service.)

(By Carl D. Groat.)

Washington, April 10. — Pressure for a naval offensive to supplement the costly battling on the western line is manifest anew in the army and navy quarters.

There are those among the navy officials who predicted to-day that more aggressive naval action will come before July 1st, though they did not venture to forecast its magnitude.

Such as entertained this view pointed out that America has supplemented the British navy with battleships, submarines, destroyers, and in fact all types of naval craft. This to their minds was significant of a plan for more aggressive steps than simply warning off the submarines after they got out of their German nests.

ACTION LOOKED FOR.

One official whose insight into naval affairs is recognized as especially good, expressed the view that the allied navies would attempt a stroke at Zeebrugge, Wilhelmshaven, or perhaps the Teuton stronghold of Heligoland.

"Britain cannot afford to make a big gamble, however," he declared. "She has kept the seas clear with her navy and it is true that if it were not for her powerful naval forces, the Germans would now be on the seas. In such circumstances you can see that she cannot risk her vessels; but I do believe you can look for some action before July first.

QUESTION IS STILL UNDER CONSIDERATION

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, April 10.—"That is absolutely incorrect," said Sir George Foster to-day regarding a report that patent medicines cannot be imported after Monday. "What about other reported restrictions of imports," asked Sir George who, as Minister of Trade and Commerce, is chairman of the War Trade Board which is recommending import embargoes to the Cabinet. "There have been no decisions," the Minister replied. "The whole question is still under consideration."

THE WEATHER

Frosty nights, cold winds and conditions more like March than April, have prevailed for some days. Last night the temperature was down to 18 degrees. Zero weather has prevailed all through the northern sections of the province, while in the Maritime provinces a severe snow storm has raged. Much warmer weather is now on the way here.—W.P.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 10TH, 1918.

WILL PLAY THE GAME.

While there will be general sympathy with the complaint of some of the Original Firsts that after over three and a half years' service they should not have to go back to France while there are so many ablebodied men in Canada who have never been over, yet these men were allowed to come home only on condition that they should not try to remain here or even to apply for an extension, and any vigorous protest on their part will only react upon their comrades who are waiting for their turn to come home. This is the official announcement from Ottawa and doubtless the Original Firsts will continue to play the game as they have played it from the start rather than make it impossible for their chums to get away for a holiday. It is unfortunate that some way could not be found so that these gallant men would not have to go back.

"GET ON WITH THE WAR."

The time spent on the debate on the question of titles, hereditary or otherwise, in the House of Commons, on Monday night, could have been more profitably spent in planning for a quick response to Lloyd George's appeal for more men from Canada, or in an effort to increase food production. We have worried along so far under the burden of knighthoods, baronetcies, and other titles, and although almost everybody in Canada agrees that we do not want such things as hereditary titles in a democratic country, wasting the time of Parliament in talking about them at present is not getting ahead with the war, which is the only business with which the powers that be at Ottawa should concern themselves at present.

THE ATTITUDE OF PARLIAMENT.

"One never knows in this Parliament whether he is going to be attacked from the front or the rear," a Cabinet Minister remarked to a newspaper man yesterday apropos a little independent discussion that had been going on in the House, says the Ottawa Journal. The observation is highly encouraging. It shows that the old slavish, time-serving order that used to make Parliament a travesty on democracy, is passing, that it is being replaced by an order of independent, critical analysis, and that, most hopeful of all, the Government of the day is cognizant of the change.

No one who wants to see the country get on with the war desires to see the Cabinet harassed by futile, petty criticism. Everyone who wants to get on with the war desires to see the Government's conduct subjected to close and constructive parliamentary analysis. The present Government was put into office to achieve a very definite thing. Parliament was elected by the people to see that the mandate so given is carried out. Intelligent support of well considered war measures will help both the Government and the war. Blind support of unexamined war measures will injure both the Government and the war.

What the country demands is that the new Parliament shall assist, advise and, if need be, criticize always with an eye single to the supreme task of the hour. There must be less of a disposition, which we have noticed on the part of some of late, to take things for granted, and to leave other things to chance. Finally the Government ought to be encouraged to take the people as much as possible into its confidence, to tell and explain, so far as is consistent with safety, what is being done, and just why and how it is being done. Parliament must not get the idea that a thing is achieved as soon as a new commission is created or a new department set up. A little more of what Woodrow Wilson called "pitiless publicity," migh have prevented some very serious happenings that have occurred of late. A little more of the same kind of light may serve to prevent similar consequences in the future.

ONE YEAR OF WAR; NOW FOR ANOTHER!

(New York Herald.

This is the anniversary of America's entrance into this world war for liberty. Very fittingly it will be ushered in by the starting of the "drive" to make a success of the third Liberty Loan.

America's first year of war has brought its disappointments. Performance in some directions has not measured up to promise. With the experience of our allies to draw on, it was hoped that there would be no ground for criticism. There has been, but the criticism will do no harm if it serves as a spur upon those charged with responsibility. That it will so serve we have every reason to believe Much has been accomplished during the year that has elapsed since Congress declared a state of war to exist with Germany. The making of a great citizens' army, the making ready of the navy to meet war conditions, the financial aid rendered our allies, the notable contributions of food supplies to the nations fighting our fight—all these things stand on the credit side of the ledger. Where production has lagged improvement is now reported. There is every reason for confidence that this new year of war will find the United States doing its full part.

The year must be faced with optimism. Shortcomings of the past can be dismissed to a future day of reckoning when the responsibility for them will be determined. "Eyes front!" is the American duty until victory is won. This aplies to every citizen as well as to those charged with the administration of the government.

HOW MUCH LONGER?

How much longer will Sir Robert Borden continue to abuse the patience of the country in permitting Henri Bourassa to carry on his anti-British propaganda? Members on both sides of parliament, newspapers published in French and in English, journals that have supported Union Government as well as those who have opposed it, are a unit in denouncing Bourassa and his newspaper, but Le Devoir continues to secure Government money for advertising and to assist the enemy by its campaign of sedition.

The Toronto Globe which has staunchly endorsed Union Government, minces no words in dealing with this subject. Here is an extract:

Only in Canada, of all the Allied countries, would this traitor be permitted to openly carry on his propaganda, of which his Province is reaping the bitter fruits to-day. And the Canadian Government actually hands over public money to this public enemy by inserting advertisements in the newspaper which is his chief medium for distributing his pen-poison. While the Government's approval of his teachings is not implied in its patronage of Le Devoir, the readers of that mischievous paper have the right to infer that Bourassa is licensed to say what he pleases. Is it surprising that members of the House of Commons, echoing a widespread impression in the country, allege that the Government fears to prosecute this sedition monger? Unless the Government takes action, it will justify the suspicion that the Prime Minister is restrained by secrets of the Conservative-Nationalist alliance of 1911, that Bourassa is licensed to say what his immunity from prosecution that he can do Germany's work in the open.

MR. HALL ENDORSED.

Mr. R. R. Hall's efforts to arouse the people to an appreciation of the seriousness of the food situation and his announcement that farmers were feeding wheat to hogs because in the long run it is cheaper than coarse grains, have aroused much general interest, and have been commented upon favourably in a number of journals.

The Lindsay Past says:

Mr. R. R. Hall, of Peterboro, through the medium of the Globe, has given wide publicity to a serious and unpatriotic practice, that of feeding hogs at the present time with wheat, instead of with coarse grains, because it is relatively cheaper.

When we saw the publication of this we thought that if this was the case, it must be confined to a few farmers, of an extremely sordid mind, but only yesterday it came to our notice that right here in Ops, the names of two of the leading farmers were given to us as feeding their hogs on wheat at the present time, and this suggests to us that it may be quite a common practice in our midst.

Surely, this is not playing the game fair when patriotic demands are calling for all kinds of sacrifice, and when orders are given to us for wheatless meals and wheatless days that we may save the wheat to feed the pressing needs of our Allies.

We hope we are right in believing that no farmer in our country, when once this is brought to his attention, and he gives a moment's consideration to the same, will continue to feed wheat to his hogs.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

If Sir Wilfrid Laurier succeeds in inducing other knights to join him in burning their titles in the market place the result should make a memorable bon-fire. Sir Joseph Flavelle's title shauld burn readily.

More than two million dollars was paid in custom duties on farm implements during 1916-17. The removal of these duties is suggested by Hon. Mr. Dunning, government director of food production, but his advice is apparently ignored by the Government.

General Smuts is the kind of diplomat that the Anglo-Saxon people appreciate.

"A Plain Confession."

(Philadelphia Telegraph.)

"Czernin has made a speech in Vienna, but the speech was made in Germany. It is a plain confession of his vassalage. It throws light on another speech he made last February. This beginning of a peace offensive comes, significantly, with the breakdown of the costly military drive in Picardy. It is an indication of weakness, perhaps of desperation, and once more the enemy is employing psychological tactics."

Proper Titles.

(Toronto Globe.)

A Toronto teamster and a Calgary farmer visited Buckingham Palace yesterday, where the King bestowed upon them the Victoria Crosses they had won by valor. That is the kind of decorating that Canada covets for her citizens. The teamster and the farmer mean more to her than scores of titled Knights and Barons.

Lloyd George's Call.

(Regina Leader.)

The message from Premier Lloyd George addressed to the Governor-General of Canada for delivery to the Government of this Dominion is a call and a challenge to the statesmanship and manhood of Canada.

It is an urgent call. The Empire's great War Premier did not wait for the slower process of the mails; he flashed his message under the seas by cable.

It is a call for action—immediate action. The demand of the war situation is not for a few more small reinforcing units, mere dribbles of a few thousand men a month, 75,000 or $100,000 men spread over a year or more. Lloyd George calls for Canadian reinforcements "in the fullest possible measure, and with the least possible delay."

(Editorial in New York World.)

The appointment by Secretary Daniels of a Christian Scientist as navy chaplain denotes a significant change in the public attitude toward the faith founded by Mrs. Eddy.

Could such a selection of a spiritual adviser have been conceived of in Dewey's nacy? Christian Science then and long after was anathema to the regular religious denominations of the country. Legislation was invoked to restrain it, medical societies prosecuted the practitioners, and it was made to bear the brunt of a powerful opposition everywhere. Now the Government gives it full recognition and accords its readers an equal status with the ministers of other creeds. Besides the navy chaplain, there are two Christian Science chaplains in the army.

So have the old antagonisms subsided and the earlier intolerance given way under the spirit of religious freedom. History has repeated itself once more, and the new kirk fought its way to a place alongside the old kirk. It has been an interesting process, and the outcome is notable as an illustration of the liberalizing tendencies of modern opinion, whether religious or political.

"THEY SHALL NOT WANT"

In a moment of inspiration an advertising man recently hit upon the above four words as epitomizing the desire and determination of the people of Canada that the Armies of the Allies and the suffering peoples of the Allied nations of Europe shall be supplied with all that Canada can possibly furnish of the food stuffs necessary for their support in the energetic and successful prosecution of their struggle for the defeat of tyrannical Prussian aspirations.

Compressed in this little sentence is more real throbbing meaning than most full pages of printed matter contain. In sixteen letters it expresses the determination of a people that a great cause must be sustained at no matter what personal sacrifice.

"They shall not want."

How aptly these words also express the attitude of the NORMAL, HEALTHY-MINDED MAN towards, those who under our social system, naturally look to him for support and protection. As he thinks of the wife who has entrusted her future to his care and of the children whom he has brought into the world, his thought and determination is "THEY SHALL NOT WANT."

This is always the attitude of the normal, healthy-minded man who is willing to sacrifice, if need be, to attain this noble end.

A policy in the Sun Life of Canada provides the safest and most economical means of fulfilling this noble desire and determination and incidentally, if fortunately in time this mode of protection is no longer necessary he may himself reap the benefits of his savings and thrift.

Thus virtue has its own reward.

SHE SUFFERED FIVE YEARS

Finally Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Key West, Fla.—"For five years I suffered from irregularities, with terrible pains and an awful weakness in my back. The doctor gave me different medicines but they did me no good. A friend asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I found it to be the best medicine I ever tried because it made me well, and I can now do my housework. I am telling my friends about it."—Mrs. J. M. CAMUS, 726 Caroline St., Key West, Florida.

Many women at some period in their life suffer from ailments peculiar to their sex and which in most cases may be readily relieved by this famous root and herb medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, just as Mrs. Camus found it helped her after suffering for years and trying everything else in vain.

If you have any annoying symptoms you fail to understand, write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The results of their 40 years experience in advising women on this subject is at your service.

GIVEN SELF GOVERNMENT.

London, April 10.—Lloyd George said that Ireland would be given such self government as could be carried out without violent controversy.

Some Irish members declared in the House of Commons that the conscription proposals are declarations of war against Ireland. Joseph Devlin's motion to adjourn the Commons was defeated by a vote of 323 to 80.

ground about Givenchy and Bethune, which was the immediate German objective. The enemy attacks failed in both places.

Fresh Divisions.

Ten fresh divisions (120,000 men) of the best Bavarian troops were hurled repeatedly against the British on the high ground around Givenchy last night. Twice they captured the town, and wtice the British flung them back in pitch darkness, wielding bayonets, club and fists until remnants of the German stormers retreated. At the Bridge Head of the Lys, near Bac St. Maur, which the Germans held, there was similar fighting. At sundown the enemy pressed na back to La Croix Du Back (one mile north of the river) but the British counter attacked heavily and drove them back.

A big concentration of German guns was freely used in the forward and back areas as probable preparation for German attacks between Armentieres and Messines. There are no details regarding this activity.

PETERBOROUGH RED CROSS SOCIETY

The various reports which were presented at the regular monthly executive meeting of the local Red Cross, held on Monday, April 8th, showed that the various Auxiliaries put forth great efforts to keep forth commendable efforts to keep pace with the insistent call for supplies, which must necessarily come at this time from the headquarters for the various Overseas Hospitals, and proved indeed that to the individual workers the motto "Carry on" was no meaningless phrase.

That the special appeal which had been made a month ago to the Auxiliaries to concentrate for a few months more especially on grey flannel shirts and dressing gowns, had found a ready response, was evident in the increased number of these articles which had been sent in during March. Most gratifying is it to know that not only the five hundred head bandages, for which an urgent appeal was made through the local secretary, but almost six hundred had by the earnest efforts of willing workers, already been finished, packed and sent to headquarters for shipment overseas.

Mrs. Breyfogle, supervisor of the Library work room, reported an average attendance of 65 for March, the following supplies having been made:

3 dressing gowns.
16 suits of pyjamas.
10 grey flannel shirts.
60 personal property bags.
12 kit bags.
30 bed socks.
12 operation stockings.
30 many-tailed bandages.
12 head bandages.
48 stretcher caps.

SOCK COMMITTEE.

The following is the report of Miss Burnet, convenor of the Sock Committee:

Our Sock report for March shows a total of 1425 pairs received, being 326 pairs more than in February.

This remarkably good showing is made up as follows: From our individual knitters, 227 pairs. Contributions to Red Cross from our Auxiliaries amounted to 333 pairs, and were from the following societies:

Murray street church, 57 pairs.
Central Smith, 42 pairs.
Indian River, 26 pairs.
St. Peter's Patriotic League, 24 pairs.
North Monaghan, 18 pairs.
Lily Lake, 23 pairs.
St. Paul's church, 42 pairs.
Trinity church, 25 pairs.
Lakehurst, 18 pairs.
Mrs. Harrison, Lakehurst, 2 pairs.
"No name," 22 pairs.
Ebenezer Red Cross Club, 34 pairs, 22 pairs of the latter being bed socks.

For C.W.C.A. we have 524 pairs.
From Mrs. Magee, 10 pairs.
Teachers' Guild, 21 pairs.
Ashburnham Patriotic League, 126 pairs.
George street church, 18 pairs.
Mothers' Club, Y.M.C.A., 7 pairs.
St. Andrews' church, 42 pairs
St. Paul's church, 108 pairs.
57th Chapter I.O.D.E., 132 pairs
Otonabee Chap., I.O.D.E. 30 pairs
Trinity Church, 30 pairs, and from the machines 341 pairs.

The report of the Packing Committee for March is as follows:

Madam President, members of the Peterboro Red Cross, the Packing Committee report for the month of March, 37 cases shipped to St. John, 2 cases to Toronto, containing the following:

For St. John:
29 dressing gowns.
214 day shirts.
245 pairs pyjamas.
1580 pairs socks (402 C.W.C.A.)
31 pneumonia jackets.
123 sheets.
685 towels.
153 bed pads.
183 many tailed bandages.
For Toronto:
560 comfort bags.
14 kit bags.
94 p. p. bags.

How To Ascertain If You Have Catarrh

Look for Symptoms of This Treacherous Disease in the Following List.

"Is your breath bad?"
"Is your throat sore?"
"Do you cough at night?"
"Is your voice raspy?"
"Does your nose stop up?"
"Have you nasal discharge?"
"Do you spit up phlegm?"
"Has your nose an itchy feeling?"
"Have you pain across the eyes?"
"Is your throat irritable, weak?"
"Do you sleep with mouth open?"
"Are you subject to sneezing fits?"
"Do your ears roar and buzz?"
"Are you hard of hearing?"

If you have any of these indications of Catarrh, cure the trouble now—stop it before it gets into the lungs or bronchial tubes—then it may be too late. The remedy is "Catarrhozone," a direct breathable cure that places antiseptic balsams and healing medication on every spot that's tainted by catarrhal germs.

"No one can know better than I the enormous benefit one gets from the very first day's use of Catarrhozone," writes T. T. Hopkins, of Westvale, P. Q. "I had for years a stubborn case of bronchial catarrh, ear noises, headache, sore eyes, stopped-up nose and throat. It affected my appetite and made my breath rank. Catarrhozone cured quickly."

The dollar outfit last two months, and is guaranteed; smaller size, 50c., sample size, 25c., at all storekeepers and druggists, the The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

HODGENS BROS. LEAVING GODERICH.

Will Take Over Large Departmental Store Business at Peterborough.

There will be general regret, both in town and in country, at the announcement of the intended removal of Hodgens Bros.' drygoods business to Peterborough. The firm has been one of the most progressive in the county, and its removal will make a decided gap in Goderich's mercantile circle. Mr. H. E. Hodgens, who has been the sole manager of the business for some time (Mr. F. R. Hodgens being in Toronto), has actively promoted the business and other interests of the town, has been a member of the Public school trustee board for a dozen years or more, is secretary of the hospital board, a prominent member of the Board of Trade, and in other circles has given notably useful service. Goderich will indeed be very sorry to lose him.

The firm is taking over the Turnbull departmental store business at Peterborough, where with a large population, there is greater scope for Mr. Hodgens' abundant energy. The Peterborough store is said to be one of the finest mercantile buildings in the Province.

As announced in the advertising columns of The Signal this week, a special sale will be commenced on Saturday of this week in order to reduce the Goderich stock as much as possible within the next month, as the Peterborough business is to be taken over early in May.—Clinton New Era.

WAR IS RAPIDLY REMOVING THE NOBILITY OF GERMANY.

Amsterdam, April 9.—The heavy drain of the war on German nobility is shown by the latest issues of Gotha's Genealogical manuals. Summarized by the Kolnische Volks Zeitung, the manuals show these losses:

270 members of families of counts.
633 members of baronial families.
843 members of the old nobility.
836 of the patent nobility.

Fair Directors Working On Big Changes To Grounds

Giving their time and labour free, for the good of the cause of agricultural exhibition, which Mr. W. F. Kay, M.P. for Mississquoi, Que., would suspend until the war is over, a group of the directors of the Peterborough Fair Board have plowed, scraped and levelled the Fair Grounds from the George Street entrance in a long stretch to the grand stand. Later, this will be seeded and rolled, and will present a level surface, instead of the succession of holes and ditches over which the crowds stumbled along the midway.

Messrs. W. J. Cox, John Gillespie, Smith Milburn, C. E. Moore, Albert Roberts, W. Steinkrauss, A. Houston, Ormie Ball, O. Gibbs and others, farmers every one of them, brought in plows, scrapers and other implements, and in the last two days have accomplished wonders. North Monaghan Township loaned its grader, and every detail was provided for.

MAY MOVE BUILDING.

A conference with Mr. Huffman had been arranged this afternoon by the Executive, who have decided to move the exhibition building, if this idea is feasible. If that is carried out, the midway will extend from the Lock Street entrance all the way to the grand stand. The pig pens will be removed in a short time to a place out in the grounds near the cattle pens. This will keep all the animal exhibits together, and will offer better facilities for the concessions that make the midway.

A new gate has been cut, opening into the grounds from the foot of George Street, and the directors intend to ornament it with arch worthy of the central approach. The secretary's office will be between the new and the old gate in that section, and will open into Lansdowne Street, thus enabling exhibitors to obtain information, entry forms and other details without cluttering up the tent as in the past.

The judges' stand opposite the grand stand will be moved about one hundred feet along the track, "bleachers" are proposed to increase the grand stand accommodation, and other alterations are under consideration.

BAND INSTRUMENT MATTER TO BE OPENED AGAIN

As the result of the action of a number of citizens who feel that as the 93rd Band instruments were purchased by public subscription for the use of overseas men, they should not become the property of the Great War Veterans, the whole question of the disposition of the instruments is likely to be opened again. A number of these citizens waited upon the Executive of the Great War Veterans at their meeting last night and suggested the possibility that some amicable arrangements could be arrived at between the City Council and the Veterans. A joint committee, representing the citizens and Veterans, will discuss the details at a later meeting this week, and will present a proposition to the general meeting of the Veterans to be held next Monday night.

The G.W.V.A. Executive decided last night to accept the offer of the 57th Regiment Band to head their church parade to St. John's Church on Sunday, April 21, when the Veterans will attend divine service in commemoration of the anniversary of the battle of Ypres.

Machine Gun Operated To "Scare" Crowd

Special to the Examiner:

QUEBEC CITY, April 10.—Major G. B. Rodgers, who had command of a regiment of the troops on duty the night that four civilians were killed during the rioting, said his orders were to subdue trouble as much as possible by the simple presence of troops, and to fire among the crowd at the last possible moment, and avoid bloodshed if possible. It was not until he himself saw rioters shoot from housetops, and other points of vantage, that he gave the order for the machine gun to fire. The gun was operating only a few seconds just to "scare" the crowd. He was positive that the machine gun bullets hit no one. All those hit, he said, were touched by stray bullets. All the men in his command were draftees, but some officers were returned from France.

Tired Nerves

TIRED out after sewing! What a common experience, whether the work is done by hand or machine. It is not so much on account of the muscular exertion as because of the strain on the eyes.

You feel tired all over, because the nerves are exhausted. The optic nerve, which controls sight, is extremely sensitive, and when in constant use consumes nerve force at a tremendous rate. If the nervous system is not in good, healthy condition this strain is more than you can stand, and you have headaches, and feel all tired out.

Many people feel the same way after a shopping tour, from riding on a train, or doing any work which requires the continued use and focussing of the eyes. Many are wearing glasses when what they really need is a nerve restorative, such as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, to build up the exhausted nervous system.

By supplying to the tired, wornout nerves the elements from which new nerve force is created Dr. Chase's Nerve Food reconstructs the wasted nerve cells. Headaches, dizzy spells, sleeplessness and tired feelings soon disappear, and you find yourself feeling better in every way.

It is worth your while to give this treatment a thorough trial, for the whole system is benefited, and the results are lasting.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Presentation To Rev. J. J. Robbins

Church Was Artistically Decorated With Flowers—Special Services.

MOUNT JULIAN, April 10. — On Easter Sunday a very interesting and impressive service was held in Holy Trinity Anglican church. The rector, Rev. J. J. Robbins, conducted both the communion and regular service. He delivered a very interesting sermon on "This is the day which the Lord hath made, we will rejoice and be glad in it." (Ps. 118: 24), which was appreciated by the large congregation present. The church was artistically decorated with flowers.

The parishioners of the church waited upon Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Robbins and presented them with an address and sum of money. The address was read by Mr. R. C. Strickland, and Mr. Wm. Thompson made the presentation:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Robbins,—We the parishioners of Holy Trinity church embrace this opportunity to give expression to a commingled feeling of regret, reverence and gratitude.

It is with feelings of deep regret we have learned that you are about to depart from our midst, but we cannot let you go without expressing our deep and sincere affection for you both.

We fully appreciate your painstaking work in our behalf during the past three years. You have always been ready and willing to assist in every way possible in the welfare of our church, Sunday school and community, and we shall greatly miss your wise and skillful guidance. In times of trouble and sickness you were ever ready to prove yourselves to be True, sympathetic friends. We know that many a time you have greatly inconvenienced yourselves to be with us to guide and comfort us when we needed the guidance of a true friend and counsellor.

We wish to assure you we have been benefitted, helped and inspired to higher and nobler lives by your presence. Your unfailing kindness has endeared you to us and we feel deeply this separation from us. We assure you that you carry away with you from each and all of us the warmest feelin of friendship and we will gladly welcome you whenever an opportunity occurs for you to revisit us.

As a slight token of our past pleasant associations and our personal esteem we ask you to accept this sum of money.

We wish you every s your new parish and trust you may long enjoy good health.

We hope and pray when your work and ours is done on earth we may all meet in heaven.

Signed on behalf of the congregation.

Wm. Thompson, W. G. Stone, Wardens.

Mr. Robbins was completely taken by surprise, so much so he could scarcely give utterance to his feelings. He spoke in a very deep, feeling manner, thanking them for their gift and also for their kindness during the time spent amongst them. He said he had come to this mission inspired by the grace of God to labour faithfully and to do his utmost to lead us all to a higher mode of life and emphasized the need of the tie, Jesus Christ, to link our hearts in Christian love.

Mrs. Robbins spoke a few words, thanking the people for all their kindness during the past and said that they hoped to be with them again next summer at our annual picnic.

Rev. Mr. Robbins is going to Burk's Junction. His farewell service is Sunday, April 14th.

The Easter service was held on Sunday last in Eden Methodist church. The church was beautifully decorated with Easter lilies and roses. The pastor, Rev. S. Carr, preached a splendid Easter sermon on "Why seek ye the living among the dead? He is risen." (Luke, 24: 5-6.) Special Easter music was rendered.

Montreal Pair Plead Guilty To Theft Of Horse

Edmond Gaulin and Roland Laramie, the two Montreal boys who pleaded guilty yesterday in County Magistrate Langley's court to burglarizing two Ennismore homes on Sunday, this morning appeared before Magistrate Dumble and admitted having stolen a horse and buggy valued at $160 from Wm. McLure of Brampton. They were remanded for a week for sentence, the city deferring to the county's responsibility of disposing of the two youths. They are 17 and 18 years old, and show all the signs of forced travel.

They will be sentenced by Magistrate Langley on Tuesday, April 16th at 9:30 a.m. The city police have written to Montreal and other cities for the boys' records if they have any.

Frank Bedore, who pleaded guilty to a charge of vagrancy, will also appear on Tuesday. He was arrested near McCracken's Landing.

ENTERTAINMENT AT THE T.A.S.

Sparkling with good natured humour, "Aunt Margaret's First Luncheon," the little play put on by St. Peter's Young Women's Sodality, in St. Alphonsus Lyceum, last night, was a great success. The young ladies conducted themselves with that ease before the large audience, which is so necessary to the success of an amateur presentation, and displayed considerable talent.

THE PLAY.

The play was an amusng sketch of the arrival of a country cousin at a luncheon given by her newly rich cousins, who are climbing into society through aristocratic acquaintances. The play wound up in a very up-to-date fashion, when the despised aunt becomes the heroine by asking the city friends to come to the farm, and aid in Greater Production.

THE CAST.

Mrs. Travers: Miss Florence Leahy
Elizabeth Travers: Miss Goodfriend
Aun Margaret: Miss M. McCormack.
Mrs. Cartwright: Miss S. Collins.
Mrs.: Miss L. Godfrey.
Annette: Miss M McGrath.
Mary: Miss Kirby.
Gertrude: Miss G. Clancy.

THE MUSIC.

The music of the entertainment was conducted under the skilful and talented direction of Miss Lillian Hurley, who had trained her chorus to such a fine degree that their splendid work could not fail to be a compliment to the work of their leader.

THE PROGRAMME.

The chorus, "Sussex by the Sea," by the young ladies of the Sodality, opened the evening. This was followed by the play. The next item, "There's a Ship that's Bound for Blighty," by the chous, was well received. Miss Regina Hill' violin solo accompanied by Miss L. Hill, was an item which afforded great pleasure.

Miss Gertrude Clancy's solo, with chorus by the cast of the play, was rendered with remarkable sweetness of tone, and she was enthusiastically encored.

Mr. V. J. MacElderry gave an interesting talk on Food Production, showing the great need of farm laborers, both from the young ladies and the young men.

THE TABLEAU.

Charmingly effective was the closing item of a tableau, "Our Allies," in which the young ladies were prettily attired to represent the different allies, and stood with a back ground of the allied flags.

Britannia: Miss V. Carveth.
Canada: Miss L. Callaghan.
France: Miss E. Archambault.
United States: Miss M. Doris.
Belgium: Miss Burns.
Italy: Miss E. Tagney.
Scotland: Miss Derocher
Ireland: Miss V. Hickey.
Red Cross Nurse: Miss C. Delaire.
Sailor: Miss M. Gorham.
Soldier: Miss Warner.

Too much credit cannot be given to the officers of the Sodality, who were reponsible for the scenic effects and decorations, which represented a worki of work, and a triumphant accomplishment, and ended in the tableau.

Murray St. Fire Believed To Be Incendiary's Work

Last night's fire at Patrick Anglesey's house, 315 Murray street, had all the appearances of an incendiary origin, according to Sergt. Blade's report. His statement to Chief Thompson says: "I beg to report that at 12:10 a.m. I caught the fire truck and went to a fire at 315 Murray street. It was in an outhouse at the end of a stable, back of the house. The quick response of the Fire Department to the alarm sent in by Thos. Detcher, night watchman at the Wm. Hamilton Co. plant, no doubt prevented a bad fire, which in a few minutes would have been in the stable, which contained a valuable team of work horses the property of Mr. Anglesey.

"The fire which was soon extinguished was from all appearances by some one as yet unknown by means of pouring coal oil on the wall back of the door in the outhouse. Chief Grange and I examined the building closely after the fire, and are both quite sure it was incendiary, as it started about a foot or so off the floor, and there was no waste paper or other material on the floor that would cause a fire to start."

GARMENTS OF THE MOMENT

With Each One We Assure You of Style, Quality and Economy

The fashionable woman must have fashionable clothes, yet with the cry of economy ever ringing in her ears, she hesitates about buying expensive garments. At the Redfern Store they had this uppermost in their minds when they chose the news pring stock so now they can offer you exactly what you want, that is a garment that is of the latest style, well tailored of good material at a very moderate price.

Miss 1918 Charmingly Clad in a Separate Coat

We have some stunning models. Colors, fabrics, weaves and styles are a very pleasing study. Here you will find a varied and most attractive array of coats. There is a fineness in the tailoring and a goodness in the materials that is hard to describe, you must see for yourself and then you will be delighted with the moderate prices.

One very fashionable model is made of wool velour in the new castor shade, it has a pleated back with a crossed belt arrangement that fastens with smoked pearl buttons. This is a most practical coat because it will answer splendidly for a summer wrap as well as a very correct garment for spring wear.

New Silk Skirts

What is more charming than a smart skirt of silk worn with a dainty, alluring blouse, one of the beautiful creations that they have fashioned for this season?

We have many styles and shades in silk skirts, and here is one that you are sure to think particularly attractive. Made of chiffon taffeta showing stripes of black, tan and blue in a most elusive way and trimmed with novelty pockets and clusters of buttons. Quite simple 'tis true, but therein lies its wonderful charm. It is very moderately priced.

Sweater Innovations

A sweater has come to be a most necessary part of Milady's wardrobe and never before have their fashions been so diversified, colors so gay or styles so smart.

A brushed wool sweater coat is one of this season's most popular models. We have them in different styles, some with sailor collars and belts, and in a combination of colors, rose and white, green and white, and other charming shades.

WARD OF THE CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY DISAPPEARS

Detectives Have Failed to Locate the Girl—Regular Monthly Meeting of the Society—The Wage Schedule

Following the recent investigation into the case of a boy of 19 years of age who had, after several years of service with a farmer at Burketon, received no remuneration, the Children's Aid Society will make organized efforts to see that a change is made.

The agent, Mr. G. W. Powell, on request, presented at the monthly meeting yesterday afternoon a carefully prepared report of the wards of the Society, showing that of 136 wards, 97 in the city and 39 in the county, 51 are over 14 years of age and 85 under. Of the fifty-one over age, twenty-one are without agreement for wages.

Wage Schedule.

Mr. Powell received a letter from Mr. Kelso advising a fixed schedule of wages for wards of over 14.

Committee to Investigate.

No fixed schedule for wages can be imposed upon the foster parents of a ward of the society on account of the dissimilitude of the cases involved. Foster parents who bring up their adopted children as their own with an education, cannot be made pay the child a fixed rate. Therefore a committee to investigate the individual cases must be appointed.

On motion of Rev. Father Phelan, a committee of Mr. Wearing Commandant McElhiney and Mr. Powell, was appointed and they will investigate the individual cases.

An Understanding.

Chief Thompson thought that all people adopting a child should thoroughly understand the conditions under which they take him, but that too hard and fast a rule could not be laid down, as the Society is dependent on the hospitality of the public fo rthe care of the children, and the Society does not want the Home overcrowded, a condition which would probably arise shuld rules become too stringent.

Matron's Report.

The matron's report showed that during March, 16 children had passed through the Shelter, 6 had been put out, 5 cannot be put out, and 5 will be placed out presently. There are at present 3 children in the Shelter, with 10 applications. The abandoned Jackson baby is still in the home.

Mr. Powell's Report.

The agent's report showed 6 applications for children, 1 brought in which is not a ward, 34 involved during the month, 1 made a ward, 8 complaints, 5 wards placed out and 1 returned.

Lillian Martin.

Lillian Martin, the 16 year old ward who was on Mr. G. N. Gordon's recommendation, sent to Toronto, and later disappeared, has left her disappearance still a mystery. No clue has bee found to the girl by the detectives.

March Financial Report.

Kingan Hardware Co., $7.00; A. E. Dixon, $1.20; E. F. Masoon, $12.53; Wilfrid Brown, $14.65; H. B. Taylor, $5.50; John Huxley, $5.83; Telephone, $12.70; Light acte., $1.75; Water acct., 67c.; Mrs. Read, $1.60; Jopling & Sons $3.49; Stock & Sons, $11.43; Warne Drug Co., $1.89; Higgins Co., 60c.; Thos. Yost, $3.00; Thos. Hooper, $8.00; ;Review, $5.50; G. W. Powell, $3.99; Matthews-Blackwell, $1.20. Total, $101.88.

An Example.

The youngest of the Brown children, who was adopted by a family in the city, was exhibited. "A different looking child to what she was," said Mr. Wearing, as the pretty little girl was taken out.

A Contribution.

Mr. Powell acknowledged a gift of $5.00 from Lizzie S. Wood on behalf of the Sixth Line, Indian River Sunday school.

Those Present.

Mr. E. A. Peck occupied the chair. Others present were: Father Phelan, Mrs. Stocker, Mrs. Gibbs, Mrs. McElhiney, Mrs. Hopwood, Mrs. Evans, Mr. Wearing, Dr. King, Mr. Pennyfather, Mr. Parsons, Mr. Poowell, Commandant McElhiney, Ald. Edgar, Mayor Duncan and Chief Thompson.

LARGE AMERICAN CASUALTY LIST

(Special to The Examiner.)

Washington, April 10.—The largest single casualty list to date issued by the War Department contained 283 names, divided as follows: Five killed in action, three dead of wounds, eleven of disease, seven of accidents, ten wounded severely, 245 wounded slightly and two missing in action.

Eighteen Water Services Broken By Frost's Effect

Eighteen water services have been broken by the frost, and several of them on George street are beneath the pavement and sidewalks which have to be gashed to reach the fractured pipes. Six of the services have been repaired, and workmen were engaged to-day on a break in the water pipe leading into the store of Wm. Lech and Sons. The pavement has been torn up at this point and there is an excavation through the sidewalk to reach the service into Trebilcock's store. The pavement will also be lifted at Edinburgh St., and the sidewalk in front of Carey's shoe store will also be pierced.

Mr. Ross Dobbin, superintendent of the Water Works Department, stated that the frost had penetrated to a depth of more than six feet on George street, the level at which the water mains were laid. Apparently, the most vulnerable strip was directly beneath the street car tracks. It was under that section that the most damage to the water services was found.

WONDERFUL REMEDY EXTRAORDINARY MERIT

Extract from article (dated Nov. 20, 15) on the ADULTERATION OF OOD & DRUGS, by UNITED STATES FOOD SPECIALIST.

SWAIZEMA is a blood purifier and tonic builder of extraordinary merit. There came to my notice while in Kitchener a case in which a most miraculous cure was affected through this wonderful remedy. A gentleman whose injured leg, caused by a simple "bark of the skin" as he termed it had developed into a running ulcerated sore. For two years eminent Specialists had treated, at enormous expense, the injured limb, without success. He was induced to try SWAIZEMA, which resulted in an absolute cure, and this with the purchase of two bottles only. The case in question coming, as it did, under my own personal observation, warrants me in telling readers of this page of one of the most remarkable "short cuts" to health I have ever seen. (Name on request.)

SPEECH WILL NOT BE DELIVERED

Zurich, April 10. — Chancellor Hertling's decision to abandon his Reichstag speech is attributed here to General Ludendorff's threat to resign if Hertling or Austrian Foreign Minister Czernin again speak of peace.

It is understood that the Kaiser advised the abandonment of Hertling's intention.

Military News

The next call for draftees will likely require them to report at the Depot Battalion on the 16th and 17th. As an economic measure, Saturday and Monday are not selected as reporting days, Sunday falling between occasioning expense in travel both to the Government and the draftee.

All previous orders regarding discharge of N.C.O.'s and men of the Canadian Expeditionary Force are suspended. From this date men of 'E' category only will be discharged. All men of 'B' and 'C' Categories not required for other units under existing orders will be transferred to Special Service Companies pending formation of garrison battalions.

False information presented to the various exemption tribunals is coming to light steadily, by information sent in by acquaintances of applicants for exemption. Major H. P. Cooke is in receipt of a great nuuber of letters from all parts of the district. These state alleged facts which would indicate that certain named men were not entitled to the consideration shown them by the exemption boards.

In these cases the correspondence is turned over to Lieut.-Col. Street and his staff of military representatives to secure all possible information. If the alleged facts are verified the case is reopened before a tribunal and the previous decision reversed. Many of these are pending the receipt of further information.

In connection with such revision of cases the major said that there are several questionaries in use. The man receiving such a questionaire is bound to answer the questions, and in this way much valuable information is secured.

Pte. Bullied Guest of Honour

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Silas Bullied, 231 Princess street, on the evening of April 9th, about sixty people gathered to honour Pte. Victor Bullied, who was wounded in the Battle of Vimy Ridge one year ago this date; also to celebrate the anniversary of the same battle. The early part of the evening as taken up with music and games, after which a sumptuous supper was served by the hostess, which was very much appreciated by all present. After supper Mr. W. H. Moore gave a brief address and the Maple Leaf was sung.

Milk Test For Month Of April

Board of Health Did Not Endorse Proposal to Raise Standard

The milk test for the month of April was submitted at last night's meeting of the Board of Health. The required standard is three per cent. A letter was received from the Deputy Minister of Agriculture suggesting that the milk standard be raised to 3.25. The Board did not appear to be very enthusiastic over the suggestion. It was claimed that a larger quantity of the milk would go to Toronto if the standard was raised. Mayor Duncan said the April milk test was the poorest that has been received in months.

GLAD PLAY SEATS TO-MORROW

The seat sale for "Pollyanna," the Glad Play, which comes to the Grand Opera House on next Saturday, matinee and night, April 13th, opens at the box office to-morrow morning. To play the Glad Game which Miss Collings introduced in this play to the atregoers the past two seasons, you must be in line early. Be glad you can be there to buy for yourself and for your friends. You will not only enjoy this charming play, but your friends will be glad to have seen it, and you will be glad that you gave them the opportunity to be glad. Pollyanna is a lovable young girl who humanizes all sorts of gloomy, despondent persons by sheer force of magnetism, personality, quaint expression and happy example. Comedy, sentiment, and a thrill of the romantic are blended in "Pollyanna." "Pollyanna" is a wonderful book—it makes an even more wonderful play. The appeal of this message of gladness is one of the most sweeping ever sent across the footlights. It is universal, it knows no creed, no class or condition. It goes straight to the hearts of all manner of people, the young and the old, the grave and the gay, the sophisticated and the unsophisticated. "Be Glad" is the keynote it rings out.

The Glad cast includes Patricia Collinge, Oswald Yorke, Beatrice Morgan, Joseph Jefferson, Mattie Ferguson Stephen Davis, Helen Weathersby, Glenn Hunter, Maud Hosford, Harry Barfoot and Selma Hall.

FOOD IS WASTED BY OVER-EXERCISE

London, April 9.—The man who deliberately takes unnecessary exercise wastes an equivalent of food, according to Dr. Robt. Hutchison, a dietetic expert at West London Hospital, and, on this assumption, he strongly objects to athletics at the present time. He believes that Britons can suffer ten per cent. reduction in weight without endangering their health.

Other dietetic experts expressed the opinion that the recent enormous consumption of fish and rabbits in this country instead of the red beef of old England is reducing the British waistline, but so far is making the people healthier. Less exercise and more sleep is advocated by Dr. Hutchison to retard loss of weight.

MOVE TO FILL FOUR VACANT SEATS IN THE LEGISLATURE

Bye-election Will Likely Be Held Sometime in June—May Be a Contest in All Four Constituencies

Special to Examiner.)

Toronto, April 10.—It is likely that when Sir William Hearst returns to the city in a week's time, writs will be issued for the holding of elections to fill the four vacant seats in the Provincial Legislature.

It was learned to-day on good authority that the elections would likely be held at the same time.

The four vacant seats are North Oxford, vacated by Hon. N. W. Rowell, Lennox and Addington, the late Dr. Carscadden, Manitoulin, the late R. R. Gamey, and North Huron, Mr. A. H Musgrove, who was given the position of postmaster at Wingham.

MAY BE CONTEST.

The action of the farmers in North Oxford, who at their meeting at Woodstock, expressed the determination to nominate a candidate of their own, may complicate matters.

There is an agreement at present between the party leaders whereby the Liberals are to retain North Oxford and the Conservatives are to get three seats formerly held by their members; but if other candidates are nominated it is possible that there may be contests in all the four constituencies.

ELECTIONS IN JUNE.

Eight weeks must elapse between nomination day and election day, according to the act that was passed at the last session of the Legislature, and this will likely mean that the elections will not be held for some time in June. It was not believed that there would be any necessity for elections to be held, and this is the reason that the eight weeks period was fixed so that in case there is more than one nomination there may be time to prepare the lists.

THE RUMMAGE SALE AT THE SPRING FAIR

The different booths will represent the Allied nations, and the attendants dressed in the costume of the different countries. Dinner daily 12 to 2 o'clock.

Barns Destroyed At Mount Pleasant

Large Quantity of Grain and Hay Destroyed, Also Five Calves

A fire started near Mount Pleasant, on the farm of W. R. Shields, Peterborough. Mr. and Mrs. Garnet Shields, occupants of the farm, were on a visit to Bethany, and Mr. W. R. Shields was in charge when the fire took place. The barn and pig-pen were entirely destroyed, also 1000 bushels of oats,

50 bushels of wheat,
25 tons of hay,
A large quantity of alfalfa, and 5 spring calves.

All the farm implements, including binder and separator, were destroyed, besides a collie dog. The cause of the fire is unknown. It is only partly covered by insurance.

THE NEW FIRE HOSE WAS TESTED YESTERDAY

TWO THOUSAND FEET HAS BEEN PLACED IN COMMISSION.

The 2000 feet of fire hose recently purchased by the Fire, Water and Light Committee of the City Council was tested yesterday afternoon at the fire station in the presence of His Worship the Mayor, Ald. Dobbin, Weir, Jones, City Clerk Armstrong, Mr. Felderman of the Dunlop Tire and Rubber Goods Co., from whom the hose was purchased, and the Chief of the Fire Department. The hose is double jacketed, rubbed lined, 2 1-2 inches in diameter.

The hose had been placed in three piles. Ald. Weir picked out single lengths from the piles. These were placed on the hose tester and given 300 lbs. pressure. Before being tested the hose was measured and again after the pressure was on, each length stretching 3 feet 2 1-2 inches under pressure and reeding to its normal length when the pressure was removed. One length was given 350 lbs. and stretched 3 feet 11 inches. In use at a fire the hose would be called upon to stand only from 90 to 130 lbs. pressure from hydrants, and probably 260 lbs. under engine pressure.

The Chief of the Department and the members of the Council who were present expressed themselves as highly pleased with the quality of the hose purchased.

Had Suffered Fifteen Years

Rodd Delighted With the Way Tanlac is Overcoming His Trouble

"When a man has suffered as long as I have and had about given up hope of ever getting well, to find relief at last through taking a medicine within the reach of everybody sounds almost miraculous, but that's what has happened in my case," recently said Fred J. Rodd, of 322 Parliament street Toronto, an employee of the British Forging Company.

"I believe that for fifteen years," continued Mr. Rodd, "I had the worse case of stomach trouble anybody ever had. My appetite was gone, nothing tasted right and the little I forced down soured and I was constantly belching up gas and acid water. I couldn't eat meat at all and many a time after taking a few mouthfuls of food I would turn deathly sick and vomit up everything I had eaten and I would have to skip two or three meals before I could eat anything else. Gas pressed around my heart and made it act so strangely that I would become alarmed. I would actually get numb all over, my eyes would blur as if I was going blind, I felt like I was paralyzed and would be in such agony I couldn't move or hardly speak. My head ached like it would split and my sufferings were almost more than I could bear.

"I tried about everything I could hear of but nothing helped me and finally hearing so much about Tanlac I decided to try it. I am on my third bottle and my relief is something wonderful. My appetite has returned, I can eat most or anything else and relish every mouthful. I never have a touch of my old trouble, gas has stopped forming and I have never had one of those awful spells with my heart since I started on my first bottle. I am stronger and better in every way and am so delighted with the way Tanlac is straightening me out that I want everybody to know it."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd. In Havelock by A. C. Denike. In Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd. In Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter. In Geiert by A. J. Scott. In Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

CITZENS ADVISED TO SECURE COAL SUPPLY EARLY

His Worship Mayor Duncan has received the following letter, which is self explanatory:

Ottawa, Ont., April 9, 1918.

The Mayor, Peterborough, Ont.

Advised rumour circulating in Peterborough that the coal supply for next winter must be produced before May 1st. In order to ensure same any such statement is without foundation in fact while desirable and prudent to secure supplies as early as possible in summer there is absolutely no reason for uneasiness or panic. Please reassure consumers and give this message currency in press.

Shipbuilders Reach An Agreement At Collingwood

Several Trades Unions Affected—A Nine-Hour Day

Special to the Examiner:

TORONTO, April 10.—The boilermakers and iron shipbuilders in the Collingwood ship yards have reached an agreement with the Collingwood Shipbuilding Company, by which the men obtain an average increase in wages of 25 to 30 per cent. a nine-hour day instead of a ten-hour, recognition of the Grievance Committee of the men and a signed agreement with the company for a year, commencing April 9. This is the outcome of the Board of Conciliation and Investigation which recently convened in Collingwood. The chairman of the Board was Hammett P. Hill, of Ottawa. Fred. Bancroft, of Toronto, represented the men, and Capt. J. B. Foote the company. This is the first settlement of shipyard conditions since the conference in Ottawa, called by the Government between the representatives of the shipyards east of Port Arthur and the representatives of the trades unions affected in the shipyards. At Collingwood about 700 men are directly affected. Overtime is to be paid at the rate of time and quarter on all work and on holidays.

LIVE STOCK MARKET

TORONTO, April 10.—One feature of the Union Stock Yards this morning was the larger number of immature calves arriving for sale. Government inspectors would not allow them to be put on the market. The tendency of prices for calves was weaker. Cattle were generally steady and firm, while hogs dropped to 20 cents. Receipts: 644 cattle, 715 calves, 1,121 hogs and 36 sheep. Export cattle $12 to $13; export bulls $9 to $10.50; butchers' cattle $10.75 to $11.75; butchers' cows $9 to $10.50; butchers' bulls $8.75 to $9; feeding steers $8.75 to $10.50; sheep, ewes $13 to $15; lambs $19.25 to $20.50; hogs, fed and watered $20; calves, choice $15 to $16.

WLLL GET AFTER THE MILK VENDORS

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Health was held last night.

Sanitary Inspector Stapleton was instructed to inform all milk vendors whose milk was below standard that they would be prosecuted if it was not 3 per cent. next time.

Dr. Amys suggested that the milk be graded A, B, and C, and a sign put on the milk wagon, or that the grade be published in the papers. This motion was shelved.

Chairman Langford suggested that the laboratory for milk tests be refitted, which was seconded by Dr. Amys and carried.

How To Make a Real Wrinkle Remover

In these days of cleverly advertised "beautifiers" and "rejuvenators" it is hard for a woman to believe she can make a simple home remedy for the removal of wrinkles which will do her much more good than the average made preparation. There's nothing in the world so effective for erasing or preventing wrinkles, age marks, baginess of cheeks and chin as a simple and harmless solution made by dissolving an ounce of pure powdered saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel. These ingredients of course can be had at any drug store. Use the mixture daily for a while as a refreshing wash lotion. The quick and satisfactory results will surprise you. Even the first application produces very marked improvement. The wrinkles are less in evidence and the face has a firm, "solid," comfortable feeling. Soon you will look considerably less than your age.

Telephone Economy

The Need of the Hour

THE vital need of the hour is for economy!

¶ We are urged to save, to conserve our resources. Nothing is so important, so pressing.

¶ We must economize, we are told, in food, in fuel, in clothing, in railway travel—all along the line, in order that the war efforts of our Empire and its Allies may have a clear track to victory.

¶ The telephone, by the very nature of the work it does, is a powerful agent making for economy and efficiency. Without it, business would slow down with a fatal reaction on war effort.

¶ But the increasing scarcity of telephone material of all kinds, and of skilled labor demands that our subscribers should practice a rigid telephone economy—

¶ That they should order only such telephone equipment as is indispensable—

¶ That they should be careful of present telephone apparatus in home or office so as to avoid breakage and repairs—

¶ That they should refrain from unnecessary telephone conversations and make their talks brief so as to keep the lines open for the next caller.

¶ We ask your co-operation in our efforts to keep our service equal to war-time demands.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

SPORTING COMMENT

Eddie Collins is moving swiftly in the practice games of the White Sox and probably will have another big year.

President Weeginham declares that the Cubs will win the pennant. He said the same thing when he supplanted Roger Bresnahan with Joe Tinker.

Matty made a wise move when he landed Pitcher George Foster. The former Beaneater can pitch a well as ever when he feels in the mood, and Matty probably will know how to handle him.

Joe Bush of the Red Sox is starting off well. He ought to pitch many winning games this year.

McGraw will carry more pitchers than last year. He doesn't intend to be caught napping again.

Boston fans had figured that Catcher Walter Tragesser would be in the army during the 1918 season, but it develops that he has been placed in Class 3 in the draft.

The great Sisler is playing in old-time form. He is worth may thousands of dollars to Owner Ball, of the St. Louis Browns.

"Hack" Eibel, the first baseman purchased by the Red Sox from Richmond, had a tryout with the Cleveland club when Harry Davis was manager of the Indians.

When the Pirates visit Brooklyn George Cutshaw and Casey Stegel intend to show the fans that they are not back numbers.

Scott Perry is pitching fine ball for the Athletics, and Connie Mack feels encouraged. If Mack can get even fairly good pitching his team may climb out of the cellar.

Ben Shaw, a young catcher, who is south with the Pirates was, secured via the waiver route from the Yankees.

"A MORMON MAID"
With MAE MURRAY

Lifted by a relentless Fate from their tiny world, where all was sunshine and flowers, and taken into the youthful Salt Lake Colony, about which ugly rumors had been whispered, the little family of three found themselves prospering beyond their wildest dreams. But, they soon learned there was a string tied to all this wealth and happiness.

It came out one day when the father was forced to take a second wife, despite the fact that he and his beloved helpmeet were just as much married as on the day they took their vows at the altar. Then their charming little daughter was chosen as the sixth wife of the powerful "Apostle," and told to prepare herself for the "celestial ceremony." But all these plans were made in ignorance of the youth to whom little Dora had given her heart, and who had pledged himself to the little family's welfare.

How the "Apostle's covetous designs were frustrated by the girl, how she killed him just as he was about to capture her, and how they escaped from the City of the Saints makes "A Mormon Maid" a photo-drama that you cannot afford to miss.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

SPORTING COMMENT

Eddie Collins is moving swiftly in the practice games of the White Sox and probably will have another big year.

President Weeghman declares that the Cubs will win the pennant. He said the same thing when he supplanted Roger Bresnahan with Joe Tinker.

Matty made a wise move when he landed Pitcher George Foster. The former Bearcater can pitch a well as ever when he feels in the mood, and Matty probably will know how to handle him.

Joe Bush of the Red Sox is starting off well. He ought to pitch many winning games this year.

McGraw will carry more pitchers than last year. He doesn't intend to be caught napping again.

Boston fans had figured that Catcher Walter Tragesser would be in the army during the 1918 season, but it develops that he has been placed in Class 3 in the draft.

The great Sisler is playing in old-time form. He is worth may thousands of dollars to Owner Ball, of the St. Louis Browns.

"Hack" Eibel, the first baseman purchased by the Red Sox from Richmond, had a tryout with the Cleveland club when Harry Davis was manager of the Indians.

When the Pirates visit Brooklyn George Cutshaw and Casey Stegel intend to show the fans that they are not back numbers.

Scott Perry is pitching fine ball for the Athletics, and Connie Mack feels encouraged. If Mack can get even fairly good pitching his team may climb out of the cellar.

Ben Shaw, a young catcher, who is south with the Pirates was, secured via the waiver route from the Yankees.

WEDDING BELLS

BEEBE—LORD.

The home of Mrs. G. A. Lord, of con 1, South Monaghan township, was the scene of a quiet wedding at 2 p. m. on April 3rd, 1918, when her daughter, A. May, became the wife of George N. Beebe, son of William A. Beebe, of Hope township. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. M. W. Leigh, B.A., pastor of the circuit. The bride, in a beautiful gown of white silk, was given away by her twin brother, Walter, and was unattended.

After the congratulations and the signing of the register, in which the names of Dawson J. Beebe and Maud Lord were placed as witnesses, the wedding dinner was served and enjoyed by the twenty-seven guests. The happy couple drove to Port Hope, where they took the evening train for Toronto. On their return they will reside at their home, on lot 17, con. 2, South Monaghan, Bailieboro, R.R. No. 1.

At a miscellaneous shower held a few evenings before the wedding, many of the neighbours left tokens of good will and other useful and valuable souvenirs were left by friends on the wedding day.

Among the guests from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lord, of Garden Hill, Mr. and Mrs. John Lord of Bowmanville, Mrs. (Dr.) McKenzie of Warren Road, Toronto and her son Fred, 2nd Lieut. R.F.C., Mrs. F. Sneyd and Mrs. G. Clarke, of Port Hope and other near relatives of the bride and groom.

GAINER—STARK.

At St. Paul's manse at 3 o'clock this afternoon, the wedding was quietly solemnized of Jean Stark and William George Henry Gainer, both of South Monaghan. They were unattended. They will reside in South Monaghan.

HOWSON—McINTYRE.

At the family residence, Otonabee, the wedding was quietly solemnized this evening of Teenie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John A. McIntyre, and Herbert Christopher Howson, son of Mr. Christopher Howson, of Keene. The wedding was attended by a large number of invited guests.

OBITUARY

THOMAS BARNEYCROFT.

Thomas Barnevcroft, for six years a marble dealer in Peterborough, and well known about the city, died this week in Aylmer, after an illness of some months duration.

Deceased, who was born in England, came to Canada in 1852 and settled with his uncle in Manvers, where he conducted a lumber business. Later he moved to the city in 1869, where he married Anne Rich. Leaving the city in 1878 he later settled in Aylmer, where he died.

DIED AS RESULT OF EATING PILLS

Hazel Jean Ackford, the little two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ackford, 52 George street south, died this morning at 11 o'clock. The little girl was perfectly well this morning at 10 o'clock, but later showed signs of convulsions. Dr. Carmichael was immediately called, but arrived to find the little girl had died. The doctor made an examination and found indications of strychnine poison from pills which she had eaten.

The funeral from the family residence will take place on Friday at 3 o'clock. Service at the house at 2.30 o'clock, conducted by Rev. Mr. Pogue.

SERVICE IN GEORGE STREET CHURCH.

Rev. W. T. Wickett was the preacher at the evangelistic service in George Street Methodist Church last night. He gave the large congregation a very helpful message on "The Abundant Life." There were some who decided to begin the Christian life, and a spirit of deep earnestness was manifest. It is evident that a splendid spiritual work has already begun.

Mr. Wickett will assist the pastor again to-night. The public are heartily invited.

Enemy Forced To Relinquish Ground

This Afternoon's Official Report Indicates a Change For the Better

Canadian Press Despatch:

3.30 P.M. Despatch:

LONDON, April 10.—(Official.)—On the extreme north a vigorous counter-attack during the night forced the enemy to relinquish half the ground he won yesterday between Croix De Bac and Bac St. Maur. On the Messines front the enemy's attacks were repulsed everywhere. He has obtained no footing on high ground anywhere. Armentieres is a heap of ruins, but is still in British hands.

In this morning's attack the enemy entered the British first line trenches between the Rivers Lys and Doube. The attack extended from Armentieres to Messines.

French Official

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, April 10.—German troops last night delivered a heavy attack on the French lines near Hangarden Samterre, which was met by a French counter-attack preventing the Germans from gaining any advantage, the War office announces.

West of Castel and west of Noyon German efforts to advance failed.

PARIS, April 10.—The civilian population of Arras is being removed, it was announced here to-day.

MILITIA OFFICERS NOT EXEMPTED

LATEST DECISION EFFECTS A LARGE NUMBER OF CASES IN CANADA

(Special to The Examiner.)

OTTAWA, April 10.—Mr. Justice Duff, the Central Appeal Court Judge under the Military Service Act, has definitely decided that officers and men of the Canadian Militia are not exempted under the Military Service Act. The case in point was that of Captain Salusto Lavery, a Montreal lawyer, who as an officer of the Militia pleaded exemption on that grounds. It is stated that a large number of cases in various parts of Canada are awaiting disposition likewise.

ANNUAL MEETING OF PETERBORO' GOLF AND COUNTRY CLUB

At the annual meeting of the Golf and Country Club last night in the Bank of Montreal chambers, the election of officers for the coming year, which was held, resulted as follows:

President—Mr. E. G. Patterson.
Sec.-Treas.—Mr. Dearle.
Men's Captain—Mr. A. Mowatt.
Ladies' Captain—Mrs. W. H. Hill.
Directors — R. M. Hamilton, W. Sangster W. C. Ackerman, Percy Bond and E. G. Patterson.
House committee— Mrs. Gardiner (convener), Mrs. Harry Thompson and Mrs. Gerald Wood.

Germans Renewed Northern Attack This Morning

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, April 10.—The Germans this morning renewed their northern attack from the east of Armentieres as far as Messines (five miles north of Armentieres) Gen. Maurice, Director of Operations, announced this afternoon.

"They entered our line between the Lys and the Douve (one mile south of Messines) and captured a considerable portion of Ploegstreet Wood (two miles south of the Douve)" he said.

GERMAN GAINS.

"The enemy is carrying out its original programme of attempting to bleed the British army white," Maurice said.

"The German gains to-day," said General Maurice, "in conjunction with the results of his attack yesterday, have placed Armentieres in an awkward salient.

Just a Word About that Room You Are Thinking of Doing in White

Many people find it difficult to finish a room snow white and at the same time get a hard, smooth finish, brilliant and extremely durable.

Satinette

WHITE ENAMEL

solves the problem. In homes of every degree where elegance and refinement are part of the atmosphere, "Satinette" will be appreciated. Its pure whiteness and soft lustre suggest nothing more or less than perfect taste.

"Satinette" Enamels flow like varnish, work easily and set slowly, leaving that rich lustre that "Satinette" alone can accomplish. Guaranteed not to turn yellow.

Paddy Was Sore.

'Twas somewhere in France, and the trenches looked like some river not on the map. Paddy was on guard in the communication trenches and was up to his chest in water. Along came a Tommy, who inquired of Paddy if he would direct him to A Company in the First Blankshires. Paddy's temper was not the best, for he had had a long, weary guard, and was not in form for being questioned.

"Holy smoke!" he replied, viewing his surroundings, "Chuck it! I'm not a bloomin' harbor master!"

Appreciate the Honors.

Some of the French soldier-policemen, veterans of the Marne, of the Yser and of Verdun, have made their appearance in the streets of Paris, after having done their share at making war, and they are showing themselves quite capable of doing their bit in the keeping of the peace, says a Paris correspondent. All are more or less decorated with the war crosses, military medals or other ribbons. The ribbons and chevrons seem to have a great calming influence upon turbulent spirits.

Germans Claim Capture Of 6,000 Prisoners

HUNS TO BE CRUSHED WITH AID OF AMERICA SAYS LORD READING

This Country Leading Fight For World's Democracy, Ambassador Declares—Tells Conference of National Lecture Force, and Force Alone, Will Settle War

WAR IS BRUTALITY'S CHALLENGE TO JUSTICE

WASHINGTON, April 11.—President Wilson's pronouncement at Baltimore on Saturday that Germany's challenge can be met only with force was emphasized here by Lord Reading, British Ambassador and High Commissioner, in an address before the National Conference of American Lecturers.

"Only by force can Germany be met, and with that force she will be met," declared Lord Reading. At another point he said:

"America stepped into this war, and with it a whole new plane of thought was raised. America has fought, and will fight only for ideals of world democracy."

The Ambassador was frequently applauded by the audience, composed largely of speakers gathered here for a conference preliminary to launching a new patriotic speaking campaign. In addition to Lord Reading, addresses were delivered by the Belgian and Serbian Ministers, George Creel, chairman of the Committee on Public Information, and John Barrett, director of the Pan-American Union.

Urges Spirit of Self-Sacrifice.

In explaining the entrance of Great Britain into the war Lord Reading said his nation cast her lot with the Allies, not because she was bound by treaties, but because, like the United States, she could not stand by and see the smaller nations suffer from Germany's aggressions. He urged the fostering of a spirit of self-sacrifice.

"Is the sacrifice worth it?" he asked. "Yes worth it again and again. It's worth it if we realize that we are fighting for liberty and justice. This war is a challenge of brutality to justice. If the Allies win — and they assuredly will — right and justice will triumph. Lend all your aid and all your power to it.

"All ideas of commercial rivalry and jealousies disappeared in the war," he added. "We have but one idea—to win the war."

"And by your assistance you will have done your part in driving down under ground the power of wrong, and in upholding and enthroning on high, to shine forever in the world, the power of right."

Recalls British Navy's Record.

While admitting the seriousness of the submarine menace, the Ambassador states that Great Britain has transported millions of fighting men across the seas with a loss of only 13,500 of them, including the 550 wounded men who have gone down with torpedoed hospital ships. The cargo ships have suffered heavily, he said, but England has been able to move more than 130,000,000 tons of commodities overseas despite the U-boats.

Both Great Britain and America are working feverishly on their shipping programmes, said the Ambassador. Not with any idea of taking preliminary steps toward a post-bellum commercial rivalry, but to provide great fleets to take men, munitions and supplies to France.

Canadian Guns Are In Action With The Germans

Canadian Infantry is Awaiting Expected Attacks—Shipping Losses Were Much Lower For Last Week —British Guns Lost

BRITISH FORCED BACK

LONDON, April 11.—Submarine sinkings were four vessels over and two under sixteen hundred tons. This is the smallest weekly record since November 11th.

CANADIANS IN ACTION. CANADIAN HEADQUARTERS

IN FRANCE, April 11.—Canadian guns are in action with the Germans, and infantry is awaiting expected attacks. The Canadians will stand firm in the path of the enemy.

HAIG'S REPORT.

LONDON, April 11.—Haig reports that German attacks north of Armentieres forced the British back to the line of Wytschaete-Messines ridge and Ploegsteert. The Germans secured a position on the north bank of the Lys River, but were driven out of Messines village. The Germans claim six thousand prisoners and one hundred guns.

AVIATOR CAPTURED.

BERLIN, April 11. — The first American army aviator has been captured by the Germans.

BRITISH GUNS LOST.

LONDON, April 11.—The heaviest German attacks yesterday fell on the Portuguese troops. It is certain that some British guns were taken by the Germans.

Healthy Children

It is natural for little ones to be well, and with care every baby can be kept well. The main thing towards keeping little ones well is to keep their little stomach sweet and their bowels regular. Baby's Own Tablets will do this. Thousands of mothers keep the Tablets in the house as they find them an efficient guard against illness. Concerning them Mrs. Hilaire Desmarais, St. Joseph de Sorel, Que., writes: "I believe Baby's Own Tablets are the best medicine in the world for children. My baby was terribly constipated but the Tablets promptly cured him and now he is a big healthy child." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

General Custer's War Horses.

Frog Town was one of General Custer's war horses. He was the finest specimen of the thoroughbred I ever saw, standing 16 hands, well balanced and of excellent proportions, writes a correspondent of the Washington Post. In motion he was superb, a perfect model for the sculptor's art. The favorite war horse of General Custer on the plains was a brown horse called Dandy. He was 15½ hands, a compact, muscular horse, fine head and neck. He marched in the ranks of Custer's little army of daring troopers on June 25, 1876, against the confederated Sioux tribes, that terrible day of the massacre of Custer and his men, in the Valley of Little Big Horn, and was shot through the shoulder. He lived, however, to return to Fort Lincoln, whence, after a partial recovery, he was sent to General Custer's father at Monroe, Mich.

Warsaw News

WARSAW, April 10.—Rev. J. J. Robbins preached his farewell sermon at St. Mark's Church on Sunday last.

Mr. Howard McPhee, Fraserville, renewed acquaintances here on Monday and Tuesday.

Sergt. Chas. Stenner, one of the original "Princess Pats," of whom there are but fifteen, is visiting old acquaintances here. Sergt. Stenner, who joined the P. P. C. L. I. in August, 1914, has been at the front continuously, except for short periods spent in "Blighty." He is the one representative of this County in the "Originals," was in the South African War and will be remembered by many as being a winner of prize money in the big walking match held in Peterborough some ten years ago. These are very minor events compared to the one in which he is now engaged and it is hoped his short furlough with his family, who recently moved to Lakefield, and his friends, may be of a most pleasant nature.

Mrs. A. F. Choate spent several days in Toronto last week and returned with a stock of practical millinery for the season's trade.

Rev. H. Brown was in Toronto last week.

Miss M. Purchase received a telegram from Ottawa on Sunday, bearing word that her brother, Pte. Geo. Purchase, had been severely wounded.

Masters Eugene and Kenneth Bell, who have been spending a few months with Mrs. A. F. Choate, returned to their home, Ottawa, on Wednesday.

Even in this era of high prices there are some things that are still cheap. To vertify this, read the ads.

4. All entries must be sent to the secretary by May 25, 1918.

H. R. Armstrong, Secretary, Millbrook.

GRAIN MARKET

Continued cold and unseasonable weather, extending far south, gave strength to the grain markets yesterday. More reports coming in as to extreme damage to the fall wheat crops, also acted as a stimulus to the upward tendency of prices. Winnipeg oats options closed 7-c. higher, followed by a similar advance in cash oats at Fort William. Corn gained a little in value yesterday, aided by scattered buying preparatory to the change to-morrow making commercial grades the standard grades, and removing the maximum price level so far as new style transactions are concerned.

Manitoba wheat—No. 1 Northern, $2.23½; No. 2, $2.20½; No. 3, $2.17½; No. 4, $2.10¼, including 2½-cent tax, in store, Fort William.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards— Receipts, 77 cars, with 258 cattle, 1,097 calves, 1,412 hogs and 28 sheep and lambs.

Cattle market was again strong for almost anything good in the butcher and heavy steers classes. A few little thin steers were rather hard to dispose of, but everything else in the market is strong and firm, with choice stuff at an advance of 25c. since Monday.

There was a heavy run of calves, but the market is holding steady.

Feeders, stockers, and grass cows are in good demand at the prevailing high prices.

Hogs are holding firmer than expected, and yesterday scored a 25c. advance over Tuesday, with one of the large packing houses at least refusing to pay the price.

Impressive Service at Burial of a French-Canadian Priest who followed Battalion into Action.

London, April 9. — Captain Crochetere, a French-Canadian chaplain who was buried with full military and religious honors, met death from a "whizz bang" while visiting a French-Canadian battalion dressing station. He invariably made it a point of following the battalion into the firing line. Major Fortier sang a solemn requiem mass assisted by Fathers Letang and Wood. Father Fortier preached the funeral oration in French. A plain chant sung by the French-Canadian soldiers was impressively solemn. One Protestant chaplain who was present tells the Canadian Associated Press it was the most moving incident he ever witnessed. A suitable memorial will be erected by the battalion. Those attending were Brigadier Panet, Lt.-Colonel McGreer and many officers. The men received the holy communion, an unusual occurrence at a funeral mass.

Council of National Defense.

The Council of National Defense was created under an act of congress passed August 29, 1916, and the same act provided for the creation of an advisory commission of seven to act with, under and by the authority of the council. By the terms of the act this council, with the "co-ordination of industries and resources for the national security and welfare," and with the "creation of relations which will render possible in the time of need the immediate concentration and utilization of the resources of the nation." The main body, or central council of defense at Washington, consists of the secretaries of war, navy, interior, agriculture, commerce and labor. The advisory commission consists of railroad presidents, financiers, manufacturers, educators and specialists in particular lines. The board acts as a clearing house for the war industry needs of the nation with authority to determine the most effective ways of meeting them, and the best means and methods of increasing production, including the creation or extension of industries demanded by the emergency; the relative urgency of the different needs, also considering price factors, industrial and labor aspects and conditions affecting food supplies and prices. The authority of the c cil is nation wide.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

THE ROADHOUSE LUNCHEON

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

Surprised so that I scarcely could keep from expressing it, I listened to Mrs. Sexton chat through the good luncheon she had insisted I should order.

"Good time to begin," she had said, when I objected, "women never are very critical of each other." So I had ordered as nice a luncheon as I knew how, and was rewarded by hearing her say:

"A very nicely balanced meal. I congratulate you."

Would wonders never cease. This woman whom I had thoroughly hated was giving me a thrill of pleasure. She had complimented me.

The luncheon was really quite gay. We lingered over it for about an hour, then started for home. Mrs. Sexton was very quiet on the return ride, but Evelyn and I kept up a constant chatter. Someway, I was no longer afraid to be natural; I felt that I would not be criticized if I were.

When we dropped Evelyn, I urged her to come over as often as she could.

"I shall be lonely now that George is away," forgetting for a moment that Mrs. Sexton was to be with me, and that she might be offended by my admission.

"Yes, Mrs. Reeve, do keep Mrs. Howard company whenever you can. I shall be with her, but I am old, and you young things have such good times together."

SCARCELY BELIEVING.

Could I believe my ears? Was it really Mrs. Sexton who had spoken, or did I imagine it? However, Evelyn spoke nicely to her and promised to spend as much time with me as possible.

After we dropped Evelyn, Mrs. Sexton came into the tonneau with me.

"You are to have Signor Torretti to-morrow morning, I believe."

"Yes, I am delighted."

"He is a fine pianist, but you play extremely well. With him to spur you on, you will do wonders—if you try," she added.

"Of course I'll try! He's horribly expensive."

"So are others, my dear Mrs. Howard. Suppose you also try with them."

I knew she meant herself, and I was so embarrassed I could not frame an answer. Why did she feel that she must say anything like that and spoil my afternoon, also the feeling—a more kindly one—I had just begun to feel for her?

"You see, my dear, your husband only wants to do what is for your improvement."

"It is unbearable to have to be treated as if I knew nothing!" I burst out. "If I needed so much correcting, he should have told me and I never should have married him, never!"

"Don't say that. Don't even think it. You can be very happy if you will. It all rests with you. But you are very stubborn, very tenacious of your own opinion, I should like to help you—be of real help. But you won't let me."

AN INSPIRATION.

I started to answer, to tell her just how I felt, when suddenly a thought leaped into my mind. I immediately gave it utterance:

"Would you really HELP me?"

"Certainly."

"Well, Mr. Howard has promised me that I may give a dinner party of my very own. I am going to invite the young folks I know. Evelyn's crowd. He, Mr. Howard, has promised to remain at home that night and have dinner with us. Will you help me plan that dinner, the decorations, the menu, and all, just as you did the other one, only not let a soul know you had a thing to do with it, not even Mary or James? If you tell me just what to have, and all, I can give the orders. And above all will you promise to go away before the day of the dinner so that George will not even suspect you helped me?"

I stopped, breathless. Would she?

"I understand," she said smiling. "I am to give you the suggestions, and you are to go ahead and see what you can do."

"Yes, but George mustn't know. If he did, it would be of no use. No matter how well I did, he would say it was all you."

The bitterness in my voice did not escape her. Laying her hand lightly on mine for a moment, she replied:

"I give you my word that neither he nor anyone else shall ever know from me that I gave you so much as a hint."

"Oh, thank you."

It was good of her, I thought, as I dressed for dinner. I was so happy that I sang a little over my dressing. But all desire to sing left me before the dinner was over. Everything I did was wrong; every order I gave was criticized. All the old disgust, and almost all the old hatred, had returned before we left the table. I was relieved when she said she was tired, and bade me good-night First advising that I, too, retire early.

To-morrow—Signor Toretti's First Hour.

TROUBLED FOR YEARS WITH BRONCHITIS

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup GAVE INSTANT RELIEF

Bronchitis is a disease which is very prevalent during the late winter and early spring, when there are sudden atmospheric changes. It is a condition of inflammation of the bronchial tubes which produces mucous or phlegm. This irritates the throat and causes you to cough in order to get rid of it. The cough may be tight or loose according as to whether this mucous is sticky and hard to remove, or soft and easily expelled.

Bronchitis is not really dangerous but the complications which are liable to follow makes it necessary get rid of it at the first sign. This you can do by using Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. A remedy that has been on the market for over 25 years.

John D. McFarlane, Jr., S.W. Margaree, N.S., writes: "I was troubl for years with bronchitis, and cou not find any relief. I was especia bad on a damp day. I went to a druggist, and asked him for something stop the constant tickling in m throat. He gave me a bottle of Dr Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which found gave me instant relief. It is best remedy for bronchitis I know and I now take care that I alwa have a bottle of it on hand."

Forgot His Cloth.

Among the prisoners-of-war repatriated since the beginning of the year is Capt. A. Gillies Wilken, of Edmonton, chaplain of a mounted rifle battalion. He was captured at Ypres in June, 1916. During the strenuous fighting he assisted in carrying ammunition, but refrained from combatant work until he saw a wounded man on a stretcher fired upon. Then, casting aside Tolstoian ideas, he picked up a bayonet and rifle, and finally came to a hand struggle, using his fists. This led to the statement appearing in "Canada in Flanders" that he was killed. In the German camp where he was interned Capt. Wilkin conducted a class for men contemplating holy orders also a class in general instruction and organized a church choir.

A LOYAL ISLAND.

Over Six Thousand Soldiers Have Gone From Newfoundland.

The impressive contribution made by Newfoundland to the fighting forces of Great Britain is brought to the fore by a summary of enlistments and casualties made public recently. From St. John's and from the innumerable little settlements that dot the coast line had gone forth to the war, up to the end of December last, 6,448 men. Twelve hundred of these are dead.

More than 25 per cent. of the 4,195 men who enlisted in the Newfoundland Regiment in the first three and a half years of the war have died or are missing and believed to have been killed. They met their end in the following manner: Killed in action, 386; died of wounds, 213; died of disease, 53; missing and probably killed, 447. The total fatalities in the Newfoundland Naval Reserve of 1,807 men during the same period were 137. The Newfoundland Forestry Battalion, of 446 men, serving behind the lines, has lost two men.

Government officials point out that the Newfoundland Regiment had suffered much more severely in proportion to its strength than the Canadian soldiers. It is understood that in the Canadian army the fatalities have not exceeded ten per cent.

Much of this heavy loss is accounted for by the participation of Newfoundland troops in four important encounters on the Western front. These were at Beaumont Hamel, in July, 1916; at Gueudecourt, in October, of the same year; at Monchy le Preux, in April, 1917, and at Cambrai, in November last.

All of the Newfoundland men are volunteers. The geographical distribution and the manner of living of the population, which is only 250,000, makes any form of conscription unfeasible. Seven-eighths of the inhabitants of the colony are scattered among 1,250 settlements, the majority of which house less than two hundred persons each. The chief industry is fishing, and their places in the boats which go down to the sea cannot be taken by women. Yet these fisher folk, remote from the great world and in most cases in only occasional communication with St. John's, the single large town on the island, have sent away their sturdiest men in response to the appeal of the Mother Country for aid.

A Soldier Novelist.

Capt. Theodore Goodrich Roberts, a member of one of Canada's best known literary families, has found time in spite of his duties with the overseas forces to write a novel. The book is entitled "Forest Fugitives," and gets away altogether from the grim affairs with which Capt. Roberts has been connected for the past three years. It is a story of pirates and adventure in New Brunswick in early colonial days, before the Dominion of Canada was ever dreamed of.

From One School.

As a memorial to the valor of the men of Trinity College School, Port Hope, who have given themselves in the service of the Empire on the fields of France and Flanders, a new building is to be added to the college group, to be known as the Junior School. Trinity men up to the number of 536 have engaged in overseas service, and up to the present 74 have been killed in action.

IF BACKACHY OR KIDNEYS BOTHER

Eat less meat also take glass of Salts before eating breakfast

Uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish, ache, and feel like lumps of lead. The urine becomes cloudy; the bladder is irritated, and you may be obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. When the kidneys clog you must help them flush off the body's urinous waste or you'll be a real sick person shortly. At first you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, you suffer from backache, sick headache, dizziness, stomach gets sour, tongue coated and you feel rheumatic twinges when the weather is bad. Eat less meat, drink lots of water also get from any pharmacist four ounces of Jad Salts; take a table spoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithea-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Druggists here say they sell lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

Weighing En Route.

A unique weighing scales at Proctor, Minn., enables cars of ore to be weighed without stopping a train, says the Outlook. As the train approaches the scale platform track it slows down to eight miles an hour and the weight of each car is automatically recorded as it passes. Thus an otherwise unavoidable congestion of cars is prevented in what is described as the biggest ore yard in the world.

Knew His Business.

"Did you tell your wife you had a new typewriter?"

"I did not! I told her I had bought a new typewriting machine, and I made it doggoned good and explicit!"

Simple Mathematics.

Wife—What would you do if you had no wife to look after your mending?

Husband—Do? Why, in that case I could afford to buy new clothes.

Nujol the only Remedy to Help in Twenty Years

Mr. A. L. Raplee writes the following strong recommendation of Nujol after this effective remedy relieved him from chronic constipation.

NUJOL LABORATORIES,
STANDARD OIL CO. (New Jersey),
BAYONNE, N.J.

Dear Sirs:—
I cannot speak too highly of Nujol. I had constipation for twenty years, and Nujol was the first remedy of all I have used to help.

Yours truly,
Bluff, Utah. A. L. RAPLEE.

NUJOL will relieve you of chronic constipation as it did Mr. Raplee. It makes no difference how long you have suffered, nor what remedies have failed to help you. Get the necessary relief by the use of Nujol, which helped Mr. Raplee when all other remedies were unsuccessful.

Nujol relieves in a gentle, effective way, without griping or unpleasant reaction. It contains no drug; does not artificially stimulate; and so aids the bowels to act naturally and regularly. Nujol is a safe remedy for the youngest child or the weakest invalid. Thousands now use Nujol instead of harmful pills and salts. Try it yourself and be "regular as clockwork."

The Connecting Link.

Canada, despite all she had done in the war, is just beginning her job in this struggle and her destiny is to act as the connecting link between the people and Government of the United States and those of Britain. Let me outline briefly four factors which I believe are leading naturally to this closer union. They are: Race, language, the type of democracy or government, and religion. Of the first it is needless to say much, for Americans have always recognized their ancestral Anglo-Saxon affiliation with England—at least this is true of that large proportion sprung from the pioneers of English, Scotch and Irish, who settled here and developed the country. In respect to language, while the British Empire embraces peoples speaking over 100 different tongues, the dominating language, as here, is English, and from it we have our mutual interests in literature, thought and ideals. Britain and the United States are both democratic. Indeed, in one sense, Britain is more democratic than the United States, for every department in its Government is more amenable to public opinion.

In England since the outbreak of the war we have had two radical Governmental changes. On the subject of religion, while we have many so-called heathen religions in the British Empire, its dominating faith is Christianity, as it is in the United States. Here, then, is a fourfold bond of unity. These channels are already made, and what I ask, is lacking to bring these two nations closer together in sincerity and cordial understanding?

America can no longer go back to her old-time limitations of western hemisphere responsibility. By her entrance into the war she has assumed a responsibility for the peace of the world. The great problem of reconstruction, so well expressed by President Wilson, of making the world safe for democracy, will rest on the two great English-speaking nations. Since their entry into the war Americans are talking differently about world politics, and I have been impressed with the bigness and broad vision of America's leading men. America is already in the Council of Nations, and the voice of the American people demands that after the war something be done in determining the destinies and fates of the civilized countries of the world, with due regard for the independence of national life. This responsibility does not end with the American shore. The principle of the Monroe doctrine will be enlarged, not abrogated, and Britain, as much as the United States, will have her share in enforcing that doctrine.—Major Charles W. Gordon, "Ralph Connor," Canadian Soldier-Clergyman-Novelist.

Australia Prepares for Soldiers.

Australia has, from the first, grappled with the question of providing for her soldiers after the war with commendable energy and forethought. For some months the Australian patriation fund has been devoting itself to the consideration and development of various plans whilst many practical steps have been taken by individuals and communities toward the formation of definite settlement schemes, says a correspondent. The state government of New South Wales has set aside special areas for cultivation by returned soldiers. These efforts were supplemented by the generosity of one landowner who gave a tract of land amounting to thousands of acres for that purpose. Australia's first need is population and the commonwealth will have an opportunity, after the war, not only to supply her own need but also to do a great service to the labor market by ensuring that "room for adjustment," which it will need. The federal government has already promised $10,000,000 for the work and has pledged itself to raise an additional $150,000,000 in the future.

OUR DALY SHORT STORY

Crossing a Ford

By ELIAS KILLIAN

When the National Guard was ordered down to the Mexican border I was keeping store about a hundred miles south of the border line. I had gone down from the States with a little money I had inherited from my father, thinking there was a better chance to use it in Mexico than in a more settled country. I was only twenty-one years old and without experience.

I located in a town in Chihuahua a few miles south of the Conchas river, a tributary to the Rio Grande, and since there was no other store carrying such a stock as I had in the place, I did very well, but I encountered the animosity of other dealers.

There was an American family named Talbot living near the Conchas north of me, and since I was not made welcome in the homes of the Mexican families, I used to ride out there for companionship. Perhaps it was the second daughter Emily who attracted me.

Several of the storekeepers whose business I had taken away from them put their heads together, and resolved to "do" me. They watched for an opportunity to make away with me when I was at some distance from the town. Such an opportunity occurred on a trip I made to collect an account from a man near the American border. I was obliged to cross the Conchas, which is fordable near the Talbots, and I found it convenient to stop there for a visit. Jose Zangas, one of my competitors, learned of my proposed trip, and followed me. It was about 20 miles from the river to where my debtor lived and Zangas kept a short distance behind me all the way. He saw me, unseen himself, go into my debtor's home and saw him pay me 300 pesos, Zangas had picked up a couple of men who made their living by robbery.

On my way back I stopped at noon for a rest and to eat a snack I had with me. After refreshing myself I filled my pipe, and, resting my head on the root of a tree, smoked while my horse grazed near me. It was not long before I fell asleep. I was awakened by a kick, and there, looking down on me, a cocked revolver in his hand, was Jose Zangas, while the other two men, mounted, were near at hand.

My revolver was under me at my hip, and I was at his mercy. He ordered me to turn over. I did so, and he relieved me of my weapon. Then he ordered me to give up the money I carried which I did. He divided it among his assistants, taking nothing for himself.

The place where I was captured was a few miles from the ford, and thither they directed our course. When we reached it one of the robbers started to cross, then the other, then I, and behind me Zangas, who was to cover me with his revolver to the other side. The ford was over a ledge of rock, which was not visible. The current was quite swift. Moving in running water one is liable to go down stream instead of straight across. We had got half way over when there was a sharp report and the leading robber fell from his horse and disappeared under the water. This disconcerted the second robber, and, being misdirected by the running water, he left the ledge and all that remained to be seen of horse and rider was the animal's feet above the surface.

Zangas might have shot me had he kept his wits; but he was so disconcerted by what had happened that he delayed. I turned to look at him, and the hand that held his weapon was trembling; but seeing me turn, he raised his revolver. Before he could fire he fell forward from his horse, and his body was carried away by the current.

It now occurred to me to look about for the person who had saved me. No one was to be seen. I crossed the ford, taking care not to be misled by the current. On reaching the opposite side behind some bushes I saw Emily Talbot lying in a faint.

I took her up in my arms and covered her face with kisses. This warmed her to consciousness, and seeing me looking down upon her, she smiled.

There was never a definite proposal and acceptance between me and Emily. Our courting, proposal, and acceptance were all included in the kisses that brought her back to life.

The Little French Girl

By ELINOR MARSH

(Copyright, 1917, Western Newspaper Union.)

Captain Quigley was a member of the old United States army before its recent enlargement. He was stationed at Fort Wayne, Detroit, and from time immemorial the officers at that post have constituted quite an important, if not a large part, of the society of that delightful city.

The old French-Canadians of Detroit correspond with the descendants of the Dutch settlers of New York. Each considers itself the elite of its respective abiding place. One of the most retiring of Detroit's French girls was Elise Brisson.

Quigley happened to be thrown a good deal with Miss Brisson, and since her retiring disposition did not gain for her that attention she merited, he had it all his own way with her. In those days persons living in houses large enough for the purpose gave parties, and at most of such entertainments Quigley and Miss Brisson were a great deal together.

"I wonder," said Mrs. Major Fielding "if the handsome Quigley is going to marry the little French girl? She is pretty, but she has no money, and it is a great pity for our army officers to marry girls without some income."

Quigley was not a fortune hunter. He was simply one of those idle young men of the United States army who in those days had nothing to do but kill time. He devoted himself to Miss Brisson until Miss Hamilton, a dashing blonde from New York, came to Detroit; then he switched off from the "French girl" to the New Yorker. Miss Brisson bore her desertion as quietly as she bore every trouble.

In the midst of his affair with Miss Hamilton, Quigley was ordered to another post. He left Detroit without any request for Miss Hamilton, but did regret leaving the delightful society of Detroit; and was much surprised to feel a sharp twinge of disappointment at not seeing anything of the little French girl.

He had scarcely departed before chit-chat about him and his two lady loves ceased.

Quigley was in the United States engineering corps, and during his stay at Fort Wayne had been engaged in some engineering work in the vicinity. A year after having been ordered away he was sent back to put some finishing touches on what he had done.

He wondered if he would meet any of his old friends.

One of the first persons he met on the street was Elise Brisson. A change seemed to have come over her apparel. In other respects she was the same. Her garments were of richer material and bore the stamp of having been made by an accomplished modiste. But she was the same reticent little French girl.

Quigley expressed a desire to resume their friendship. She told him that she would be away for awhile after a day or two, but she was to have a few friends at her home the next evening at eight o'clock. She would be happy to see him also.

Quigley had just arrived in Detroit, and was at the time he met Miss Brisson hurrying for a train to reach the scene of his engineering works. He did not get away till the next afternoon, and only returned to his hotel in time to eat a hasty dinner, put himself into evening dress, and make his way to Miss Brisson's, who had given him her new address.

He found her in a handsome dwelling, corresponding with her changed apparel. For the few friends spoken of by her as her guests for the evening, an awning from the sidewalk to the piazza had been provided, and guests were arriving in large numbers.

Quigley entered, and was shown to the men's room, looking about him for someone he might have known while previously stationed at Fort Wayne. But failed to see anyone he recognized.

Quigley, from the moment he met Miss Brisson felt a revival of his former love for her. He regretted having to meet her again among such a crowd, but since he had returned to Detroit on the eve of one of her functions, it was quite natural that she should have invited him.

Descending to the drawing room where he expected to meet her, he neither found her nor any of her family. Furthermore, he failed to find any of his former acquaintances.

Suddenly portieres into another room were drawn aside and there stood Elise Brisson about to become the bride of one of Quigley's former civilian acquaintances.

How he endured the sight is impossible to describe here, for it was always inexpressible to himself. However, he managed to endure the ceremony and afterwards found the throng of guests moving forward to congratulate the happy couple.

Elise received him in the same quiet manner as of old, giving no hint by word or expression of their former intimacy. He had but a word with her, and then passed on, having no more claim upon her than the passing crowd.

The next day Quigley revisited the fort, where he found some of his former associate officers. He learned that the little French girl had inherited a fortune from an aunt who had not been seen in the world for 20 years.

DON'T BE DYSPEPTIC.

The dyspeptic has thought only of the stomach when the real source of trouble is the Liver, Kidneys and Bowels. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills thoroughly cleanse and purify the digestive and excretory system and in this way put the organs of digestion into splendid working condition. A little patient urging on of the organs when sluggish will restore the habit of healthful digestion.

The Salmon Fisheries.

Some disappointment will inevitably be felt at the report of the special commission appointed to investigate the fishing industry. The recommendations made are all right as far as they go, but there was a general hope that some method would be found of lowering the price to the consumer, and especially to the British Columbia consumer. The commissioners may have found this phase of the subject too difficult for them and passed it along to the Food Controller. If so, there may yet be something done, although the chances are not particularly bright.

Meantime, if the individual citizen is not to receive the benefit of lower prices, the Government at any rate is to derive a substantial increase of revenue. Heretofore, the annual license fee of the canneries has been $50. In future, they are to pay a tax based on the profits and on the number of fish handled, and the minimum apparently is to be $1,000 a year for each cannery. As partial compensation to the canners, the competition is to be restricted by the issue of no more licenses in Northern British Columbia for the next five years. If it be true that the existing canneries are working to only 17 per cent. of their possible capacity during their two months of operation, it is obvious that the investment of further capital in the industry is not desirable.

The salmon pack for last season was the largest on record and, despite the increased cost of labor and materials, there is a widespread public suspicion that the profits were in proportion to the size of the pack. The statement has been freely made that the sockeye brand which was sold to wholesalers at $12.50 a case, was put up by the canners at $9 a case, the profit therefore being $3.50, or slightly more than 38 per cent. If this is so, the canners will be able to stand a pretty fair tax without any danger of being reduced to poverty.

A Canadian Helps.

Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, a graduate of McMaster University, Toronto, and formerly pastor of a Baptist Church in that city, has been appointed chairman of the National Service Section of the United States Shipping Board and the Emergency Fleet Corporation. In this capacity Dr. Eaton will visit every shipbuilding plant in the republic where Government work is in progress or in contemplation, and endeavor to arouse a spirit of patriotism, thrift and industry among the workmen.

A HEROIC POET.

Lieut.-Col. John McCrae Buried In Flanders' Fields.

Lieut.-Col. John McCrea, the author of "In Flanders' Fields," died recently in France of pneumonia. At the time of his death, Col. McCrea was in command of the medical side of the Canadian Hospital, No. 3, the McGill unit, at Boulogne, France. At the beginning of the war he entered active service with the first brigade of Canadian artillery on the staff of Brig.-Gen. Morrison, and during the early period of the war, up to and through the second battle of Ypres served with his brigade in the double capacity of staff and medical officer. Col. McCrea was a distinguished physician of Montreal and on the professional staff of McGill University. Col. McCrea was a son of Lieut.-Col. David McCrea, of Guelph, Ont., and a brother of Mrs. J. F. Kilgour, of Brandon.

Lieut.-Col. McCrae has been laid to rest "between the crosses, row on row," that mark the hallowed couch of Canada's immortal dead who have fought on foreign soil. He went out, as so many have gone, as a physician to heal the scars of war, not to engage the enemy in battle, but he sleeps as a soldier of the war within sound of the guns, having given all that man may give for the honor and the liberty of his country.

His name will be remembered for generations to come as one who wrote across the scroll of fate in imperishable lines his own epitaph. It is a challenge to the patriotism and the manhood of the Canadian nation. It is the voice of the dead that may be heard above the crashing shells on fields where poppies blow in the summer sun, and where the lark overhead cheerily chants his lay, unconscious of the deadly strife below. Beneath those green mounds, laden with the tributes of the women of France, he, too, now sleeps whose poetic fancy once caught from these flower-decked graves the last message of the warrior dead, and, touched with the burning coals from the altar of freedom, translated it into words of prophetic fire that thrilled the heart of the nation. These lines will be recited around the firesides of Canada as long as the memory of these inspiring days remains green. With the gallant dead he, too, listens to the guns, hears the lark bravely singing in the azure sky, and waits for the dawn, where—

"In Flanders fields the poppies blow
Between the crosses, row on row,
That mark our place, and in the sky
The larks still bravely singing fly,
Scarce heard amidst the guns below.
We are the dead. Short days ago
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow,
Loved and were loved, and now we lie
In Flanders fields.

"Take up our quarrel with the foe,
To you from failing hands we throw
The Torch—be yours to hold it high;
If ye break faith with us who die,
We shall not sleep though poppies grow
In Flanders fields."

Was Busy Enough.

"Here's a real joke," writes a correspondent of the Army and Navy Journal. "A conscript soldier of the National army at a western camp—one of the million that sprang to arms overnight—was sitting on a lumber pile in the cantonment whittling out a 'rifle.' The whole company was similarly employed, by order. One of his old home neighbors from another company came up, looked him over, and asked, 'Bill, how do you like your new job?' 'Don't say a word, Bud; I'm mighty glad I'm not in the artillery!'"

Puts Trademark on Apples.

Here y'are—your monogram on an apple. It's the latest wrinkle. S. O. Butler, fruit grower of Helmer, Ind., has a method of putting initials, pictures of horses, cows and most anything on apples. After the fruit has become full grown, a stencil is placed on its surface and the leaves pulled away to allow the sunlight to color the skin.

Overwork Paralysis

Doctors Said His Case Was Hopeless—Could Not Walk or Write—Speech Almost Gone—How Cure Was Effected.

ST. ANN'S, Ont., March 21.—Paralysis is far more easily prevented than cured. For this reason it is only wise to be warned by sleeplessness, headache, nervous indigestion and neuralgic pains and begin reconstruction treatment before the nervous system becomes too far depleted.

This letter from Mr. Hyatt is quoted to prove to you that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is effective even after paralysis has set in. It is not advisable, however, to neglect nervous disorders until such conditions are developed.

Mr. Avery Hyatt, Blacksmith, St. Ann's, Lincoln County, Ont., writes: "I am a blacksmith by trade, and ten years ago became afflicted with paralysis. I could not walk or read or write, and could talk with difficulty, so that it was a hard matter to understand anything I would say. Being only a young man, I was nearly discouraged. Two doctors told me it was brought on by overwork, and that my case was hopeless.

"One day my father read about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and advised me to try it. I bought 12 boxes, and when the fifth was used I saw that I was getting better. By the time the 12 boxes were used I was cured I am well and strong and working every day, thanks to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

This statement is certified to by Mr. Elmore J. Hodgins, J.P.

United States' Debt to Sweden.

It was in June, 1782, when, upon the order of Gustavus III, the Swedish minister in Paris, Gustavus Philip Creutz, got into communication with the Americans' agent in France, Benjamin Franklin. It was nothing less than a treaty with Europe's oldest kingdom which Creutz offered to Franklin and the free states of his land. Franklin himself, as well as his countrymen, grasped with thankfulness the offered hand, the treaty was signed in April, 1783, and remained of practical benefit to the United States for a long time. The most important aspect of the matter was, however, that this treaty signified the introduction of the United States into international relations as a recognized power.

Well Done, McGill!

Over 2,000 students, graduates and teachers from McGill have joined the military forces. Three hundred of these have gained military honors, and 236 are among those who have made the supreme sacrifice. The McGill Corps was originally organized by Sir Auckland Geddes, now Director-General of Recruiting, who was a humble professor there when the war broke out. All honor to McGill.

Gardens in Japan and China.

The garden, per se, in both Japan and China is most frequently to be found in the grounds of some public building or temple. The Chinese garden is as reversed to our eyes as their writing, for it consists chiefly of water. On a pool or pond they develop their wonderful aquatic plants, the lotus, lilies of myriad color and variety and brilliant foliage specimens. In addition to this the walks are sometimes bordered with flowering plants in pots or jardinieres, which are changed and shifted from time to time. Of these the favorites are such flowers as the peony and others which are believed to possess medicinal properties. But the essential of the Chinese gardener is to display his aquatic floriculture.

King of the Forest!

The mahogany tree well deserves the title, "king of the forest," because of its great wood value, and its beauty and stateliness. It does not always develop a trunk as large as some of its tropical neighbors, but often it reaches a greater height. One hundred feet is not unusual. The West Indies, Mexico, Latin America, parts of Southern Florida and the Bahamas are its native haunts. For many years the supply of mahogany seemed almost inexhaustible, but now there is grave danger of the output becoming less and less because of the scarcity of mature trees. Other woods are being substituted for real mahogany. A tree three feet in diameter is probably not less than 200 years old, indicating the slow growth of the species.

HELPED THE WAR LOAN.

The Men In Khaki Were Very Generous Subscribers.

That the Canadians at the front are just as willing to fight with dollars as with bayonets is shown by a report from the Militia Department. In two weeks the soldiers subscribed $1,500,000 to the Victory Loan.

Subscription lists were opened immediately on word being received from Ottawa. There was no propaganda or coaxing of any kind and no newspaper campaign as in Canada. It is pointed out, also, that in view of the high cost of living, smallness of pay and facilities and necessity for enlarged expenditures which surround the men away from home, real sacrifice was involved. There was not even time to educate the men as to the attractive features of the loan from an investment standpoint. On the first day $48,000 worth of bonds were taken up, and the average for the fourteen days was more than $100,000 a day. There were 6,000 odd subscribers. Cheques to the extent of $500,000 were received on saving accounts in Canada. The sum of $350,000 was charged to men's pay accounts, and a considerable percentage of the loan taken up overseas will be paid for on the instalment plan by monthly deductions from pay. Some cheques came from France drawn on slips of papers.

The loan was put before the men through the efforts of the general officers commanding. The collecting was done by the paymasters of the units, Comparative standing of the subscriptions of the various units was published daily in orders and a healthy competitive spirit awakened which quickened the energy of all branches of the service.

Where the response was so general special reference to any unit may seem odious. However, there is a certain significance about the fact that the men who know most about the Boche, those who have been in the field longest, were the most enthusiastic subscribers. The First Division, with a subscription of nearly $200,000, and the First Brigade with $85,000, of this amount top the lists. The honor for the best showing among battalions was divided between the 2nd and 4th Battalion of the First Division and the 160th Battalion of the Fifth Division.

Place Work Above Riches.

There is a story told of a multimillionaire who was offered $60,000,000 for his holdings in the business in which he had been interested for many years. He went home that night and consulted his wife, who had been his good comrade in all of his business adventures, and she said: "Don't you sell! What would I do with the money, and what would you do without your work?" And the multimillionaire didn't sell. This is just an illustration that goes to show that money can have only a certain value, and that value is not comparable with the value of work.—Exchange.

IT STOPS THE TWINGES OF RHEUMATISM, LIMBERS THE MUSCLES. EASES THE JOINTS

Amazing Relief Comes at Once —Cure Every Time

RUB NERVILINE

Aching joints and sore muscles are common in rheumatic people. Inflammation is deep in the tissues. You might use a dozen remedies and derive less relief than Nerviline will give you in half an hour.

Nerviline is a pain-subduer that words do not altogether describe.

It is fully five times stronger than most remedies, not that it affects the skin unfavourably—no, its great power is due to its wonderful penetrative quality—it strikes in deeply, but never burns or blisters.

Just rub Nerviline into sore muscles, stiff joints, and note the glow of comfort, the ease of pain that follows.

You are astonished, delighted; this is because words do not express the promptness and permanency with which Nerviline cures every ache and pain in the muscles and joints.

Marvellous, you'll say. Natural, we say, because Nerviline is different, stronger, more penetrating, a true pain-subduer. Just try it and see if it doesn't cure rheumatism neuralgia, lumbago, strains and sprains.

The large 25c. family size bottle is very economical. Get it to-day. Sold by dealers everywhere, or direct from the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

THE EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

The Patterns Are Guaranteed to Give Excellent Satisfaction

LADY'S DRESS.

The wide vest which is gathered to a straight band is of soft white Georgette, the narrow roll collar is of dark blue satin and the dress is of Quaker gray silk poplin. The dress is an excellent style for the rather slender woman, because the skirt is gathered all around and the arrangement of the vest gives a wide effect which is very becoming. The waist is gathered under the belt, which is a broad, straight piece of the poplin corded on both edges. The long sleeves gradually widen to a point below the elbows, where they are slashed and shaped to fit the wrists.

The lady's dress pattern No. 8732 is cut in four sizes—36 to 42 inches bust measure. Width at lower edge of skirt is 1¾ yards. As on the figure, the 36 inch size requires 3¾ yards 36 inch or 2¾ yards 54 inch material, with three-eighths yard 12 inch Georgette, 1¼ yards 14 inch silk and one-quarter yard 3 inch banding.

This Pattern Can Be Obtained From the Examiner Office on Payment of 15 Cents.

LIFT OFF CORNS WITH FREEZONE IS MAGIC

Costs few cents! Sore, touchy corns lift right off with fingers. No pain!

Drop a little Freezone on an aching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then you lift it right out. It doesn't hurt one bit. Yes, magic!

Why wait? Your druggist sells a tiny bottle of Freezone for a few cents, sufficient to rid your feet of every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and calluses, without soreness or irritation. Freezone is the much talked of ether discovery of a Cincinnati genius.

Weak Anaemic Girls

Bloodlessness is the trouble of many girls who ought to be full of life and good spirits. Instead they are pale, their lips have no colour, they have no appetites, their digestion is poor, and if they walk fast, either in the street or going up stairs they are so tired and out of breath that their hearts beat as if to burst. Almost always such girls are thin, flat-chested, and sallow, with nothing attractive about them. If they do not get better they will have a cough in the winter and then, not unlikely consumption, that most hopeless of all disease will develop.

No girl should be like this. She should be plump, rosy-cheeked and full of life, able to walk fast and to stand exertion without being breathless and palpitating. To be in this healthy, happy condition she must have plenty of good, rich, red blood as it is only through the blood that the body can be healthy. And the only medicine that will keep the blood supply rich and red and pure is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Their effect upon the pale, weak girl who gives them a fair trial is wonderful. They improve the appetite, backaches and headaches disappear, the glow of health tinges the cheeks, the eyes sparkle, and the step becomes light and elastic. Thousands of girls throughout Canada owe their health and attractive appearance to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and do not hesitate to say so.

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

MORE MEN NEEDED.

An Analysis of the First Call Under Conscription.

Whether the second or some additional class under the Military Service Act will be called out is a question of policy which the Government will shortly have to determine. The call will not likely be immediate, but an analysis of the figures as to the operation so far of the selective draft enactment leads to the conclusion that either the process will have to be greatly expedited as regards the first-class, or measures will be necessary to secure men from those classes which so far have been relieved from the call. Some at least of the members of the Military Service Council favor the latter procedure.

Since the act became operative, thirty thousand draftees have been secured, or will be, during the present month. Then there are upwards of 16,000 volunteers enlisted from Canada or the United States since Sept. 1st, bringing the total reinforcements up to 47,000. If all these men had been brought to the colors as the direct result of the act, and if the proportions were equally distributed throughout Canada, the result would be regarded as satisfactory. As matters now stand, there is urgent need for more men, in view of the impending and tremendously vital conflict on the western front.

The only available machinery in securing them is that which is provided by the Military Service Act, and its operation is clogged up with so many appeals, the disposal of which involves so much delay that it is clear the congestion before the tribunals must either be removed promptly or else recourse be had to some other class. Fifty thousand appeals are pending, 34,000 of them in Quebec, the greater portion having been entered by the military authorities from the exemptions of the local tribunals. Very probably, in a few days extra judges will be appointed to assist the thirty-four now assigned to these cases. Likewise, the central appeal judge will be given assistance.

Outside of the district of Hull, which for military purposes is in Ottawa, and where the enlistments through the war have been very creditable, the whole province of Quebec, under the Military Service Act, has produced so far only 1,716 men, as against 5,238 in Toronto district, 1,236 in Kingston and Ottawa, and 2,225 in Winnipeg.

The right of appeal is fully guaranteed by the act, but while there are 34,000 appeals in Quebec, only 4,597 are pending elsewhere. The latter are more essentially appeals entered by individuals refused exemption.

In the improbable event of the total number of military appeals being upheld, the first class would secure about 100,000 men, the limit under the act; if only half the appeals are sustained, the limit would be 70,000.

However, a total of 3,821 men who failed to report are being rounded up. There are others placed in the lower medical category who, after examination, may land in category A. A third and promising class comprises men exempted up to a certain date, or who have failed to comply with the imposed conditions as to occupation.

Some persons aver that the provinces which have done well both under the voluntary system and under the M.S.A. may not view with equanimity a call for a second class until a greater share has been contributed by Quebec. The needs of increased production at home also enter the situation.

COLTS ARE PROFITABLE

When Fed and Cared For According to the Best Practice.

TO BUILD FARM WORKSHOP

Full Directions With Plans and Bill of Materials—They Will Appeal to the Farmer Who Does His Own Repairing.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

THE FIRST WINTER is a critical time in the life of a colt. The care and attention he receives during this period determines, to a great extent, his future usefulness. If he be poorly fed, neglected, and allowed to become thin and weak, it is probable he will never be as good or valuable an animal as he would have been under more favorable circumstances. He, in the first place, should be provided with warm, comfortable and well ventilated quarters; and, while he should be taught to lead, and stand tied, it is much better if he have a roomy stall to stand in.

The next question is: "What, and how much should he be fed?" In our opinion there is little danger of overfeeding at this age. While there are exceptions, it is unusually safe to give a weanling all he will eat, provided he gets regular exercise, but it must be understood that he should not be given more than he will eat. It is a mistake to keep food before him all the time. He should, with apparent relish, eat all that is given him, in at most 1½ hours, and then will be ready for the next meal when the time arrives.

It is not easy to say just how much food a colt of a given age and size should consume, but the attendant, if a careful and observant man, will soon be able to determine the quantity to be given at each meal, and be able to give sufficient without waste. Hay and oats should be the food upon which to depend for growth, both of muscle and bone. If other grain than oats be given we will take back what we have said about "there being little danger of over-feeding." All food should be of first-class quality. Well-saved clover is the best kind of hay, but where this cannot be got, well-saved Timothy makes a good substitute. Hay should be fed in the necessary quantities three times daily, and we prefer whole, to cut hay for such young animals.

The manner in which oats should be fed will admit of argument. In our opinion, and experience, rolled oats that have been scalded and allowed to become cool, and that they thrive on such. The practice of mixing a ration of rolled oats and a little wheat chaff or cut hay, in a pail, pouring some boiling water on it, covering and allowing it to stand for a few hours before feeding, gives excellent results.

The morning's meal can be prepared in the evening, and the evening's meal in the same vessel in the morning, the noon-day meal being either dry rolled or whole oats. In addition to hay and oats the colt should be given a carrot or two with the noon meal, and a feed of bran, either damp or dry, at least twice weekly. This may be extra, or in lieu of oats, as is indicated by the apparent requirements of the colt.

His feet require attention. The wear is usually not sufficient to keep them in proper shape, the toes grow long and the heels deep and narrow, and the wall turns inwards below the quarters. If this be not corrected or prevented, permanent harm may result. The feet should be carefully examined at least once monthly and dressed to as near the normal size and shape as possible by the use of a shoeing smith's knife and rasp.

The stall should be cleaned out at least once weekly.—J. H. R., Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.

A Farm Workshop.

The progressive farmer recognizes the need of a small building where he can overhaul, paint and repair his farm equipment in the most expeditious manner. Such a building must be compact and conveniently arranged with a floor space that will accommodate any of his larger machines.

The floor should be of concrete to stand the wear and tear. In making the floor it will be necessary to place the anchor bolts, to which the sill is fastened, before the concrete has set.

The work bench, forge and heater must be so placed that the centre of the floor is left clear, but the bench and anvil must be well lighted. The placing of the long window will depend upon which side of the shop receiving the best light.

Stairs lead through a trap-door to the loft, where the lumber, etc., is stored. This loft is lighted with a window at each end and it also has a small door at the front, on a level with the floor.

Engineer Has Plan to Stop Floods on Mississippi River.

Would Provide Shorter Outlet to Sea by Using Atchafalaya to Carry Silt-Bearing Water.

The levee system on the Mississippi river from Cairo to the Gulf of Mexico was intended to protect the cultivated lands adjacent to the river. This system has resulted in building up the bed of the river from year to year by reason of the fact that all of the tributary streams running into the Mississippi river have greater velocity, and consequently sediment brought into the main river, whose current is slower, is deposited in the river between Cairo and the Gulf. This is the main cause of the flood line going higher each year with a given rainfall.

Now, the most practical and cheapest remedy for this is to make a shorter outlet to the sea for this vast volume of silt-bearing water, and this outlet is via the Atchafalaya river, the source of which is near the mouth of the Red river, where it empties into the Mississippi, writes M. F. Jefferdo in Popular Mechanics Magazine. The Atchafalaya river runs straight to the tidewater of the Gulf, a distance of about 100 miles, whereas, via the Mississippi river the distance from the mouth of the Red river to the Gulf is 200 miles. The fall of the Mississippi river from the mouth of the Red river to the Gulf is about one-tenth of a foot per mile; of the Atchafalaya about three-tenths of a foot to the mile.

The increase in velocity from the mouth of the Red river to the Gulf via the Atchafalaya would probably lower the grade line of high water to two-tenths of a foot per mile, which would reduce the high-water line for that point (mouth of Red river), 20 feet or more. This reduction in high-water mark would probably extend as far north as Memphis, or even Cairo; thus it can be seen that the levee as now built from Memphis to the Gulf would be of ample height and strength to give safety to the adjacent country for probably 100 years or more.

Would this improvement leave New Orleans an inland city? No. For the slowing down of the velocity of the water in the Mississippi from the mouth of the Red river to the Gulf via the old channels would result in all the sediment being carried to sea via the Atchafalaya, leaving the old channel a clear-water channel, which could be maintained at all times by a little dredging such as is necessary now at the jetties. The railroads entering New Orleans could then bridge the Mississippi river there and would profit in the long run by aviating the flooding of their tracks.

The jetties at the mouth of the Mississippi could be dredged to a depth of 40 to 50 feet and remain so, for no sediment would be going out that way to fill them up. The high-water line at New Orleans would hardly exceed ten feet above low water.

The low-water line at New Orleans being only one foot above sea level, with a depth of 50 to 60 feet of water, is can be seen that not only would New Orleans be secure from floods in the future, but that the largest vessels in the world could enter its harbor.

The Mississippi river, from the jetties to the mouth of the Red river, would be a canal, navigable at all times, with a little dredging, perhaps, between Baton Rouge and the Red river, and all that rich country on either side of the river from the mouth of the Red river to the Gulf would be absolutely secure from floods.

Some Cow!

"She's an awf'ly good cow. Our children think the world of her. You'll like her immensely."

"And how much milk does she give?"

"Don't know exactly, but she's a nice cow—first class."

"Well, you must have some idea—does she give a gallon at a milking?"

"Never kept very much track."

"But you have a rough notion about it. Does she give as much as half a gallon a day?"

"Couldn't say definitely. She's an awf'ly good, kind old cow, though. If she's got any milk she'll give it to you."—Exchange.

Suffered Great Agony FROM PAIN IN STOMACH FOR OVER 5 YEARS

Most of the misery and ill-health that humanity is burdened with arises from disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels. If you are feeling out of sorts, have pains in the stomach, especially after eating, bilious spells, headaches, sour stomach, coated tongue, sallow or muddy complexion, specks floating before the eyes, you should take a few doses of Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills and note the change.

Miss Ida Hogan, Dunrobin, Ont., writes: "For over five years I have suffered great agony from pains in the stomach. I tried several remedies but got no relief until a friend advised me to take Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. I started with two vials and before I had one quite used, I found much relief. I continued until I used four vials, and they have completely cured me. That was fourteen months ago and I have not had the slightest return since. The best praise I could give them is not enough."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

OUR PEAT BOGS.

Twelve Thousand Square Miles Could Yield 9,300,000 Tons.

Hon. Martin Burrell, as well as the Reconstruction Committee of the Cabinet, has been studying the question of the use of peat. Recommendations are before the council which it is expected will result in making a start towards getting some benefits from the peat bogs.

Dr. Eugene Haanel, Director of the Mines Branch, has made a valuable report on the subject of peat which is being given consideration in formulating a policy. Dr. Haanel estimates the total area of the Dominion overlain by peat bogs as 37,000 square miles, and of this total area the known peat bogs of Ontario, Quebec and Manitoba comprise 12,000 square miles, with an average depth of six feet. He estimates the 12,000 square miles will contain about 9,300,000 tons of peat, having a fuel value equivalent to about 5,400,000 tons of coal.

Seven bogs within convenient shipping distances of Toronto are estimated to be capable of producing approximately 26,500,000 tons of fuel; and seven bogs in the vicinity of Montreal could supply that city with 23,500,000 tons of fuel.

Five bogs along the Lower St. Lawrence, conveniently situated as regards water transportation to the city of Quebec, can, it is estimated, supply 16,250,000 tons of fuel and 5,700,000 tons of peat litter.

The bogs examined in Nova Scotia can produce 6,200,000 tons of fuel and 500,000 tons of peat litter, and those of Prince Edward Island produce 1,250,000 tons of fuel and over 1,000,000 tons of peat litter.

In Manitoba the aggregate fuel content of the bogs is estimated at less than 2,000,000 tons. One bog alone, however, it has been estimated, is capable of furnishing 2,500,000 tons of peat litter.

Small House.

"The Doll's House," South Audley street, London, England, which has been acquired by a member of a well-known New York family, is the smallest house in Mayfair, but not the smallest in London. This distinction belongs to No. 10 Hyde Park place, one of a row of houses on the Bayswater side overlooking the park, built over a passage six feet wide, between Nos. 9 and 11. Although it has a street door guarded by an iron gate, there is only one room in the house. This architectural oddity was built about fifty years ago by an old lady named Jupp, who lived at No. 9, for occupation by one of her servants. She had a number placed on the street door, and so endowed it with a separate existence as a house.

To Keep Your Skin Free From Hairs

(Beauty Topics.)

If you are willing to spend a few minutes time in your room using a delatone paste, you can easily banish any ugly, hairy with without discomfort or injury. The paste is made by mixing some water with a little powdered delatone. This is then spread over the hairy surface and after about 2 minutes rubbed off and the skin washed. You will not be disappointed with this treatment, providing you get real delatone.

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, APRIL 11, 1918

THE BRITISH FORCES WITHDRAWN FROM ARMENTIERES

THE BATTLE IS CONTINUING ON A WIDE FRONT

INSTRUCTIONS GIVEN TO IRISH VOLUNTEERS

BRITISH TROOPS HAVE WITHDRAWN FROM ARMENTIERES ON NORTHERN BATTLE FRONT

The Battle is Continuing on a Wide Front—Enemy Forced Back at Several Points — Very Severe Fighting.

BRITISH OFFICIAL REPORT

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, April 11.—(Official.)—The British have withdrawn from Armentieres on the northern battle front. Violent fighting continues all along the front from the La Bassee Canal to the Ypres-Comines Canal.

THE STATEMENT FOLLOWS.

"We have withdrawn from Amentieres, which is full of gas," Haig said.

"The battle is continuing on the whole front from the La Bassee Canal to the Ypres-Comines Canal. There is severe fighting in the neighbourhood of the Lawe and Lye rivers from about Lestres to Armentieres.

"North of Armentieres there is little change. In the neighbourhood of Ploegstreet, Messines and Wytschaete there was heavy fighting until a late hour last night."

COUNTER ATTACKS.

LONDON, April 11.—With the British Armies in Belgium.— The Germans this morning were in possession of about half of the village of Ploegstreet and Ploegstreet Wood, on the Flanders front, just north of Armentieres. Fighting was continuing this morning north of Armentieres, with the British still holding Messines Ridge and Wyts Chaete, which yesterday changed hands several times. During the day the enemy succeeded in entering not only these positions, but Lacre-Che, Nieppe and Hollebeke. Vigorous counter attacks forced the enemy from all these places.

Lakefield Boys Gave A Supper

LAKEFIELD, April 10. — Last night the boys of Lakefield gathered at the Power-House and gave a supper in honour of Mr. Thos. Simpson, who left this morning to join a Forestry Battalion in Hamilton. The affair proved to be a very enjoyable one, and after supper a number of the boys gave speeches. An address was read and a cigarette case was presented to Mr. Simpson, who replied suitably.

Personals.

Miss Nugent and Mrs. Webster Blewett spent Thursday in Peterborough.

Fred. Young, of Young's Point, passed through the village to-day on his way to Peterborough.

Miss Ethel Haight left Thursday for Toronto, after a few days' visit with her sister, Mrs. Abel Hendren.

Mr. Wm. Adams was in Peterborough Thursday.

SPECIAL SERVICE LARGELY ATTENDED.

The special service at the George Street Methodist Church last night was largely attended. It was a meeting of great interest and power, and will long be remembered. Rev. Mr. Wickett spoke on the "Harvest of the Kingdom," and the pastor was in charge of the rest of the meeting. Almost one hundred people, young and old, stood up and said with intense determination, "Christ is my King; I mean to be true." Rev. R. A. Whattam will preach this evening. Song service at 7.45.

OFFICIAL REASON FOR THE JAPANESE LANDING AT RUSSIAN SEAPORT

(United Press Service.)

(By Ralph Turner)

TOKIO, Japan, April 11.—Japanese marines landed in Vladivastok at dawn, April the fifth, for the protection of Japanese residents following an attack on a Japanese shop the previous day, it was officially announced to-day. One Japanese was killed in the attack, and there were other casualties.

Disorder reigns in Vladivostok, it was said. The police force is under the absolute control of the Bolsheviki Soviet.

AMERICA PLANS TO SPEED UP HER TROOP MOVEMENTS

United States Will Have An Army of 1,500,000 in France by Christmas—Allies Not Afraid.

A GRAVE DANGER

NEW YORK, April 11.—(United Press service)—America will have an army of 1,500,000 soldiers in France by Christmas under shipping arrangements just completed by the British Admiralty, said Sir John Foster Fraser, member of parliament here to-day.

The British Admiralty has completed arrangements whereby it will be possible for America to send to France four or five times as many soldiers as it has sent in the months of January, February and March.

A GRAVE DANGER.

Sir John said that there is grave danger of the war ending this year, not by force of arms, but by German propaganda, such as was successful in Russia and partly so in Italy.

Germany has not played her last card yet, according to Sir John.

"I hope," he continued, "America will not be afraid of the present German push; England is not afraid; France is not afraid."

GOD BLESS THE SOLDIER BOY.

"God bless the soldier boy who gets these socks. These socks are knit by Dorothy Roberts, aged seven," was the message that went over to France from Dorothy Roberts, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Roberts, who were recently welcomed to Peterboro, Mr. Roberts to take the management of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., here.

Little Dorothy's socks were received by Pte. S. E. Smart of the 28th Battalion, and this is the acknowledgment he wrote:

Dear Miss Roberts,—We received some socks the other day and in my pair was your note. You may guess I was glad it was there so I can drop you a line to thank you. I think you are all doing a great work for us. It certainly is kind of you. Please accept my sincree thanks and give my best regards and kindest wishes to all who are helping you in this charitable work. There is nothing much I could tell you by way of news so I am forced to close.

Thanking you again many times and wishing you the best of health, happiness and success, I am,

Yours gratefully,
Pte. S. E. Smart,
28th Batt. Can. Fra ce.

THREE PERSONS ARE DETAINED BY THE AUTHORITIES

Suspects Are Held in Connection With Daring Robbery of Montreal Branch of Royal Bank

Montreal, April 11.—Three persons have been detained by the police in connection with the daring robbery of the Cote Des Neiges Branch of the Royal Bank of Canada last Friday. Early this morning two men and a woman were taken into charge at Brockville, Ont., and later brought to Montreal. About $800 in cash, supposed to have formed part of the stolen $5000, was secured when the capture was made.

The arrested persons are Joseph and Albert Larue, and a woman, whose name is not revealed.

Amendments To The Industrial Disputes Investigation Act

Canadian Press.

OTTAWA, April 11.—The amendments to the industrial disputes investigation act, proposed by the Minister of Labour in the House, yesterday, will not affect the principle of the act and only touch the procedure. The bill has not yet been printed, but it is stated that one amendment provides for the resummoning of the Boards after a finding has been given, in order that such finding, if necessary, may be interpreted. Under present conditions the Board are debarred as soon as a decision is given, and frequently disputes have arisen on matter of interpretation.

Desperate Fighting

There is No Let-up in the Battle Which Rages on a Twenty-five Mile Front—British Came Back

POSITIONS RECAPTURED

Special to the Examiner:

NEW YORK, April 11. — This afternoon the Associated Press war summary says: "Armentieres has been evacuated by the British, while the Germans, driving on a front west of the town, are struggling to push forward in the area south-west of the Messines Ridge, the key-point of the British line in Flanders. Messines Ridge itself has been the objective of desperate frontal attacks, and the Germans are reported to have pushed on to the Ridge several times during the fierce hand-to-hand fighting. Each time, however, the British came back at them with effective counter-attacks, and to-day were still holding the Ridge. West of Armentieres the enemy, struggling in his death blow, has pushed the fighting to the limit, and at one time succeeded in driving three miles beyond the River Lys to Lacroche. In this the British likewise resisted strongly, and by vigorous counter-attacks, outset the Germans from Lacroche and other neighbouring territory. Other points were similarly recaptured. The evacuation of Armentieres had been forecasted and discussed as the place is without strategical value. There was no let up in the engagement to-day. The battle is continuing on the entire twenty-five mile front, from La Bassee north to the Ypres-Comines Canal, just below Ypres.

REMNANTS OF GERMAN FORCES ROUNDED UP

Canadian Press Despatch:

The news of his injury was received this morning by his mother, Mrs. George McKim, 769 Water street. Corp. McKim has been all through the 21st Battalion's fighting, but escaped the casualty lists until his injury last Saturday.

Gangs Defy The Police

War on Military Police Near Pembroke

Special to the Examiner:

OTTAWA, April 11.— Reports from the Pembroke front this morning, where war on military police has been declared by young men, mostly of German extraction, indicated that there are quite a number of gangs encamped in the wildest points in the surrounding country, free from molestation until the weather clears up sufficiently to enable the police to go after them. They have hoisted red flags and dared the police to come after them.

GERMANS HAVE REACHED NEIGHBOURHOOD OF STEENWERCK WEST OF ARMENTIERES

Villages Around Messines Changed Hands Several Times During the Terrific Struggle—Hand-to-Hand Fighting.

GERMANS STILL HELD

Two O'clock Despatch:
(By William Philip Simms).
(United Press Service).

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, April 11.—The Germans have reached the neighbourhood of Steenwerck (four and a half miles west of Armentieres and two miles north of the Lys River), it is reported, as this is cabled.

The enemy also is reported to have reached the edge of Estaires (four miles and a half south and west of Steenwerck) and to be in the eastern half of Ploegsteert Wood, just outside the ruins of the villages of Messines and Wytschaete.

At four o'clock this morning German artillery began shelling Martinhart and Englebelmar.

British Countered.

Wednesday's fighting continued throughout the night in the new salient north of the St. Maur bridgehead. Gen Von Quast enlarged his gains. Once the enemy occupied La Creche, Nieppe, Ploegsteert, Messines and Wytschaete, but the British counter-attacked, driving them out of La Creche, Nieppe, Messines, Wytschaete and retaking the western half of Ploegsteert.

Around Messines and Wytschaete the fighting yesterday was particularly heavy. Those places were taken and retaken several times in a hand-to-hand struggle.

Steenwerck and La Creche were the scenes of smaller fighting.

On the southern part of the battle front fighting was slow.

Together with Haig's official, the above report may indicate that the British, in abandoning Armentieres, retired at least three miles behind that city. A line from Steenwerck to Ploegsteert Wood would pass that distance north-west of Armentieres. There is a possibility that instead of straightening their line here, the Germans are still held a short distance from Armentieres, and that the salient continues there, although less acute.

BRITISH STEAMSHIP "MINNETONKA" SUNK IN THE MEDITERRANEAN

NEW YORK, April 11.—The big British steamship Minnetonka, 13,528 tons gross, register and formerly in the New York-London passenger trade for the Atlantic Transport Line was sunk by a German submarine in the Mediterranean during February.

Maritime Register reports to-day: The Minnetonka was one of our passenger ships of the line aggregating 55,099 gross tons, all of which have been sunk since the war began. The three others were the Minneapolis sunk March 22, 1916. Minnehaha sunk Sept. 7, 1917, and the Minnewaska sunk Nov. 29, 1917.

HINDENBURG INTENDS TO PLAY FAST AND FURIOUS

PTE. GEORGE VAN NORMAN,
Whose death occurred in the city this morning. A military funeral will be held on Saturday.

British Bayonets Are Flashing Red At Messines With the Blood of Hindenburg's Hosts.

CRY TO AMERICA

(Ten o'clock despatch by William Philip Simms)
(United Press Despatch)

With the British Armies in France, April 11.—Whatever cards America has up her sleeve, she must be prepared to make a show down within a few months.

Hindenburg undoubtedly intends to play fast and furious, to end the war as soon as possible. Avowedly, he is aiming for the annihilation of both the British and French. He is prepared to concentrate against either, shifting his drive first against one, then the other, according to conditions.

A CONCENTRATION.

Present indications point toward a concentration against the British. Checked from Arras, southward, the Germans took advantage of their exceptional transportation and quickly sent up divisions betwen Armentieres and Labasse, striking the Portuguese and the British. They were stopped by the stiffest hand-to-hand fighting, notably by the Fifty-Fifth Division, holding Givenchy Hill, which commands the line as far as Armentieres.

Slipping to one side the enemy struck again against Messines where, as I write, British bayonets are flashing red, while Crown Prince Rupprecht's guns thunder.

Hoping to pinch off Armentieres, the Germans intended to reach Bethune and outflank Vimy and Arras, and more important still, Notre Dame Lorette.

THE GERMAN METHOD.

The Fifty-Fifth's stand undoubtedly checked this plan, the British taking nearly one thousand prisoners, who testified to the German methods of enthusing their fighters by promising quickly to relieve troops who advanced successfully and threatening those who failed with a long stay in the line.

New arrivals make a total of about two hundred divisions with more coming. Divisions which were mauled during March are refitting and re-filling and coming up with tales of big advances and approaching victory.

Hindenburg's force is the biggest in the history of the world and he has the greatest net work of railways and highways.

The Allies, fighting like lions, are crying "Come on, America."

MAGNITUDE OF CANADA'S SHARE IN GREAT WAR

Since March 1914 Canada Has Spent More Than in Preceding Twenty-Three Years

(Special to The Examiner.)

Ottawa, April 11.—The magnitude of Canada's share in the great war, may be judged from the following table, which compares the estimates, in round hundreds of thousands, for the present fiscal year, with those for the year immediately preceding the war:

	1913-14	1918-19
Ordinary Current	$125,000,000	$224,300,000
Ordinary Capital	53,300,000	28,500,000
War Capital	nil	515,900,000
Totals	$179,100,000	$768,700,000

Since March 31, 1914, and including this year's figures, Canada's expenditures, capital and current, for all purposes, amount to over $1,850,000,000.

This is more than Canada spent in the preceding 23 years. It is more than three times the assessed value of the whole of Toronto.

PETERBOROUGH'S SHARE ALMOST DOUBLE.

The three days' special campaign for making head-bandages, for which the local Red Cross had received an urgent appeal from headquarters, proved very successful. On Wednesday afternoon 960 bandages, almost double the number assigned as Peterborough's share, were sent to Toronto for shipment overseas.

A TYPOGRAPHICAL ERROR.

A typographical error in the paragraph in the Examiner last night in regard to the 93rd Band instruments may have caused some misunderstanding on the part of some of our readers. The item intended to convey the idea that a number of citizens believed that the instruments, having been raised for overseas troops should now become the property of the Great War Veterans. The word "now," however, appeared as "not," which, of course, completely altered the meaning of the sentence.

FRANK JENNE Says:

There is an inborn tendency in the Canadian man of affairs, which forces him to discriminate finely in the selection of a suit. It must be appropriate and it must be good. It must be in harmony with the times and the event. Therefore he selects a Semi-ready suit. There is a style for every occasion. For new spring suits that will charm your eye, "Come to Me."

BANDSMEN, ATTENTION

It has been decided to increase the present strength of the 57th Regt. Band from 30 men to 50, and with this object in view all bandsmen in the City are cordially invited to become members. Instruments provided and all the privileges of first-class quarters at the Armouries accorded new men as well as every assistance in securing positions. Rehearsals every Tuesday and Friday. "Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

THURSDAY, APRIL 11TH, 1918.

FAMILIAR GROUND.

The new drive started by the Germans north of Labassee, is of peculiar interest to the people of Canada, not only because a deep penetration of the British lines would imperil the Canadian hold on Vimye Ridge, but because the scene of the latest fighting includes territory that is very familiar to the Canadian forces. It was on the sector between Labassee and Armentieres that the Peterboro soldiers with their comrades of the 1st Canadian Contingent received their first lessons in trench warfare, in fact, it was at Bois Grenier, mentioned in this morning's despatches, that the first casualty among Peterboro members of the C. E.F. took place, Sergt. Peter Victor being wounded there, while Givenchy, which has changed hands several times in the fighting of the past couple of days, was the scene of a hard fight in which the Canadians were engaged. It was at this point that Lieut.-Col. Ackerman was wounded. The German attack has spread to the northward as far as Messines, thus involving territory that is well known to the men of the 2nd Canadian Division, as they were stationed in this sector for a long period.

The strength of the Vimy Ridge-Hill 70 sector held by the Canadians is evidenced by the fact that this portion of the front alone of the whole line from the Oise as far north as Messines, has so far escaped a frontal attack by the Germans. In their first onslaught, the enemy attacked from the Scarpe south to La Fere. The second attack was directed at Arras, just south of the Canadian front, and now they have struck from Labassee to Messines, north of the position held by General Currie's men.

VETERANS INDIGNANT.

Many people who voted for the Union Government in the recent election because they believed that a more vigorous Canadian participation in the war would follow, are beginning to question the wisdom of their action. Among them are many members of the Great War Veterans' Association who are sorely disappointed over the Government's failure to deal with the alien problem—a matter that about which the returned soldiers feel very strongly. So intense has grown the indignation of many of the returned men that the Central branch of the G. W. V. A. at Toronto have decided to go into politics and have passed the following resolution regarding their position:

"Whereas, the present Union Government owe their election to power to the vote cast by soldiers, returned men and their dependents; and

"Whereas, the candidates for election made specific promises looking to improved conditions in connection with the continuance of the war; and

"Whereas, one of the improved conditions is the control of alien labour; and

"Whereas, the M. S. A. as at present worked is nothing short of racial legislation in that it exempts the alien and conscripts the British subject; and

"Whereas the present Union Government has seen fit to ignore the demand made by this association, giving it no representation on the Land Settlement Commission, members of this association and other returned men being the most vitally interested part of the population;

"Therefore, be it resolved, that this association does now hereby pledge itself to nominate and support such active members as may be decided upon, at conventions held for the purpose, as candidates for such municipal, Provincial and Federal elective offices and positions as may be decided upon.

AN EXPLANATION NEEDED.

Many influential papers, favourably disposed towards Union Government, are continuing to press the question of the resignation of Cost-of-Living Commissioner W. F. O'Connor, and their opinion that the matter should be aired in the House of Commons, is shared by the people of the Dominion generally, who believe that the Premier should give a frank explanation of the reasons for Mr. O'Connor's retirement. Whether he has been driven out by the pressure of the interests he has offended by his fearless investigations, or whether his resignation is caused by a disagreement with the Minister of Labour the public are entitled to the facts. There are many people who believe that if the latter were the case it would have been more profitable for Canada to have retired Mr. Crothers rather than Mr. O'Connor. The Kingston Whig, which staunchly supported Union Government during the recent campaign, shares this opinion and expresses it, as follows:

The Department of Labour, presided over by Hon. Thos. Crothers, has control of the Food Commission. There never was a weaker minister at Ottawa than Mr. Crothers. The administration of his department has been continually criticized and ridiculed in the House and throughout the country. As a labour minister he has fallen far short of pleasing the labour interests of the Dominion. And now his interference with O'Connor and his assistants have compelled their resignation, just at a time when the country most needed their services. The profiteers interested in putting up the price of food will welcome these resignations, and in adverse ratio to this welcome will be the regret of the rest of the country.

EMPLOYMENT FOR VETERANS.

A local contemporary, in dealing with an article published in The Examiner several nights ago, pointing out the necessity of a more vigorous Government policy in finding employment for returned soldiers, accused this paper of attempting to "make a little cheap capital" against the Government, by encouraging the Veterans of the war to believe that they are neglected by the Government when their work is done." Any newspaper article designed to make the Veterans believe that they are being neglected would be redundant, just as the attempt of the Review to make them think otherwise is futile.

In the first place, our contemporary refers to pensions, remarking that a scale of pensions has been devised "more liberal than of any other country in the world."

We are prepared to admit that the scale is, perhaps, adequate—in the case of Col. Labatt, of the Board of Pensions Commissioners, liberal to a fault—as far as those men who are granted total disability by the Medical Board are concerned. Their income from the Government is, perhaps, sufficient to maintain them and their families, but the point about which the returned men complain is the grading of the pensions. A man who is unable to do any heavy labour may be only receiving $8 or $12 per month in pension. He certainly cannot live on that sum, and yet when he seeks employment he finds the greatest difficulty in securing a position in which he is able to carry on.

Then, the Review mentions the Soldiers' Aid Commission, leaving the inference that this body is the appointment of the Federal Commission. Nothing of the kind. The Soldiers' Aid Commission in Ontario is a Provincial institution, the expenses of which are paid by the Ontario Government. There are similar bodies in other provinces, all provincially maintained, and none of which receive any assistance from the Government at Ottawa. The Dominion authorities shouldered the task of looking after returned men to these Provincial Commissions at a conference in October, 1915, and they have been endeavouring to grapple with the problem ever since, with no financial, and very little other help, from the Federal Government. How they have succeeded the returned men themselves can best answer.

Vocational training is the next item mentioned in the defence of the Government. The Examiner did not find fault with this feature of the problem of dealing with the returned men, except to say that in our opinion it did not go far enough. In this connection, the reference of Mayor Church, of Toronto, who knows as much about the troubles of returned soldiers as any man in Canada, and who has probably done more for them than any individual, should be of interest. Referring to the re-education of the soldiers, he says:

"Vocational training is a very high-sounding name, and the theory of it is all right, but it will be found that when the great body of men come home it will be of little effect unless the country is prepared to keep the men on the pay roll at full pay until they learn some other suitable pursuit."

"Then in all reason what more can the Government do than has already be done, unless it be to open more technical training schools, and induce the Veterans to avail themselves of their opportunities?" asks the Review, in conclusion.

There are many things that the Government might do, and among them they might carry out the recommendations of the Special Committee from the House of Commons, appointed last year to inquire into the care and treatment of returned soldiers. This committee, of which Sir Herbert Ames, was chairman, went into the whole question of the returned man at length. No fewer than ninety-six witnesses, including thirty-two delegates from returned soldiers' organizations, were examined, and at the conclusion of the inquiry the committee made a number of recommendations.

As regards the matter of employment for the returned soldiers, the Committee summed up the condition of affairs as follows:

"Since the stream of men has commenced to return, and the problem of the returned soldier has become urgent, a number of bodies, government and voluntary, have been created to deal with the different phases of this problem. To a considerable degree, these agencies overlap, are loosely related to each other, are responsible to different departments, or are a law unto themselves. The consequence is more or less confusion, with attendant lack of success, in so far as the returned soldier is concerned in securing the best results."

That is the finding of the committee after an exhaustive inquiry, and to-day conditions, instead of being improved, are worse, because the number of returned men has been largely augmented.

The Special Committee recommended a number of things to the Government, among them the following:

"That the Federal Government should assume the expenses and responsibility of finding employment for the returned soldier with such co-operation from the Provinces as they are willing and able to give.

"The establishment and maintenance by the Federal Government, at suitable centres throughout the Dominion, of general clearing house bureaux, where information affecting returned soldiers would be given. This should include information respecting pay, separation allowances, pensions, hospital treatment, re-education and vocational training. Such bureaux might also act as Federal employment agencies."

"Your committee is of the opinion that IT IS THE DUTY OF THE STATE TO MAKE ALL NECESSARY AND SUITABLE ARRANGEMENTS FOR THE PROPER MAINTENANCE of returned disabled soldiers and their families."

For some reason or other the Government has apparently pigeon-holed this lengthy report of the committee. Its recommendations have not been acted on; the Federal Government has failed to assume the expenses and responsibility of finding employment for returned men, or to establish the bureaux, as suggested. The Soldiers' Aid Commission, a voluntary organization, and maintained by the province, is the only agency outside of the Great War Veterans' Association, and the Army and Navy Veterans, to attempt to do what the Federal Government should have in charge, the return of the discharged soldier to civil life. If the authorities at Ottawa cannot grapple with the problem now, the outlook for the future, when the Canadian army is demobilized, is far from possessing that roseate hue the Review's article would lead one to anticipate.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

"It is desirable and prudent to secure coal supplies as early as possible in summer," is the advice of Mr. R. C. Harris, Fuel Administrator for Ontario. United States Fuel Controller Garfield goes still further, and advises people to buy their coal as soon as possible, even if they have to borrow the money to pay for the fuel.

The strike in the Lethbridge coal mines because an Austrian was discharged, is another argument in favour of the Government dealing with the alien question.

Mr. Justice Duff's decision that officers and men of the Canadian militia are not exempt from the workings of the Military Service Act, will affect a number who used to wear red coats in the days before the Germans plunged through Belgium.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

EXPLAINED.

(Toledo Blade)

The reason time and tide wait for no man is because they couldn't do it and maintain a regular schedule.

CENTRALIZATION.

(Chicago Tribune)

War activities are working towards centralization, slowly and by their own insistence. It has taken four years to bring the Allied armies in France under one command, although during the four years the Germans have been telling their enemies that centralization direction meant victory.

THE BEAR OBJECTS.

(London Advertiser)

It is said that the Ukrainians are cutting up rough at the Huns' way of abstracting their wheat. The bear likes taking honey, but objects to the plunder of his own stores by the enemy he has fraternized into his lair.

AGAINST STALLS

(Kingston Whig)

Private stalls in restaurants, especially in war time, should be abolished. Some of these places are becoming notorious, and decent citizens are asking why the authorities do not raid a few of them. Have no complaints been made in the police department?

A MENACE TO THE WORLD.

(New York Sun)

That the Turks expect with Germany's aid to continue their occupation of Constantinople and the control of the Straits and to force the restoration of much of their lost lands in the East there is no doubt. The growth of this power as a subservient ally of Teutonism constitutes a menace to the peace of the world, and any check on the progress of its aggression is a gain to civilization.

DIFFERENT HERE

(Toronto Globe)

A clergyman in Vermont has been sentenced to fifteen years' imprisonment for opposing the participation of the United States in the war. In this country a similar offence is punished by Government advertising.

DEAL WITH BOURASSA.

(Victoria, B.C., Colonist)

M. Henri Bourassa's articles directed against the Allies are undoubtedly the inspiration of the rioting which has occurred in Quebec city. This man should be dealt with as if he stood in the way of Canada doing her part in the war. We have reached too great a crisis in this war to permit any longer the voicing of traitorous expressions which display deepseated enmity to ourselves and those who are fighting with us in the struggle. We want no counterparts of Lenine and Trotzky in this Dominion.

A RAP FOR THE "NEWS".

(Toronto Globe)

The Toronto News doesn't like to be reminded of the Borden-Bourassa alliance of 1911, nor of the fact that it was good Tory money from the party funds that financed the distribution of Le Devoir at that time. The News itself extolled Bourassa when he spoke in Northern Ontario on behalf of Borden and the Borden candidates. Canada now reaps what The News helped to sow.

Not Always Golden.

(Ottawa Journal.)

Silence is golden, but only under certain circumstances. Just now the need seems to be for the independent voice of Parliament to give expression to certain very definite things upon which the nation would like to be heard.

What's the Harm?

Boston Globe: In England they are so pleased with the practical working of the daylight-saving scheme that it is proposed to set the clocks ahead again an hour May 19, to be kept there until July 21, thus giving all engaged in trades and professions, 63 hours of daylight more than they had last year. What's the harm?

The One Great Need.

(Ottawa Journal.)

Lloyd George's recent appeal to Canada indicates that the one great need is men for the army. Sir Robert Borden's one great mandate from the people of Canada is to raise men for the army.

Like Lessard.

(Hamilton Herald.)

Ontario people have no prejudice against French-Canadians as such. For example, Ontario people have for that fine soldier Major-General perfect confidence in and admiration Lessard, the officer in command of the military in Quebec, who is a French-Canadian.

The Reason.

(St. Thomas Journal.)

There are said to be nine hundred empty schools in the Province of Alberta because of a lack of teachers. And this condition of affairs will probably continue unless trustees come to realize that school teaching is a profession which requires brains and education and should command salaries in proportion.

The Hidden Paymaster.

(Ottawa Journal-Press.)

Of course, the Quebec riots are an indirect result of the insidious campaign which Bourassa and men of his kidney have been permitted under what we think has been a mistaken idea of "freedom of speech," to conduct throughout the French province. But Britishers who have followed the Teuton trail of conspiracy in the United States, France and elsewhere, who have studied the activities of a Bernstorff and a Bolo, have good ground for suspicion that behind the Quebec city conspirators, and behind Bourassa, is German money and German organization.

Tenders For Planting And Care of Peterboro' Parks

Peterborough Nursing Sister Is Home For Short Furlough

Nursing Sister McCarney Has Been in the Service Since the First Year of the War—On Transport Duty.

CONDITIONS IN ENGLAND

Nursing Sister Katherine McCarney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. McCarney, 21 Bethune Street, arrived home on Monday on a short furlough. Miss McCarney, who has been with the Red Cross since the first year of the war, has seen many months of active service in France, frequently near Ypres, and up to February had been attached to 15th General at Taplow. In February she was signally honoured by being transferred to the permanent Hospital Ship staff, and it was in this capacity she made her sixth voyage over, arriving in the city on Monday night, to remain until Saturday, April 20th, when she will report in Halifax.

ROUGH CROSSING.

The trip which was made in nineteen days, was made under considerable difficulties, of which on account of military restrictions, Miss McCarney is unable to tell. However, she said that the icebergs have come down unusually early, and the strictest watch was kept and many enormous icebergs passed. On the ship, on which there were eight hundred soldiers mostly very seriously wounded, there was not one fire arm. The Geneva Red Cross Convention is respected by the Allies if not by the Huns. The boys coming home, many of them First Contingent men, were in hilarious spirits, and spent most of their time in concerts and minstrel shows.

"A peculiar thing" said Miss McCarney, "is the fact that the worse wounded a man may be the less complaint he makes of conditions, and the less he expects. A man who never got beyond "Blighty" expects to return to a "cushy" job in Canada, and all because he volunteered to safeguard his own national honour, which is individually as important to him as to the nation."

IN ENGLAND.

In England, Miss McCarney said things are very blue just now. A heavy cloudu of depression hangs over the nation and spirits are not what they were. Asked of the food conditions she said that by way of the new regulations there is no actual need. The queue has disappeared and food rations so organized that no one needs or is in a panic. However Miss McCarney noticed, herself, in her three years of service a decided change in the quantity and quality of the food.

MET THE KING.

In the hospital Miss McCarney frequently met the King and Queen, who she said, are "just ordinary people, who come into the wards with a kind word for every person and quite naturally drink a casual cup of tea with the nurses and staff."

Just before leaving Miss McCarney met Art Graham, Douglas Loomis, Ted Crowe and Miss Davidson and Miss Kennedy.

THE GROCERS MET LAST NIGHT FOOD BOARD ASKS INFORMATION

The System of Doing Business Must Be Re-organized to Effect Economy—Report of Meeting—The Question of Delivery

A large gathering of grocers met last evening in the Y.M.C.A. Those present included some of the largest to the smallest dealer in food stuffs.

That the grocers do not wish to be behind other lines of business in contributing to the greater production movement and are desirous of giving their employees the benefit of the shortened hours the same as is being adopted all about them, was evident during the course of the discussion.

It was therefore moved that a petition be prepared for signature, asking the aldermen to fix the closing hour at six o'clock instead of seven and set the hour of closing at nine o'clock on Saturday night. The grocers themselves should benefit to the same extent as the employee.

Eliminate Waste.

The Food Control Board is anxious to eliminate waste and unnecessary expense in the distribution of food stuffs and those present at the meeting were unanimous that much could be accomplished if the people (that means every householder) would act in harmony with their grocer.

The grocers will not take any action detrimental to the best interests to their customers, whom they look upon as their best friends, as indeed in many instances they are, but believe that if it were pointed out to the people that a great amount of waste could be avoided and a large saving effected by mutual co-operation the people would be patriotic enough to give their whole-hearted approval.

It was therefore decided to allow that feature to stand over till the next meeting when the grocers will have a chance to get the feeling of their particular trade and to allow of the attendance of those grocers who were unable to be present last evening.

An illustration of the cost of doing a credit business was sighted, showing the amount of money which could be given off regular prices if the business was conducted on a cash basis.

Mr. Smith, the grocer, is carrying two hundred current accounts which figures out something like this: "The first customer is a farmer, probably pays in six weeks. His account stands at sixty dollars. Next customer is a two weeks' account will be paid in a few days. Amount $12.50. The next account is a weekly one paid in full last week—$5.75 more on the book in the meantime. The next account is that of a retired farmer—$20.00 on the books. The next account are Edison pay accounts, two weeks paid in full on the 8th. The first has eight dollars standing now and the next $6.75. The next account—on account of illess a small balance being left stands now at $15.00, making seven customers owing $128.00. The same thing runs throughout the two hundred accounts which show an average of $18.25 per customer. Two hundred customers making the total of $3,650.00 which is always outstanding. At seven per cent interest which the grocer often has to pay himself in order to carry the liability amounts to $255.50 per year. Add to that the price of $500 counter check books—$30.00. The time necessary each day for your bookkeeper or yourself to write up the charges which will figure about two hours— figured at fifteen cents per hour— thirty cents a day for three hundred days, is $90.00. Allow twenty-five dollars for loss through bad debts bringing the total up to over $400.00 per year, which is the actual cost to carry two hundred accounts.

Do not tell your grocer that because you are sure to pay your bill in full and promptly that your trade is as good as cash. It is not.

To further illustrate $400.00 represents $1.25 per day for three hundred working days and that loss must come out of the net profit as the rent, light, water, heat, telephone, taxes and delivery must be provided for each day.

The Net Profit.

If the grocers' net profit was five per cent. he would have to do $25.00 worth of business before anything could go to him. Or in other words by doing cash business he could give to his customer 2 1-2 p.c. discount on a fifty dollar business and still make as much as now.

The Union delivery was given some consideration but will require considerable working out yet. It was stated that a very great saving could be created along this line.

A van would start at Charlotte street, calling at hardware, grocers, shoe stores, etc., who had a call card hung out. Proceeding north and delivering what goods were to go in that direction. One would start at Brock street and work south along similar lines. A grocer availing himself of the system would have his delivery boxes a given colour and they would be given to him on a return trip, each parcel being paid for by ticket which would be purchased from the delivery contractor. By systematizing delivery and the people carrying purchases under the value of $1.00, the saving effected would be large indeed and the results would be very gratifying to the people.

The outlying districts would be organized along similar lines.

A strong committee was formed and will bring in a report at a meeting which will be called in about ten days' time and announced in the evening papers, and the grocers believe that whatever action is decided on will be from a patriotic standpoint and will have the hearty approval and co-operation of the majority of citizens.

Again Demonstrates Its Wonderful Tone Qualities

The Famous Model 50 that Defeated the Talking Machines

READ THE FACTS

In the ballroom of the Hotel McAlpin 650 Phonograph Experts gathered and heard a Tone Comparison between an $80 Edison Diamond Amberola and a well-known "Talking Machine" that sells at $171. The comparison was conducted behind a curtain, so that no one in the audience knew which machine was playing. In this way an absolutely unbiased opinion was procured. Three comparisons were made on each instrument. At the end a vote was taken. Those present voted unanimously in favour of the New Edison Diamond Amberola.

THE AMBEROLA won on sheer merit. These are tests that prove: real comparisons conducted behind a curtain; tests in which the advertising writer plays no part, and tests which are judged by real people. You owe it to yourself to hear this latest product of Mr. Edison's genius

MADE IN THREE MODELS

Model 30—$48.00

Model 30 is the best phonograph on the market to-day at anything like the price. Has genuine Diamond Stylus Reproducer (no needles to change). Cabinet comes in Golden Oak only.

Model 50—$80.00

Model 50 is the one used in the comparison tests. Cabinet comes finished in Mahogany, Golden Oak and Fumed Oak. Has genuine Stylus Reproducer (no needles to change).

Model 75—$113.00

Model 75 in a beautiful full length cabinet, finished in Mahogany, Fumed Oak or Golden Oak. Has record space to hold 84 Blue Amberol Records. Has genuine Diamond Stylus Reproducer.

All these models play Mr. Edison's Blue Amberola Records, the longest and smoothest running records made. Records will play over 3,000 times without showing any sign of wear. All the great Edison artists and all the latest popular music are on the Blue Amberol.

A BUILDER OF HEALTH

Nothing can be of greater assistance in building up the system than Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, for this food-cure forms new, rich blood, and nourishes and restores the feeble, wasted nerve cells. Gradually and naturally the body and mind regain vigor and energy, and you feel again the joy of living which comes only to people in good health.

MUSIC AS RECREATION

Recreation is essential for the health and well-being of the family, and music is essential for a recreation that is totally relaxing and instructive.

Are you doing without music in the home because no one plays? In these days of marvelous inventions, that is no excuse for the lack of music.

There are people who have been wise enough to purchase player-pianos, organs and phonographs, slightly used, therefore cheaper, by securing them through Heintzman Hall, Peterborough, Royal Bank Buildings, Hunter Street.—B. H. Britton, Manager. 'Phone 253.

New Shell Box Contract If Planing Mill Co. Are Allowed Erect A Temporary Building

Stating that he had an opportunity to obtain a new shell box order in Ottawa on Friday, April 12th, Mr. Harry Baker, of the Peterborough Planing Mill Co. requested the Fire, Water and Light committee to permit him to rebuild the temporary frame addition be used for that work. Tenders have been called for the manufacture of over one million boxes and the contracts will be let to-morrow. For that reason, Mr. Baker stated that he must know immediately whether the Council would accede to his request. He could not afford to build the addition of brick because of the high cost of material and labour. Besides it would not be needed after the shell-box work was completed. Mr. Baker said he would tear down the building when its use for making boxes was no longer required.

The wooden annex would be 60 feet by 20 feet and two storeys high. It would be smaller than the old one which was destroyed by fire during the winter. Mr. Baker is prepared to sheet it with tin, but said that the cost of bricking it would be prohibitive at $6,000, which was the estimate he had received.

Mayor Duncan remarked that the chief complaint of the residents near the factory was the danger from shavings, which were allowed to accumulate. Mr. Baker promised that they would be properly disposed of in the new building.

The committee expressed a desire to help Mr. Baker in securing a new contract for the planing mill, and the committee of the Whole Council will meet at 5.30 p.m. to-day at the factory to decide what latitude it can sanction in the proposed erection of the temporary box-making annex.

City Has To Pay For Stack Of Mitts Some One Ordered For Use At The Neill Fire

The Fire, Water and Light committee ambled through considerable business last night, trifling with the fuel regulations the Council is authorized to enforce, but scrutinizing a sheaf of accounts for mitts, caps and other goods purchased on the day of the Neill fire.

Lack of information as to who ordered and who received the mitts whetted the committee's curiosity, and before the bills are paid an effort will be made to discover the details of a rather formidable statement which, roughly estimated, indicated that more than one hundred pairs had been procured at the city's expense.

"We all want to get around for handouts like that," Ald. Jones remarked, and that observation expressed the committee's belief that many persons who were not helping to fight the fire must have shared in the generous distribution.

T. C. Elliott's account for sixty-three pairs of mitts was $53.54; Merrill and Meredith for mitts and caps, $5; the Peterborough Hardware Co., $4.75 for three pairs, two of them at $1.75 a pair and the other $1.25; D. H. Hickey, socks, $4.50; Robert Fair $14 for mitts, ordered by Chief Grange and paid for; B. Shortly was also called upon. Then there were $35 for lunches, $43 for rope from the Kingan hardware store and $14 also for rope from the Peterborough Hardware Co. The Lindsay firemen were granted $90 in recognition of their services, and there were various incidentals to swell the account.

In addition to these expenses, Chief Grange engaged nineteen citizens to reinforce his brigade and last night presented a bill for $115 for their services. Most of these auxiliaries had boots, trousers and other clothing practically ruined in the fire, and the committee approved this account. Of these items, the total counted last night was $278.79.

Who Ordered Them?

If the aldermen were never unanimous before, their inquiry voiced almost in chorus, of who ordered the abundance of mitts found them united but none the wiser. Chief Grange was called from the Fire Station and acknowledged only the order on R. Fair's store. Mayor Duncan and Ald. Dobbin stated that they had not given, neither were they asked, to sanction the wholesale handout.

Mr. Elliot was quoted as having said that two policemen had ordered mitts from him, but there was no clear evidence on that point, and there the mystery rests until further investigation has been made.

Did It Ever Occur to You?

That the FORD is the only car now selling for less money than before the war?

Have you considered that perhaps RIGHT NOW you can buy a Ford car for less money than you will be able to for some years to come?

If you contemplate buying a car THIS YEAR, you would be well advised to do so without delay.

Even if you do not want a Car until next year, it might pay you to buy RIGHT NOW.

The prohibition of Foreign cars to Canada will undoubtedly cause an unprecedented shortage and increase in price.

In addition, there is daily expected an Excise Tax of 10 p. c. on all unsold cars.

Buy your Ford car or Truck RIGHT NOW if you would save delay and money, yes, and probable disappointment.

Woodville Woman Killed In Runaway

Lindsay, April 10.—A distressing fatality took place a few miles south of the village of Woodville on Saturday night, when Mrs. Robert Bowins was killed as the result of a runaway.

Owing to the fact that she was alone in the rig, that no person witnessed the accident, and that she was found lying dead at her own gate, few particulars are to hand.

It appears that the deceased drove to the village in the afternoon, as she had been accustomed to doing for years, and was returning later on in the day after having completed her purchases.

Towards evening Mr. Bowins noticed the horse walking about the yard, still hitched to the buggy. He was at a loss to understand what had happened, especially as Mrs. Bowins was nowhere in sight. On making investigation he discovered the dead body of his wife lying at the farm gate. It is surmised that the animal ran away and threw the unfortunate lady out of the buggy when turning into the laneway.

Her untimely and sudden death has shocked the whole community, as deceased was widely known and highly respected. She is survived by her husband, one son Byron, at home, and a married daughter Ruby, in the States.

FIGHTING THE HUN, NOT PRIZE FIGHTING.

And $25 Tax on Each Spectator May Prevent Willard-Fulton Bout.

WASHINGTON, April 10. — The first Congressional effort to stop the Willard-Fulton fight was made yesterday in a bill introduced in the House by Representative Blanton, Texas. The bill calls for a tax of $25 a person to all those who attend, and would also take 75 per cent. of the promoters' gross profits on this and all other prize fights.

"It's time we should do all our fighting on the other side of the water. Fight promoters should not be allowed to make large profits when the Government is spending every dollar to win the war," Blanton said.

JOINT MINISTER OF WAR AND MARINE

(Special to The Examiner.)

MOSCOW, April 10—Leon Trotsky, former Foreign Minister, has been appointed Joint Minister of War and Marine. He has been Acting Minister of War since the government removed to Mosdow.

Patricia Collinge and Oswald Yorke in "POLLYANNA" the glad play at the Grand Matinee and Night Saturday April 13th.

Pollyanna Seats On Sale

"Pollyanna," a joyous four-act comedy with a thread of wholesome sentiment and a healthy thrill of romance, will be the attraction at the Grand Opera House next Saturday, matinee and night, April 13th. Seats are now on sale at the box office.

It is founded upon the famous "glad-stories" of Eleanor H. Porter, that have sold by the hundreds of thousands. Catherine Chisholm Cushing, who brought the characters and incidents to the stage, has written many successful comedies, including "Kitty McKay" and "The Real Thing," "A Widow by Proxy," and "Jerry." The producers are Klaw and Erlanger and George C. Tyler, respectively credited with the presentation of many famous book-plays, among them "Ben-Hur," "The Garden of Allah," "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," "The Eternal City," "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," "Daddy Long Legs," "Paganini," and many others.

"Pollyanna" is the story of the girl of "Gladness," who grows up during the development of the comedy to radiant, prosperous, well poised young womanhood. She always finds something to be glad about, and changes the viewpoint of a good many chronic grouches. The comedy's merriment, pathos and lessons of right living carry universal appeal. As an example of what substantial prosperity attaches to a play of this sort, "Pollyanna" is significant, for it is one of the real money-makers. It shows that theatre-goers are wearied by the dull, depressing drab things that occasionally overrun the stage and soon perish from malnutrition: "Pollyanna" has been cordially welcomed and attracted packed houses wherever it is acted. It has been entrusted to but one picked cast, well entitled to the dignity of being called an all star one, including Patricia Collinge, Oswald Yorke, Beatrice Morgan, Joseph Jefferson, Mattie Ferguson, Stephen Davis, Helen Weathersby, Glenn Hunter, Harry Barfoot and Selma Hall.

WAS FOUND DEAD IN BED.

LINDSAY, April 11.—Mr. Edward ("Teddy") Armsden died suddenly Tuesday night at his home at Lindsay.

It appears that the deceased went to bed in his usual good health, and after working steadily all day at his usual occupation at the Grand Trunk roundhouse. About 12.15 o'clock Mrs. Armsden, hearing a peculiar breathing and moaning, asked her husband what was the trouble, but received no reply. Reaching out she felt his forehead, and found it quite cold. Dr. White was immediately summoned and pronounced the deceased dead as a result of heart failure.

The late Mr. Armsden is survived by his wife, three sons, and one daughter, namely: Richard, Charles, Arthur and Lily, all at home.

A Host of New Lingerie Blouses

About Which Fashion is Most Enthusiastic This Season

Most of them are made of voile, some of striped batiste and showing an admirable restraint in the use of trimmings which necessitates good style and allows for all the better quality in materials. And there is such a wonderful variety in Lingerie Blouses this season, never before have we had as bewitching array as right now. Scores of lovely new models are on display in our blouse department and in the window, you must see them, and there are prices to suit all purses.

An extremely pretty voile blouse is fashioned in an entirely different design, that of pin tucks forming a check pattern, it is distractingly simple. It has the new roll collar, buttoned over cuff and collar and cuffs edged with Venice lace. The price is $5.50.

The fine English voile used for this blouse is of exquisite quality as is the Swiss embroidery introduced in the front. Pin tucks are used to relieve the plainness at the shoulders and form the trimming for the back. The collar and cuffs are of Organdy finished with real torchon lace. It is priced at $6.50.

Another perfectly beautiful blouse is made of striped marquisette voile. It has a high collar buttoning close around the throat and fastened all the way down the front with pearl buttons. Fillet lace is cleverly used for trimming down front and on collar and cuffs. The price is $4.75.

This very dainty model is made of French voile with pin tucks running around giving it a decided chic appearance. It has the new winter garden collar, pretty sleeve with tight fitting cuff, and collar and cuff trimmed with fillet lace. Very moderately priced at $4.75.

And here is an exceedingly smart little blouse, the price is very special $2.75, that is made of striped voile. It is so simple and dainty and has the new Tuxedo collar and new Bishop sleeve with closely buttoned cuff.

There are very smart tailored blouses too, in voiles and lawn and some with combinations of pique. They have the latest novelty collars, the "Billie Burke" and the "Buster Brown," really they are most attractive and so becoming. There is a variety of prices.

INCREASED FIRE PROTECTION FOR THE CITY'S SCHOOLS

To improve the protection against fire at the local schools, the Fire, Water and Light committee last night recommended that the Utilities Commission provide the following hydrants—

Queen Alexandra School—One four-way hydrant on Barnardo avenue.

King George School—One hydrant on Concession street, opposite the north wall, and one on Hunter street opposite the east wall. There is already one hydrant situated 150 feet from the building.

King Edward School—None. There are five hydrants in that district, three of them comparatively near. Hence the committee decided that the water service was ample.

Queen Mary School—One hydrant on Weller street opposite the north wall of the school and another at the corner of Weller street and Monaghan road.

Central School—Three hydrants are recommended at McDonnel and Harvey streets, Murray and College streets and one on Murray opposite west wall of the west building.

South Central—None needed. There are four available hydrants here.

The committee also recommended to the Board of Education that they secure a hydrant for the Collegiate Institute to be placed in the grounds in front of it.

The Utilities Commission will be asked to put a hydrant on Concession street east of St. Joseph's Hospital, and the Hospital authorities are advised to have on erected in their grounds west of the building.

A REPORT ON FARM CONDITIONS

Horses Are More in Demand – Feed Supplies Running Low

Horses are more in request, but buyers are careful to buy only those of good quality. Cattle generally are thin but healthy, and are somewhat less in number than formerly. At a sale in Durham County recently purebreds sold at from $240 to $350, and twelve grades averaged $124, including day-old calves. At the same time calves are being vealed at from four to five weeks old, bringing from $15 to $18.

The demand for milk and dairy products continues strong. Dundas County shippers and Montreal wholesale men have agreed on 30c a gallon for milk all summer, with a raise to 32c in September, which is considerably higher than last year's prices. With the scarcity and high prices of feeds it is likely that milch cows will go on the grass somewhat thinner than usual.

HOGS ARE HIGH.

Hogs are high in value, prices running from $20 to $20.75 a cwt. Owing to the scarcity of feed some are being turned o ffas soon as drovers will take them. Young pigs are very hard to procure, as owners seem to want to do the finishing.

Sheep are on the increase, and the demand has caused prices to advance considerably.

The marketing of field crops goes slowly on. Hay is plentiful and brings from $12 to $14 a ton. Barley, oats, and rye command high figures. Four carloads of turnips were purchased by a Michigan firm last week for seed purpaces ,at 23c a bushel; but where sold locally for feeding, prices of these roots have been 7c to 8c a bushel. Ensilage is running lower in the silos than for many years at this date, in fact corn generally is hard to procure.

Farm labour of good quality is scarce, and many boys and inexperienced men will have to be used. Business men of Kenora are being organized for assisting in seeding and harvest.

Fire Alarm Wires May Be Moved To The Bell Conduits

If any local dealer in "gas" desires the city's business, he may obtain it by quoting a special price. The Fire, Water and Light committee had contemplated installing a tank at the fire hall to supply all the municipal automobiles, including four used by the Utilities Commission.

The current retail price of gasoline is 38 cents, and the wholesale price 35 cents. This fact may not concern the majority of citizens beyond their curiosity as to what they would have to pay if everyone one of them had a "super six" to feed instead of a houseful of potentially useful citizens of tomorrow.

The motor fire truck has consumed $40 worth of gasoline according to Ald. Dobbin's statement last night.

Cable Difficulties.

Chief Grange reported the underground fire alarm cables out of commission owing to the presence of water in the conduits and leaks in the insulation.

Have 6,850 Feet of Good Hose.

Fire Chief Grange reported that 150 feet of hose were lost at the Neill fire. This was the only loss.

We have 4,850 feet of first-class hose, plus the 2,000 feet of new hose making a total of 6,850 feet, and 486 feet of second class hose that could be turned over to the Board of Works.

He advised that the cables be taken out and if possible incorporated with the Bell Telephone Company's underground system. "The underground of the Bell system is drained and this is not the ase with the Machine Company's conduits."

In the meantime, the Chief has strung an aerial service to keep the system in working order. The change may mean additional length of cable. Mayor Duncan, Aldermen Dobbin, Taylor and A. A. McIntyre were delegated to interview Mr. G. O. Cameron, local manager of the Bell Telephone Co.

BLED TO DEATH.

Tried to trim a wart with a razor and severed an artery. The only wart cure is "Putnam's," which removes warts, corns callouses in one day. Insist on getting Putnam's Corn and Wart Extractor, it's the best, 25c. at all dealers.

SPORT FOR THE ANGLER.

To the excellence of the fishing to be enjoyed in Algonquin Park there is undisputed testimony. Fish caught in the waters of the Park have won each year many of the National competitions open to the anglers of the Continent. The brook trout of Algonquin Park are of the genuine square tailed, red spotted or speckled variety. Black bass are plentiful in the Rock Lake district and are of the small-mouthed variety. Salmon trout are found in all the waters of the park and are much gamier than the same species in the southern part of the Province. Splendid camp sites, unlimited canoe routes and hotels if you want them. Easy of access, only 200 miles north of Toronto and 170 miles west of Ottawa. Illustrated descriptive literature giving full particulars for the asking. Apply to any Grand Trunk Ticket Agent or C. E. Horning, D.P.A. Toronto, Ont.

PETERBOROUGH RED CROSS SOCIETY

In the March "Bulletin" appears the following interesting letter, received by the Society's architect, Major Skipper, from the Under Secretary of State for the French Minister of War, expressing the sincere thanks of the French Service de Sante for the labours and skill which Major Skipper devoted towards the work of construction of the Paris Hospital.

My Dear Captain,—The coming of the New Year gives me a fortunate opportunity for sending you my best wishes; and at the same time I want to offer you, in the name of the French Service de Sante, our most sincere thanks for the unceasing labour and skill which you have devoted towards the work of construction of the Canadian Red Cross Hospital.

Thanks to you and to what you have done for us, the Hospital will soon be in full working order. Not only is it to be a model of its kind, but it is to serve as a precious testimony to those constant ties of kinship and undying affection whereby Canada and France are united.

With my best wishes for you and for all your friends, believe me, my dear Captain, yours very truly,

JUSTIN GODART.

The model hospital to which the above letter refers was built by the Red Cross Society at a cost of over $300,000 as a gift to the French nation, and is to be opened this month. But this is only a part and perhaps a very small part of the work of the Red Cross Society in France for, from the Paris branch stores, a constant stream of supplies is being directed to over 4,000 French Hospitals. Advance stores are maintained at another Canadian hospital for French soldiers and a small motor convoy of C.R.C. ambulance lorries, driven by V. A. D.'s assures the service of these hospitals.

The following statement of amounts which were received up to February 6th, 1918, in Canada, in answer to the British Red Cross Appeal, may prove of general interest:

Statement of amounts received up to February 6th, 1918:

Nova Scotia	$ 100,000.00
New Brunswick	49,115.54
Prince Edward Island	6,000.00
Quebec	9,376.88
Ontario	1,773,373.49
Manitoba	134,696 41
Saskatchewan	119,562.00
Alberta	40,000.00
British Columbia	36,607.94
Yukon	481.05
Total	$2,269,213.11

In reference to the Prisoners of War Department, Sergeant T. W. Randall, a repatriated prisoner of war, writes in the March Bulletin, in part as follows:

"On returning to Canada, after serving with the C.E.F. since 1914, I consider it only just that you should know how highly the Canadian soldier appreciates what is done for him by the Canadian Red Cross Society. No matter how far he is separated from his Corps, the Canadian soldier is directly in touch with his own Canadian Red Cross Society, which is ever ready to do its utmost for him. As a repatriated prisoner of war, I think that I am more indebted to this Society than is the average Canadian soldier. Numbers of Canadians, now in Germany, owe everything and, in many cases, life itself to the parcels of the Canadian Red Cross Society. Without these parcels it is practically impossible to live.

"With regard to the work of the Canadian Red Cross Society in Germany, I shall cite my own case as an example. Taken prisoner on June 2nd, 1916, I was conveyed to a Stuttgart roller skating rink, which was being used as a hospital. Along with me were thirty or more severely wounded Canadians. We were the first Britishers to reach that city, and therefore had to live on German rations alone for two months and a half. During this time we were continually half dead with hunger. The Canadian Red Cross Society was the first to find out our whereabouts and by the middle of August parcels began to arrive from that Society. Bread also was sent by them from Switzerland. Then men, who until now had been hovering between life and death, began to gather strength, while their wounds commenced to heal more rapidly.

In addition to parcels of food, tobacco and cigarettes were sent. Those were no less necessary, Underwear, clothing, boots and overcoats were sent. These, especially were badly needed, as we had no underwear and only scraps of French and German uniforms with which to keep out the cold. And, more than that, books, games and music were sent us by the Canadian Red Cross Society.

City Will Order 2,000 Tons Of Coal For Winter Reserve

No Action Taken With Opportunity to Keep Record of Deliveries by Dealers—Report of Cost of City's Business to End of March.

The purchase of 2,000 tons of coal by the city, to be held as a reserve for next winter, was recommended by the Fire, Water and Light Committee last night, on a motion by Ald. Saunders, seconded by Ald. A. A. McIntyre. The negotiations for buying and storing were left to the Fuel Committee, composed of Ald. Dobbin, Mayor Duncan and Ald. Taylor.

Last year's difficulty of getting supplies was reflected in the Committee's decision to concentrate on the work of buying coal and having it delivered to the city, leaving the problem of storing it for solution when it actually arises.

Ald. Dobbin announced that Mr. T. Rehill would enlarge his bins by an addition of fifty feet by 16 feet, at a rental of $10 a month more than the city is paying him now.

Ald. Weir pointed out that the work of wheeling the coal in wheel barrows up an incline to dump it into the Rehill sheds would increase the cost of handling it. It was felt that suitable accommodation could be obtained on city property, where temporary bins could be erected.

The committee agreed that the city should endeavour to provide an emergency supply for next winter.

"Get it and keep it" was Ald. A. A. McIntyre's advice. "Let the dealers supply their customers in the regular way."

It was remarked that this would be a protection for the poor people, but Ald. Dobbin declared that the price might be dearer than the dealers'.

Ald. Weir—"It can't be dearer than last winter".

Ald. Taylor—"Get the coal and settle the price afterwards".

Mayor Duncan—"We had better be out a little money and have the coal."

Ald. A. A. McIntyre—"We will have only the interest to pay.

City Clerk Armstrong advised that the Bank be asked whether it would loan the money required without the formality of issuing debentures.

City Treasurer Adams replied that the bank would accept type-written debentures which need not be printed. They could then be hypothicated.

Mr. Armstrong added that he believed the Finance Minister's consent would have to be obtained first.

REGISTRATION OF COAL SALES.

Ald. Dobbin asked the Committee what action they desired to take with the proposed registration of sales made by the coal dealers.

"I don't think we need do anything until Fall," Ald. Weir said. "No one will buy two years' supply of coal. They haven't the money, and if they buy more than the law allows them they are liable to prosecution. The dealers are also liable if they deliver more than they should.

The general attitude of the Aldermen was equally confident and inclined to complacence.

Ald. A. A. McIntyre stated that the tabulation of the dealers' sales could be deferred until the Fall and then performed in a week or two. This would avoid the engaging of a clerk to do this work during the summer months.

The Committee was apparently satisfied with that prospect for the discussion turned to Ald. Dobbin's statement of the Municipal Fuel Yards' transactions up to the present.

"20,000 LEAGUES UNDER THE SEA"

A Wonderful Film

Jules Verne's immortal story of the deep "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea" has been given an elaborate production by means of the camera, with the result that one of the most fascinating of sea stories is given an ocular presentation; that is, if anything more fascinating than the book. The mysteries of the sea are shown in a series of artistic sea scenes by motion photography and the story is so interesting that the spectators are loth to leave the theatre when the last reel is run. "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea" is coming to the Grand Opera House Wednesday and Thursday, April 17 and 18, Matinee daily, and lovers of high-class photography should not fail to see this great masterpiece. Recently it was presented for the first time at Massey Hall, and so great was the demand for seats at every performance that the management was obliged to give special morning matinees, and special presentations for school children only. It is now being shown for the second time in Toronto, with special arrangement with B. C. Whitney at the New Princess Theatre, Toronto, and for attendance is duplicating the capacity business of the first engagement. Special children's matinee, Wednesday, at 4 p.m.

With Other Councils

The curfew rings again in London. Every place of public amusement must put out its lights at 10.30 p.m. and must remain closed until 1 p.m. the following day.

TESTS TO IMPROVE WATER.

Experiments in the purification of city water by ultra violet rays will be carried out by the Hydro authorities of Chatham, who announced that equipment has been ordered with a capacity of purifying 120 gallons an hour.

MAY BE PASTEURIZED.

The Brantford Board of Health on the request of a large deputation from the Board of Trade, passed a resolution asking the city council to pass a bylaw for the pasteurization of all milk sold in the city. It was shown that 22 cases of typhoid fever last fall originated from one source of milk supply.

SALARY INCREASES.

Chatham Police Commission has raised the salary of Chief of Police Thomas Groves to $1300, Sergt. Dezslia to $1100, and each of the patrolmen to $1020.

BOOST WINDSOR WATER RATES.

Owing to the increased cost of fuel, Windsor water rates will be slightly increased this year. The water board paid $4000 for the coal used in one month last winter.

WILL NOT REMOVE BAN.

The Chatham Board of Health has declined to remove the ban on school children who are unable to attend school because of failure to be vaccinated.

Regulations That Apply To Use of Gas

The following regulations to promote the conservation of gas produced from coal, have been received by Mayor Duncan from R. C. Harris, Fuel Adminstrator for Ontario:

No purchaser or consumer of gas produced from coal within the province of Ontario, shall use gas for advertising purposes or for ornamental lighting, including the lighting of windows, and other display lighting.

No purchaser or consumer of gas produced from coal within the province of Ontario shall use such gas for lighting the interior of buildings during the hours in which such buildings are not open for business, provided that during such hours such lighting may be used as shall be necessary to protect the buildings.

Any person violating any of these regulations shall on summary conviction be liable to a penalty not exceeding five hundred dollars, or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months, or to both fine and imprisonment.

These regulations shall be in force and effect from and after the 1st day of April, 1918.

ORDERS ISSUED TO IRISH VOLUNTEERS

ABSOLUTE CALM SEEMS TO PREVAIL AMONG THE SINN FEIN PARTY.

(Canadian Press.)

London, April 11.—Absolute calm seems to prevail among the Sinn Fein party, says a Central News despatch from Dublin, but it is understood orders have been given to all sections of the Irish volunteers regarding the action to be taken in the event of Irish conscription being agreed upon.

MAGISTRATE LANGLEY DISMISSED CHARGE

Case Against Stillman One for the Civil Courts.

Bert Stillman, a farmer leaving near Campbellford, charged with stealing a drag saw from Ezra King, appeared before County Magistrate O. A. Langley in Havelock yesterday. After hearing the evidence the Magistrate dismissed the case, stating that the case was for the civil courts. The machine had been taken under the colour of right and the defendant was good for any charge which King could establish in the civil courts. Mr. O'Brien represented the Crown Attorney. Mr. F. D. Kerr appeared for the defence.

UKRAINE CITY HAS BEEN CAPTURED.

(Canadian Press.)

London, April 11.—Charkoff, one of the important cities in Ukraine, was captured on Monday, according to an official announcement by Berlin war office, received by wireless.

In Finland, German forces have occupied the Kaas railway station.

HOME COOKING AT THE PETERBORO MOTOR SHOW

For the Home-Cooking Exhibit and Sale in connection with the Motor Show, the committee are anxious to have as varied an assortment as possible of the many war-time dishes. For this purpose, the ladies of Peterboro are asked to co-operate, and to send to the Armouries either Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday afternoons of next week, bread, biscuits, scones, cakes, cookies, etc., exploiting the use of any variety of war flour; also canned or preserved fruit or vegetables.

Further information in regard to this booth, and the needs, may be obtained by phoning 1440.

DON'T WORRY over the bad business of yesterday. Use newspaper advertising and make it good to-morrow.

INCREASE IN FIRE INSURANCE RATES

Fifteen Per Cent. Increase For Peterboro' Will Take Effect at Once

The local fire insurance agents have received notice of a general increase of 15 cents per hundred in the rates on all mercantile property in the city, to take effect immediately.

It is also intimated that a revision and increase in the rates on dwelling house property may be expected shortly.

Has Been Appointed

LONDON, April 11.— Major Gen. Sackville West has been appointed acting British military representative at the Supreme War Council at Versailles, it was announced to-day in the Commons by Andrew Bonar Law.

ROME, April 11.—Artillery fighting along the whole Italian front was reported by the War Office to-day.

HYDRANTS PROPOSED FOR LONG CENTRAL BLOCKS.

Hydrants should be placed on Charlotte, Hunter and Simcoe streets, between Aylmer and George streets, Mayor Duncan stated at the meeting of the Fire, Water and Light Committee last night, and the question will be more fully discussed later when information has been received from the Utilities Commission.

Prudential Men Hold Staff Meeting

The staff meeting of the Prudential Life Assurance Company, held to-day and yesterday in Mr. J. I. Allen's office, Royal Bank building, has proved a success, and many helpful ideas gained by the interchange of experiences. The convention was called to celebrate the excellent condition of business of the company and to prepare for the big drive in the special organized effort which begins with April 15th.

Peterborough district stands 7th in the 850 districts of the United States and Canada, a fact which is most satisfactory to the staff.

The meeting wound up to-day with a business dinner at the Empress, attended by Messrs. S. W. Shepherd, Supt. of the Prudential in Toronto, J. M. Lefevre, Supt. of Kingston, David Morris F. Windsor, John W. Baker E. W. Gray, Oshawa, G. A. Corden, Bowmanville, A. Blewett, C. C. Cresswel, Lindsay, W. H. Chapman, Campbellford, E. W. White, Cobourg, J Wilson, Port Hope, W. R. Minnifie, J. S. Coffee, of Cobourg, and the local representatives, Mr. Allen and Mr Sedgwick.

SHEDS BURNED.

The Methodist Church sheds were totaly destroyed by fire yesterday morning about three o'clock, and the church, the parsonage and other adjoining buildings narrowly escaped a like fate. That they didn't is due to the fight put up to save them by willing fire fighting volunteers commanded by Rev. Mr. Adams, not astride of a fence, but astride the ridge pole of the parsonage barn. It is not known how the flames originated. The loss will be about $400.—Havelock Standard.

THE MOTOR SHOW PROMISES BIG RESULTS

Every Available Inch of Space in the Armouries Taken by Exhibitors

That this year's motor show under the auspices of the Red Cross will eclipse any previous effort of a similar nature is predicted, as the interest by exhibitors, the sale of advance tickets, the help that is being given to provide entertainment in the Armouries for the vast crowds that will attend, all go to show that the motor show inaugurated last year will be much bigger this and succeeding years.

The fashion show, which is an attraction by the young adies of the Peter Robinson Chapter I. O. D. E., will be run twice each evening. The first show from eight to nine o'clock and the second from 9 to 10 o'clock.

An excellent musical programme has been arranged, including a 30-piece orchestra, under the direction of Prof. Gliddon. The best soloists in the city will give their services free from a stage in the centre of the main floor.

The Parade.

The motor parade on Tuesday will be an extravagant affair. All the automobiles, big or little, old or new, trucks, delivery cars, and bicycles will be there.

The Y.M.C.A. circus tank and almost everything that runs by power, headed by Fire Chief Grange and the full Fire Department.

Everything is moving fine for the show, and if anybody asks you to get a strip of 5 tickets for a dollar just get them—remember the cause.

FRENCH FORCES MADE SUCCESSFUL SURPRISE ATTACKS

PARIS, April 11.—The German attack in the Champagne last night was broken up by French fire. On the principal battle front there was heavy artillery fire between Montdidier and Noyon.

The German attacks against the Franco-American sectors in the Champagne and Lorraine were repulsed, the French War Office announced to-day.

"East of Souain (near Tahure, where American artillery is stationed), after lively combat, a German attack was repulsed."

The communique said: "A German attack failed in the Agremont Forest (four miles east of St. Mehiel, in the Toul sector)."

"We made successful surprise attacks and took a dozen prisoners and a machine gun north-west and east of Rheims. (The Chemin Des Dames sector, where the Americans are fighting, is north-west of Rheims.)

"In the region of Orvillers and Sorel our artillery dispersed the enemy."

Attack Repulsed On American Front

GERMANS WERE CHECKED BY PROMPT AND EFFECTIVE FIRE OF AMERICANS.

(Special to The Examiner.)

With the American Armies in France, April 10.—A carefully prepared German attack in the sector northwest of Toul, was crushed by the prompt and effective fire of the American batteries.

Two Germans taken prisoners declared that the attack was made by a force of 800, but they were stunned by the American fire.

The attack was preceded by a tremendous German barrage, the American guns replying immediately.

There were no American casualties.

BRITISH ADVANCE IN PALESTINE

BRITISH LINES HAVE BEEN ADVANCED ON FIVE MILE FRONT.

(Canadian Press.)

London, April 11.—British forces in Palestine have advanced their lines a mile and a half on a five mile front west of the Tul-Keramramles Railway, it was officially announced to-day. They captured el Kefr and Rafat after stubborn resistance by the Turks. Their prisoners included some Germans.

Police To Enfore Food Regulations In Restaurants

Only two teaspoonfuls of sugar in each cup of tea or coffee, only two ounces (ordinary slices) of white bread to each person, or four ounces of brown bread, and bread must be twelve hours old before being served! The new food regulations are apparently in general use in Peterborough now, and at the Boston Cafe there are changes that reflect the restraining hold of the war god on the people's meals, appetites, purses and in many cases their little habitual extravagances.

The public that takes its meals down town, and a la carte, the travelling public that fares more sumptuously table d'hote, and the casual visitors to restaurants are forced to comply with the only stringent law that is in force in the country; the great majority of the people, those who would get acute indigestion or some terrible seizure if they missed a meal away from home and five minutes behind schedule, these law-abiding citizens, upon whom the institutions of the country are supposed to rest, and whose assistance is most needed, continue to ignore the sumptuary laws. They may, if they choose, reverse the usual order, take a cup of sugar in a bowl of tea or put bread on a slice of butter, and only the so-called cranks admit bran and other "queer" breads into their homes.

Mr. Douros of the Boston Cafe, is one of twenty or more eating-house proprietors who have been supplied by Chief Thompson with copies of the latest food regulations. The Chief was recently in London, and returned with an impression that these laws should be rigidly enforced in the public eating houses.

Mr. Douros pointed out that the restrictions are principally intended to save wheat flour. One result would be the forcible inculcation of economy. Persons would formerly break off a section of a piece of bread and leave the rest, which would be wasted. Now, the quantity supplies with orders is limited to two slices of white bread, and hungry patrons will doubtless eat even the last crumbs now and wonder why they may not have more.

The regulation would save bread and consequently flour, and persons would be impressed with the importance of saving food, Mr. Douros stated. He intends to provide substitutes that will appeal to the public's taste.

"A MORMON MAID"
With MAE MURRAY

Lifted by a relentless Fate from their tiny world, where all was sunshine and flowers, and taken into the youthful Salt Lake Colony, about which ugly rumors had been whispered, the little family of three found themselves prospering beyond their wildest dreams. But, they soon learned there was a string tied to all this wealth and happiness.

It came out one day when the father was forced to take a second wife, despite the fact that he and his beloved helpmeet were just as much married as on the day they took their vows at the altar. Then their charming little daughter was chosen as the sixth wife of the powerful "Apostle," and told to prepare herself for the "celestial ceremony." But all these plans were made in ignorance of the youth to whom little Dora had given her heart, and who had pledged himself to the little family's welfare.

How the "Apostle's covetous designs were frustrated by the girl, how she killed him just as he was about to capture her, and how they escaped from the City of the Saints makes "A Mormon Maid" a photo-drama that you cannot afford to miss.

Mrs. Lapp, St. Marys, is in the city visiting her sisters, the Misses Kelley, Downie street.

Miss Meta Mairs, a frequent visitor in the city, who returned yesterday from New York, had a rather unpleasant experience on her way home. The Boston train and the Empire State express, on which she was travelling, collided near New Amsterdam and four passengers were injured. Miss Mairs escaped from the car in which she and others were penned, by breaking the glass of the window. This is the second accident of the kind in which Miss Mairs has figured. Some years ago, when a child, travelling from the West, with her mother, she narrowly escaped death in a wrecked car with severe injuries, with severe injuries.

Mrs. J. W. Gorner, of Orangeville, is the guest of Miss Jenkins, 226 Brock street.

Mrs. J. R. Stratton has taken a suite at the Empress Hotel.

Friends of Mr. James English, Charlotte street, will regret to learn that he is confined to his home through illness.

Mr. Jones Cross and family have moved to Peterborough, where Mr. Cross has secured employment. They will reside on Sherbrooke street. — Norwood Register.

Miss Chiles of Havelock, presided at the Methodist church organ on Sunday last. She is an able musician and her playing on Sunday gave such generous satisfaction that she has been engaged as organist.—Mitchell Advocate.

Mr. P. J. O'Connor is spending the day in Lindsay.

Mr. P. A. Ferguson is a visitor in Lindsay to-day.

Miss Wanda Newton has returned to Peterborough, after spending the holidays in Lindsay.

Miss Jean Fisher and Miss Edna Moore have returned to resume their studies at the Peterborough Normal School, after spending the Easter holidays in Lindsay.

Miss Evelyn Jay has returned from Toronto to her home in Cameron for the summer.

Pte. F. J. Keating returned to Kingston on Tuesday morning after spending the past week at hos home, 157 Rubidge street. While at home he was taken completely by surprise on being presented with a wrist watch, fountain pen and safety razor by a number of his young friends.

Lieut. J. L. Killoran, of the R.F.C., Toronto, has left for overseas.

Mr. Otto Selwin Flint, Mich., is registered at the Empress.

Miss Warner, who lately returned to reside in the city and conduct a private school at the Conservatory, has taken rooms with Mrs. Walker, George Street.

Mr. Frank Graham, Montreal, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. MacCarney, 21 Bethune Street.

JUST 725 CARS OF LIQUOR.

One Railway Has Carried 1,957,500 Bottles to Toronto.

TORONTO, April 9.—That the "wet" business from Montreal monopolized a good deal of the rolling stock of the railways this winter is shown in the Grand Trunk's figures to the effect that from September 16, 1917, to April 1, 1918, 725 cars of liquor arrived in the Toronto terminal over the G. T. R.

"This means," said an official, "that as each car contained an average of 450 cases, there would be a total of 326,250 cases. Each case would have at least six bottles in it, so the total would reach 1,957,500 bottles."

The work of looking after these goods was in the hands of Chief Hodge and his staff, and only five cars were tampered with.

The C.P.R., it is understood, while not handling the same amount, did a fairly good trade.

NO MORE BOOSTING OF TRAINS.

Director General McAdoo Won't Allow Health Resorts Advertised.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Railroad publicity and advertising in the future must be limited to information needed by the public, under orders issued today by Director General McAdoo.

"The custom of exploiting train service, pleasure or health resorts, and the like, must be discontinued until further notice," said the order. "Timetable folders must be standardized and distribution carefully checked to avoid waste. All advertising of luxurious trains, claims of superior service and extraneous matter of every description must be eliminated.

IT PAYS to advertise in a good newspaper of proven quality.

OBITUARY

J. EDWARD MARSHALL.

J. Edward Marshall, 664 Downie street, died last night at the family residence, after a short attack of pneumonia.

Deceased was born in Auburn, N. Y., 47 years ago. Before coming to the city in 1902, he resided on the 6th line of Smith. Since coming to Peterboro he has become well known as a carpenter, and enjoyed the respect of all he came in contact with. He was a member of Nassau L.O.L.

He leaves his wife and four children, Violet, Florence, Alfred and Edith, all at home; three sisters, Mrs. Mitchell, of Burks' Falls, Mrs. Mitchell, of Peterboro and Mrs. Geo. Graham, Frederick Avenue; and one brother, Robert, of the city.

The funeral will take place on Saturday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, under Orange auspices.

CAMPAIGN IN GUELPH FOR $140,000 OPENS.

Subscriptions Totalling $64,200 Have Already Been Reported.

GUELPH, April 9.—The big Red Cross Patriotic Fund campaign with its objective of $140,000 to be raised in three days got off to a fine start to-day. The greatest of enthusiasm prevails. Some big subscriptions have already been received, and as a general rule there is a decided increase in the amounts being subscribed.

PLOWING UP FALL WHEAT.

KINGSVILLE, April 9.—Fall wheat and clover have suffered severely from freezing in this locality. Many acres of the former will be plowed up and the land used for spring crops. Plowing and seeding are being extensively done. Many farmers are contracting for the growing of sugar beets for the Chatham factory. The bright weather is very favourable for the growing of healthy tomato and cabbage plants in greenhouses.

FRANCE TO GET LESS BREAD.

New Restrictions Go Into Force Putting Country on Rations.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—France has just established a new regime of bread consumption, the Food Administration announced to-day. From now on bread will be strictly rationed through all of France. The ration is about two-thirds of the bread allowance heretofore maintained. Bread constitutes over one-half the diet of the French nation, and the price of meat is so high as practically to prohibit its use by a large part of the population.

U. S. Falls Down on Aircraft Programme —Figures on the Liberty Motor.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—The United States Government's aircraft programme is characterized as "gravely disappointing" and drastic reorganization of production machinery was recommended in a report by the Senate Military Committee to-day which charges Government officials with misrepresenting the situation and misleading the public and with "procrastination" and "indecision."

Of 22,500 Liberty motors ordered, the committee said, only 122 have been completed for the army, 142 for the navy, and four shipped overseas.

TO USE BETTER SEED.

Department of Agriculture to Encourage Farmers.

To encourage the use of better seed by the farmers of Ontario, the Agricultural Department is starting a big seed growing industry on lands connected with several provincial institutions. The start will be made at London, Mimico, Woodstock, Hamilton, Belleville, Whitby, Burwash and Fort William.

Many acres will be sown and the crops will be threshed and graded by the province. Only the best seed will be kept and this will be sold next year to the farmers at reasonable rates. Another year different farmers will be selected by the Department and arrangements made by which they will plant ten acres for seed.

It is pointed out that the average yields of Ontario's feed crops is away below what it should be, and by this new arrangement the returns are expected to be above the average in a short time.

BRITISH FOOD CONTROLLER SAYS FOOD SUPPLY IS UP TO CANADA

There Never Was a Time When Food Was More Needed and the Allies Depend to a Vital Extent Upon the Dominion

The following message addressed to the Organization of Resources committee has just been received:

London, April 5th, 1918.

"In these stern days it is inspiring to learn that Ontario is tackling the food problem with redoubled energy. The terrific pressure on our military front makes it all the more imperative that those behind the lines shall strain every nerve to defeat the enemy's avowed object of destroying the British Empire. Germany hoped first to starve the old country by the submarine campaign and then to smash her land forces. She has failed to starve us and she will fail to smash us, but we cannot achieve victory without food. There never was a time when it was more needed. The Canadian farmer and Canadian farmhand now have the opportunity to make an effective reply to the enemy's present onslaught by bending their undivided energies to the increased production of those food supplies for which we depend to such vital extent upon your great Dominion."

Oats were easier yesterday. Winnipeg options closing 1-2c. lower than Wednesday, and cash oats reduced the same amount at Fort William. The new trading in corn came into effect yesterday, June and July coming into the list in the Chicago market. Prices on these months made a sharp advance of 3 to 4 cents over the opening quotations. There is already a movement at Washington with a view to placing further price restrictions on corn and oats in an attempt to stamp out speculation entirely. Drastic measures are proposed.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

SIGNOR TORETTI'S FIRST HOUR

CHAPTER XXXIX.

The remembrance of the unpleasantness of the night before, still lingered when I went down to breakfast, entirely obliterting the pleasure I had felt in the earlier part of the day. We talked little at the table, and when we rose Mrs. Sexton said:

"You will not need me, as Signor Torretti is coming. I will take the car and do some necessary shopping."

I made no reply. She had not asked if she might have the car, nor even if I intended to use it. She had simply stated that she would take it. What need for an answer.

But I forgot all my little annoyances when Signor Torretti came. We spent a delightful hour. He was enthusiastic over my playing, my technique, my phrasing.

"You will excel," he said gravely, "if you desire."

"Oh, I love music! It is not hard for me to practice!"

"No? That is good."

When Mrs. Sexton came in to luncheon, she at once asked how I got along with the Signor.

"Oh, wonderfully!" forgetting in my enthusiasm that I had felt a grouch toward her; that I was peeved. "He said I would excel if I desired. He was funny. I love music of course I desire to excel."

An Explanation.

"I think I know what he meant. You are very temperamental. He feared that you would allow other things—your moods—to interfere."

"That is silly."

After we had finished luncheon Mrs. Sexton asked if I had any plans for the afternoon.

"No," I ungraciously replied.

"Suppose, then, we start planning the dinner. I feel none too well, myself, to-day. We might go into the library and make up the menu, or decide upon the decorations."

"I should love to," then I noticed that she looked rather white—gray, rather,—and had big circles under her eyes. "That is, if you feel able," I added.

"Oh, yes, perfectly so. Although, if you do not object, I might lie on the couch while we plan. I had rather a trying morning."

"Not at all. I will bring you a soft pillow from my room," and paying no attention to her objections, I ran up-stairs and brought down a pillow and a blanket to throw over her. I did'nt want to do anything for her, but something I could not analyze impelled me.

"Thank you," she said as she sank gratefully on to the pillow and drew the soft blanket up over herself. "Now get a pencil and paper, and we'll start that momentous dinner going."

Once more I forgot how disagreeable she was, as, for an hour or longer, we discussed good things to eat, and table decorations.

"We must remember your guests are all young. Simplicity must be the keynote of the dinner. Simple elegance," she said, as we talked of one idea after another.

"Merton Gray is coming."

"Really! he is quite a lion you know."

"Yes, so they say. But he was at Evelyn's party and he said he would come whenever I asked him.

You Like Him?

"You like Mr. Gray?"

"Oh, yes! immensely. He is so nice. One would never mistrust he wasn't just like any of the boys I know. He's like my brothers."

"I rather imagine you know a different Merton Gray from the one the rest of us know."

"What do you mean?" I asked, puzzled by her manner as well as by her speech.

"He must be a sort of Jekyl and Hyde individual. Whenever I have been at any function where he was a guest, he has acted intolerably bored and blase!"

"Oh that's because you were all older—! oh, pardon me, but he wasn't a bit like that at Evelyn's. He was as jolly as could be. It was a poverty party you know, and oceans of fun."

"Please break yourself of saying 'you know.'" 'I did not know, and you probably knew that I didn't. But tell me all about it. I am interested, in spite of my criticism," she had read my resentment in my face.

I explained the party to her in detail. She was quiet for a moment, then said:

"Perhaps me might think up some quaint idea for your dinner. A period dinner of some kind, and all dress in costume."

"Oh, could you? That would be wonderful."

"Yes, I think I could," she smiled. "Now will you excuse me if I leave you again to-night? As I told you, I had a trying day. But I shan't forget to think about your dinner."

She had scarcely reached her room before James announced Merton Gray. I couldn't help but be glad she was not there to receive him.

How Sugar Became a Necessity.

Man's enormous need for sugar is the result of the evolution of his digestive system. Our remote ancestors in the European forests of the ice age were able to digest cellulose and get the sugar out of it, as a goat or a camel does now. The organ which did this work was the vermiform appendix. Later, man began to get enough sugar by converting the starch in grains and fruits. Then he discovered the process of cooking, which makes this conversion of starches into sugar much easier, and even in some cases performs the process. When sugar was discovered, it was at first regarded as a curiosity, then served as a luxury, and finally became the necessity which it now is, as men's stomachs became accustomed to its use. It is, then, a partially digested food, and a highly concentrated form of energy. The sugar-eating man has survived because he took a great burden off his digestive tract and thereby had more energy for other work. Hence man has become a confirmed sugar eater.

Little-Known Philippine Industry.

People usually connect the Philippine islands with perfumes and tropical fruits, and very little is heard of the great native industry—the weaving of fabrics from pineapples and bananas. The lining of the skins is used, and the looms not unlike those familiar to us are employed. The finest material is made from pineapples, and called pina cloth. It is very soft and close in texture, somewhat resembling mull-muslin, and is the color of champagne. It is not as a rule dyed, and is beautifully embroidered.

What Physicians Prescribe For Nerves

THE USE OF ORGANIC PHOSPHORUS.

Something over sixty years ago Pelouz, a French scientist, discovered a form of organic phosphorus which when taken into the human system, was quickly converted into nerve tissue.

To-day it is an admitted fact that in the treatment of those ailments, directly or indirectly due to depleted nervous vitality, such as neurasthenia, nervous weakness, premature old age, insomnia, lack of energy, fatigue, nervous debility, thinness, etc., it is unequalled.

Physicians and hospitals everywhere now recognize its merits by its use in ever increasing quantities, and it is therefore a matter of more than ordinary interest to all such sufferers to learn that this organic nerve building phosphorus is now obtainable from McDermid & Jury and good druggists everywhere in the form of 5-grain tablets of pure nitro-phosphate, at a cost so low as to be within the reach of everyone. There are a great variety of so-called phosphates, but the genuine standard nitro-phosphate is composed wholly of the original nerve building substance as discovered by Pelouz.

One of these tablets should be taken with each meal, and the results in many instances are little short of marvellous. Dull eyes become bright, sleep is restored to the sleepless, the nerves regain their strength, thin people put on flesh and the whole system becomes charged with that strength, vitality and energy which makes life so truly worth while.

Ancients Valued Salt Highly.

It is not astonishing that the possession of salt mines or salt deposits was the cause of many disputes and even wars among nations, and Tacitus relates that the Hermunduri waged bloody war with the Chatti for over fifty years for the possession of salt springs which were situated on the banks of the River Saale in Frankia and in the neighboring forests, believing that such localities were closer to heaven and that the prayers of the mortals, in these places, were particularly apt to be heard.—Medicine and Surgery.

Big Catches.

Anglers on the coast of Florida often catch sharks weighing 150 pounds with a 16 ounce rod. On the Californian coast, too, huge sharks, 12 feet or 15 feet long are bagged. Occasionally a tartar is caught which ends the business by smashing not only the line but the boat. The gentlemen anglers of the Californian coast actually have a challenge cup for the biggest swordfish caught in the course of the season. The record is a fish 150 pounds in weight, and the sport is described as about as exciting as tiger hunting.

DON'T "BREAK" COLTS

It Always Pays Better to Train Them for Work.

TRAIN EARLY TO HARNESS

The Collar Must Fit Well and the Food Be Light at First — Feed Must Be Increased In Proportion to Work Done.

(Contributed by Ontario Departmen of Agriculture, Toronto.)

THERE ARE MANY colts approaching the termination of their third or fourth year, that are practically untaught, or as it is usually expressed "unbroken."

The too common practice of allowing such to go "unbroken" until such time as they are required to perform the functions of a horse in the spring, is irrational, and unfair to the animal. Colts should not be "broken," they should be taught or educated. In the unhandled or unbroken colt, the muscular, respiratory and nervous system (the organs whose functions are taxed in the performance of the ordinary functions of a horse) are weak and undeveloped from lack of function. Hence a regular course of preparation during the late winter and early spring months, when the time of both man and horse is not very valuable, should be given in order to have the colts in such condition when time becomes valuable that they will be able to perform a reasonable amount of work with satisfaction to the driver and safety to themselves.

The colt or colts should first be taught to wear harness and bridle by being allowed to run free for a few hours daily in a box stall or paddock, with the harness on. It is then good practice to match each with a handy, smart and good-natured horse, or if necessary a pair of colts together, and teach them to drive, obey the words of command, stand when asked to, etc.

When they have become reasonably handy without being hitched, they should be hitched to a waggon. Care should be taken to see that the harness fits properly. This applies especially to collars. The collars in which they are expected to work later on, should be worn. Each should have his own, and it should fit properly, not being too wide, so as to allow a rolling motion, nor yet sufficiently narrow to pinch at any point. The bearing surface should conform thoroughly to the surfaces of the neck and shoulder with which it comes in contact, except at the bottom, where sufficient vacant space to allow the introduction of a man's fingers should exist.

The colt or pair should be given daily exercise or light work, commencing with an hour or two the first day and gradually increasing the amount until they will be able to perform a full day's reasonable exertion without showing signs of weariness. The amount of grain given should also be gradually increased in proportion to the work or exercise given. By such usage the muscular, respiratory and nervous systems gradually gain tone, the muscles with which the harness, especially the collar, comes in contact, gradually become hardened and increased in power of resistance, hence become much less liable to soreness. In many cases, on account of this hardening of the muscles, they lose bulk, hence a collar that may have fitted perfectly at first may now be too large.—J. H. R., Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.

Preparing for Gardening.

This month begins the active gardening work. Hotbeds should be made and the seed of the early plants like cabbage, cauliflower, early celery, early beets, and the long season plants like tomatoes, egg plants and peppers should be started. Many of these seeds for small gardening work may be started inside which will relieve the necessity of making hotbeds until the first part of next month. Manure for top dressing the ground may be hauled out the latter part of this month.

Hints For the Poultryman.

The flock should be given the opportunity to get out of doors and exercise on fine days. Begin to make preparation for hatching. Clean up the incubators and brooders, get boxes ready for setting hens. Do not set hens in the laying pens where other birds are running. If you want to raise more than 150 chickens consider the use of a good incubator and brooder. Usually chickens of the general purpose breeds hatched during the last week of March make the best winter layers. Where using hens for hatching dust them well with some good insect powder before setting, and again about two weeks later.

Care of the Freshening Cow.

This is the month when a large number of cows freshen. Both fresh cows and newly-born calves should receive special attention. Cows expected to freshen should be placed in a box stall for a few days before and after freshening. Many valuable cows and calves are lost by neglecting to provide box stall accommodation. This should be found in every dairy stable; or else have a special barn for the purpose. A few hours "sunshine bath" each week will make far more healthful stock and improve the dairying.

Feeding the Ewe.

On many farms lambs will begin to arrive about this time. If ewes have been liberally fed for a month before lambing they will likely have more milk. From ½ to 1 lb. of grain fed per ewe per day for a month before lambing is generally good practice, especially if ewes are somewhat thin. —Ontario Agricultural College Notes.

Leopard Ship of the Sea.

Fooling the enemy is a remunerative and interesting pastime with the allies, says Popular Science Monthly. They have their camouflage on land; now comes the camouflage of the sea. A ship is painted with spots which fade out into a glittering and shimmering haze in the sunlight. A submarine commander one or two miles distant might look straight at the ship and never see her.

The spots are of light gray and navy blue, which, even on a sunless day, blend with the waves of the ocean. The indistinct outline which this gives makes the ship a poor target.

Chart for New York Harbor.

A revised chart of New York harbor, on a scale of 1-40,000, has been issued by the United States coast and geodetic survey. The labor involved in bringing such a chart up to date is illustrated by the fact that in one year there have been for this chart 253 different items of change, which required 233 working days to compile and engrave. Marked changes in the contour of the bottom, disclosed by recent surveys, are shown at the entrance between Sandy Hook and Coney Island.

Pay for Harmful Butterflies.

Butterfly catching was converted from a schoolboy's amusement into a serious business at Solingen and Dusseldorf, in western Germany. The communal authorities offered a premium of one pfennig apiece for every butterfly of the harmful varieties caught, with the result that the school children have already handed in 50,000 at Solingen and 150,000 at Dusseldorf. The method was adopted to combat the consequent caterpillar plague.

Didn't Like It.

A colonel of a well-known Highland regiment, on returning from the army, had built a snug little villa which he had named "The Retreat."

His gardener, who was an old soldier from the same regiment, on being shown over the place for the first time by the colonel, was asked by the latter what he thought of the place.

"Fine! But I dinna like that," said the old soldier, pointing to the name on the entrance.

"Why?" replied the colonel. "What's the matter with it?"

"Weel, sir," replied the veteran, drawing himself up, "ye ken ye never heard that played on oor bugles."

Washing Won't Rid Head of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this to-night, and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

A Curious Incident.

There is a rather neat historical tribute to the looseness and rattlesomeness of the windows of the churches in the olden days. It refers to the time when, in September, 1716, the Frenchman, d'Anville, had assembled his great expedition—forty ships, 4,000 regular soldiers, the most powerful expedition which up to that time had ever been sent from Europe to North America—for a descent on Boston, and on Sunday Rev. Thomas Prince, in the pulpit of the Old South Meeting House, had been praying that something might happen to that fleet. What then happened is told in Wisner's "Historical Sermons": A sudden gust of wind arose (the day had until now been perfectly clear and calm) so violent as to cause a loud chattering of the windows. The reverend pastor paused in his prayer, and, looking around upon the congregation with a countenance of hope, he again commenced, and with great devotional ardor supplicated the Almighty to cause "that wind to frustrate the object of our enemies and save the country from conquest and popery.") A tempest ensued, in which the greater part of the French fleet was wrecked on the coast of Nova Scotia. The Duke d'Anville, the principal general, and the second in command both committed suicide. Many died with disease, and thousands were consigned to a watery grave. The small number who remaine alive returned to France without health and without spirits. Longfellow's poem on this episode is familiar. The Boston Transcript does not know whether any one has ever inquired into the curious circumstances that a wind, blowing evidently from the northeast, should have made itself felt against the rattling windows of the Old South Meeting House in Boston, before it swooped down on the coast of Nova Scotia. It would be interesting to be assured that Parson Prince's prayer was not really ex post facto.

Fascination of the Sea.

To those who live on the coast or near enough to visit it frequently, no words need be said in praise of the mighty ocean. Unlike the mountains, the prairie and the forest, the sea never grows monotonous. It is "a mere expanse of water," if you will, but it is such a varied expanse that one never grows weary of looking at it. It is this fascination that binds a sailor to his profession. His work is hard, the perils are many, and the pay and food are alike poor, but once a sailor he can never willingly drudge on land again. Even in his old age and crippled, he loves to haunt the seashore and gaze on the element he once lived upon.

Careless Shampooing Spoils The Hair

If you want to keep your hair looking its best, be careful what you wash it with. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries uickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

COOPERS AT HOME

Town on Otsego Lake Bears Family Name of Novelist.

Here the Noted Writer Gained Inspiration to Execute Works That Brought Him Fame.

With the arrival of a solitary horseman at the shores of Otsego lake in New York begins the history of Cooperstown. He was William Cooper, of a Buckinghamshire family that came to America from England in 1770, and he founded the town which bears his name. Leaving his home in Pennsylvania in 1785, at the age of thirty-one, he investigated the region round about Otsego lake with the intention of founding there a home for himself and a village for others. In January, 1806, he took possession, in association with Andrew Craig, of a large tract of 29,350 acres, soon afterward buying out his partner's share and becoming sole owner. Settlers began to arrive, and in 1788, Cooper erected a home for himself. It stood on Main street, where is now the entrance to the beautiful and extensive Cooper estate.

This William Cooper was the father of James Fenimore Cooper, who in his transfer to his new home at the age of thirteen months was the impassive witness of an amusing family difference. It seems that when William Cooper had completed arrangements for the transfer of his family from Burlington, N. J., to Cooperstown, his wife positively refused to go. She remembered the wilderness which she had visited three years before and she preferred the well established society and congenial friends of her old home to the discomforts of a pioneer settlement. The conveyance was ready and waiting, her husband urged her to give in, but she sat firmly in a chair in the library of her Burlington home and refused to budge.

The circumstances of this family disagreement are pleasantly narrated by Rev. Ralph Birdsall, rector of Christ church, says the Boston Transcript, in his delightful little volume which he calls "The Story of Cooperstown." If Mrs. Cooper was a strong-minded woman, Mr. Cooper was no less a strong-minded man. "He seized the chair," says Mr. Birdsall, "with his wife in it, and putting her aboard the wagon, chair and all, began the long journey to Otsego. Thus William Cooper carried his point, while his wife carried hers, for she traveled the whole distance in the chair from which she vowed she would not move. The chair itself, sacred to the memory of two strong minds, is still in use in the Cooper family."

This change of home doubtless shaped, if it did not alter, the life of James Fenimore Cooper. All his first impressions, he said long afterward, were obtained in the Otsego region. It is to be doubted whether Fenimore Cooper would have gained such wide celebrity as a novelist if he had not discovered the unique field of romance which the lake and hills of Otsego began to open to his vision. Had Fenimore Cooper remained in Burlington he might have written good novels, but not "The Leather Stocking Tales."

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

Darkens Beautifully and Restores Its Natural Colour and Lustre at Once

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients, a large bottle, at little cost, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

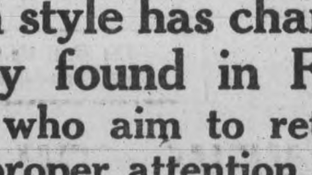
While ashore in a port of one of the little island republics in the Caribbean a number of United States marines attended a bull fight that was graced by the presence of his excellency the president of the republic, says the Saturday Evening Post. The sea soldiers occupied a box near the presidential party and, to amuse themselves while waiting for the show to begin, threw pennies into a river that flowed by the arena and watched native boys dive for them. The word quickly passed that soldados Americanos were pitching wealth into the muddy waters and soon hundreds of black shining faces were on the banks of the river just outside the bull ring. The marines enjoyed themselves hugely watching the little fellows dive, but finally ran out of pennies and were forced to raise the limit to quarters and half dollars. One marine, more reckless than the others, pitched a big silver dollar, while a score of black boys dived for it. He was just about to repeat the performance when an excited native seated near by plucked at his sleeve and whispered hoarsely: "Please don't do that, senor, you'll have the president diving."

A Scarlet Rider.

Lieut. Col. G. E. Sanders, D. S. O. of the Second Canadian Pioneer Battalion, holds a somewhat remarkable record in the Canadian forces. He is said to be the first Canadian officer who has ever been known to suggest that his command should be taken over by a younger man. In view of the splendid work which has been done by the Second Pioneer Battalion, the Canadian authorities have been rather hard to persuade on this point; but Colonel Sanders has, unfortunately, insisted that, while he may still be useful in other directions, pioneering is a young man's job. Colonel Sanders, who fought through the Boer war with distinction, was before that war in command of the Northwest Mounted Police at Calgary. Indeed, he returned to that command of famous "Mounties" after the war.

South Africa Growing Sugar Cane.

Sugar planting is making rapid strides in South Africa, and the last few years have seen acres upon acres put under cane, from Durban to practically the end of the new railway line in Zululand, terminating at Sonkele. The coast of Natal and Zululand is eminently suitable for the growth of sugar cane, and many farmers have given up their up-country farms for the more profitable sugar growing along the coast belt. The climate is very warm in summer, but as the main work, the cutting and milling of the cane, takes place in winter, sugar growers are enabled to leave their farms for a cooler climate during the summer months.



OUR DEFENSE

In the spring we may be attacked at any moment. Toxic poisons pile up within us after a hard winter, and we feel "run-down," tired out, blue and discouraged. This is the time to put our house in order—cleanse the system and put fresh blood into our arteries. You can obtain an alterative extract from Blood root, Golden Seal, Stone and Queen's root, Cherry bark, rolled into a sugar-coated tablet and sold by most druggists, in fifty-cent vials, as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This blood tonic, in tablet or liquid form, is just what you need for "Spring Fever," for that lack of ambition. It will fill you full of vim, vigor and vitality.

LINDSAY, ONTARIO.—"When my little daughter was five years old her liver was so sluggish that I feared she might be troubled with habitual constipation. I had read a great deal about Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and decided to try it with her, giving her small doses. I found that it not only helped her liver but it also proved to be a splendid tonic, as well. It was such a splendid medicine that I would never hesitate to give it to her again if she needed it, and I take pleasure in recommending it to other mothers whose little ones seem to need a liver regulator and blood maker."—Mrs. LOUISA BEACH, Box 1135.

More Wheat Than Canada.

The Ukraine, which is reported to have concluded a separate peace with Germany, is a territory of some 850,000 square kilometres, one-sixth of Russia's area, and of this total over half—53 per cent., to be exact—is farmed, the highest European cultivation average, with the sole exception of France, which has 56 per cent. of her area under crop.

According to the Winnipeg Free Press, the grain production of this important Russian province is greater than that of Canada, and amounts to one-third of the whole Russian output. The Ukraine also produces five-sixths of the country's sugar beets, has fifty per cent. of Russia's supply of sheep, goats and pigs, and thirty million head of cattle.

The Ukraine stands in the same position to the rest of Russia in minerals as in agriculture. Two-thirds of the country's iron is mined within her confines, one-sixth of the whole world's supply of manganese—a most important munition product—and 99 per cent. of Russia's anthracite. Her oil wells have been developed by Anglo-American capital.

The Ukrainian population in Europe is roughly 30,000,000, of which 25,000,000 are Russian subjects, and though they have fretted for centuries under the Russian yoke, they have no love for Austria, and both hate and fear Germany. Should they establish themselves as an entity after the war and annex the two Ruthenian provinces now held by the dual empire, then Austria-Hungary will find herself flanked by an ambitious state little deficient to herself, either in population or resources.

There are a quarter million Ukranians in Canada to-day, some 3,000 whom live in Toronto. Their priest, Rev. J. Boyarczuk, predicts that at least 75 per cent. of them will return to the land of their birth after the war if it remains a republic.

TO SUFFER FROM HEADACHES

Makes Life Miserable

Headaches seems to be habitual with many people. Some are seldom, if ever, free from it, suffering continually with the dull throbbings, the intense pain, sometimes in one part, sometimes in another, and then over the whole head, varying in its severity by the cause which brings it on.

The varieties of headache most common are sick or bilious headache, nervous headache, headache from constipation, debility or indigestion and periodical and spasmodic headache, and undoubtedly the cause must be removed before permanent relief can be had.

Burdock Blood Bitters, that has been on the market for over 40 years, removes the cause of the headaches, and not only does this but also restores the entire system to healthy action and buoyant vigour.

Miss Emily Smith, 204 Bellwoods Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Burdock Blood Bitters. For two years I was greatly troubled with violent headaches, particularly in the morning. I tried everything to cure me until a friend recommended B.B.B. I tried it, and now I am completely cured."

Money in Orchards When Properly Planted and Cared For.

BACKYARD GARDENING PAYS

Hints By an Expert In the Feeding and Care of the Mare and Foal.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

THE PLANTING of commercial apple orchards in the Province of Ontario is highly desirable for several reasons:—

1. Ontario is not producing enough good apples for home supply, but imports annually from Nova Scotia, British Columbia, Washington, Oregon and California.

2. Production in Ontario is likely to fall off still more because no commercial planting is being done. Very few commercial apple orchards have been set out in this province since 1911.

3. Of the thousands of young trees set in the bloom years of 1905 to 1911 a large proportion have already passed out of existence. Probably not more than 20 p.c. of the trees planted during those years will figure in the commercial production of the future, and certainly not more than 40 p.c. of them are alive and receiving attention to-day.

4. The home orchard will never again be an important factor in commercial apple production in this province, because it is not large enough to be worth while. In seasons when scab control is difficult or when prices are down because of a heavy crop, the return from the small orchards is not large enough to justify the expense and risk involved. When conditions are unfavorable the small orchard passes quickly into a state of neglect; this is why apple growing in Ontario is at such low ebb at present.

5. Fruit is an essential part of diet. While it is true that in case of necessity people can live without it, it is also true that health suffers and nutritional complaints become much more general in the absence from the dietary of fresh fruits and vegetables. The apple is the most important and most useful fruit of the temperate zone and, from the standpoint of public health its culture should not be neglected.—Prof. J. W. Crow, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.

Care of Pregnant Mares.

The pregnant mare should be well fed, and given regular exercise or light work. All food and water given should be of first-class quality. She should be given more grain than the non-pregnant mare, as she has her foetus to support. All possible care should be observed to avoid digestive derangements; hence everything consumed should be of good quality, easily digested, fed in proportion to the amount of work performed and at regular intervals. In addition to hay and oats, she should be given a few raw roots daily, and a feed of bran with a cupful of linseed meal, at least twice weekly.

Work that requires excessive muscular or respiratory effort should be avoided, so also should plunging through deep snow, slipping, etc. All nervous excitement should be avoided, so also should sights which frighten her, also offensive odors and operations.

The use of drugs should not be tolerated, except upon the advice of a veterinarian. If necessary to give a purgative it is much safer to give raw linseed oil than aloes. Towards the end of pregnancy still greater care should be observed, and, while daily exercise up to the very last is advisable, it should be given more carefully and less of it when she becomes somewhat clumsy on account of size and weight.

While it is better to allow her a box stall when in the stable at all times, it is practically necessary after about the tenth month of gestation, as the period of gestation is irregular and the foal may be born, without any well-marked premonetary symptoms, any time after ten months.

After the foal is born the mare should be given at least two weeks idleness, and if she can be allowed to run idle until weaning time, it will be all the better for both herself and foal.—J.H.R., Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.

Vacant Lot Gardening.

The majority of the horticultural societies in this province have accomplished great things with their vacant lot propaganda. In the cities of Toronto and Ottawa alone many acres have been cultivated. Ottawa reports over 100 acres from which 50,000 bushels of valuable garden products have been garnered in first-class condition. Those interested in horticulture in Toronto through the Vacant Lot Gardening Association have also done a splendid work and in a large way.

The report issued by the superintendent, Mr. Geo. Baldwin, states: Number of lots under cultivation during 1917, 798, all well cultivated Number of soldiers and soldiers' families working lots, 80. Average size of lots 3,000 square feet, all marked with sign board. Package of seeds provided 725, of which 607 were paid for. Several churches, hospitals, homes, girl guides, boy scouts included in lot holders. One lot looked after by a returned soldier who lost both his legs, another by a man with only one hand. The condition of both these lots would shame those who are not thus seriously handicapped. All gardens are inspected once a week and reminders sent to those who neglect their plots. The crops produced have a value of $40,000 at a moderate estimate.—J. Lockie Wilson, Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.

Magnets.

Although there is such a thing as a natural magnet most of those in use are artificial. There are two general methods for making artificial magnets. The first is to take a bar or a needle of magnetic substance, iron or steel, wrap an insulated wire around it like a thread on a spool, and pass a strong electric current through the wire. The other method is to take as before a bar or needle of a magnetic substance and place it near a magnet. The intensity of the magnetization in both cases is increased by hammering the bar while the process of magnetizing is going on. A piece of steel magnetized in this way remains so for a long time, while a piece of iron soon loses its magnetization.

A Flag for Verdun.

A Canadian flag, to be hung in the Hotel de Ville of Verdun, France, along with the standards of all the allies, is being presented by the Association of French War Veterans in Montreal known as Les Sac au Dos, and will be forwarded to the Mayor of Verdun through the medium of the Montreal Gazette.

Iron imbedded in concrete in Germany has been found to be free from rust after more than forty-five years.

More Recriminations.

The recriminations between Ontario and Quebec go merrily on. In Ontario the newspaper writers had their innings when they talked about the intolerance and bad manners of the audiences that refused to give a hearing to Unionist candidates during the recent election. Now the Quebec papers are getting back at Toronto on account of the howling down of William Jennings Bryan during his recent visit to that city. Le Presse remarked sarcastically, when commenting on the proceedings, "And this after the Ontario press made so much fuss when disorders, much less important, took place in Quebec. The disgraceful treatment extended Mr. Bryan can only serve to injure the good reputation of Ontario and the entire Dominion. Why is it we are asked every day to defend democracy and the liberty of peoples when at the same time we are not able to defend the freedom of speech among ourselves."

La Patrie says: "The former Secretary of State for the United States only wanted to discuss prohibition in a city which boasts of having closed the bars and prides itself on possessing a monopoly of all the virtues. Courtesy and politeness are then with Torontonians merely scraps of paper."

A Popular Promotion.

The promotion of Brig.-Gen. A. D. McRae, the new director of organization in Lord Beaverbrook's Ministry of Information, to major-general is regarded with favor in England as placing another Canadian among the higher command. He is the only Canadian officer given that rank in the old land who is not commanding a division or exercising a similar responsibility.

SPECIFIC FOR BRONCHITIS.

The turpentine used in Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is not the ordinary commercial article, which is little used because of the unpleasantness of taste, but is specially extracted from tamarac and spruce gum and so combined with other valuable ingredients as to be at the same time pleasant to use and wonderfully effective in the cure of affections of the throat, bronchial tubes and lungs.

Russians Wrecked Railroads.

The gauge of the Russian railroads is about one foot wider than that of the German railroads. Hence the Russians during their retreat after the battle of Tannenberg believed that the Germans would be unable to use their narrower gauge locomotives and cars on the Russian lines. The Germans, however, moved one of the rails a foot inside its former position. At the same time, they ruined the track for Russian use by sawing off the ties just outside the shifted rails. The Russians came back, and on their next retreat exploded a cartridge at each rail joint, smashing the joint and bending in the abutting rail ends so that cars could not pass. This involved for the Germans the huge task of bringing up new steel and relaying the entire track. The job was completed.

SMALL STORES need advertising as well as large ones. If the small dealer fears that his little ad. will be lost in a newspaper carrying large ads., he should be reminded if this were true, it would follow that his little store located in a city with large stores, would also be lost.

If some folks were to think twice before speaking, their remarks would be postponed indefinitely.

After the third of fourth application of this grand Ointment I obtained relief and a few boxes were sufficient to make a thorough cure

WHERE ORCHARDS PAY

Most Profitable Near Cities When Market Is Convenient.

LABOR IS THE BIG PROBLEM

No Province or State In North America Has So Large an Area Suitable for Apple Growing as Has Ontario.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

THIS QUESTION will be discussed under four heads: Climate, Soil, Labor and Transportation.

The Factor of Climate.

So far as climate is concerned apples can be grown commercially in any part of old Ontario, south of a line drawn from Parry Sound to Ottawa; in fact, there are commercial orchards producingg fruit at a profit considerably further north than this. Many people think of commercial apple orchards as being necessarily confined to the milder parts of the province, and to the lake districts, but the fact is worth emphasizing that we have varieties of apples suitable for commercial culture in every county of old Ontario. The winter hardiness of the many varieties grown throughout Ontario is now very well established, and it is possible to select varieties which will be hardy for any district.

The most serious climatic difficulty in the Province of Ontario is the occurrence of late frost in spring, and early frost in fall. Other difficulties of a climatic nature can be largely overcome by the selection of suitable varieties, or by careful discrimination with regard to soil, elevation, aspect, etc. It may be pointed out, however, that frosts are more common and more severe over large areas of flat country, than where the topography is rolling and hilly.. Large areas of some of the southern counties of Ontario are, therefore, more or less unsuited to commercial apple orcharding because of their flat character. A more rolling country is much to be preferred, so that orchards can be made safer from frost by the better air drainage afforded.

The choice of varieties for various districts will be made the subject of later notes.

Suitable Soil In Every County.

So far as soils are concerned, it may be stated that there is an abundance of land in every county suitable for apple growing. Well drained land is essential for successful orcharding, and there is plenty of soil of this type to be had in almost every district.

Summing up Soil and Climate, it may be said that no province or state in North America has so large an area so favorable in soil and climate for apple growing as has the Province of Ontario. If this statement is true it becomes obvious that the present distribution of apple orchards in Ontario is dependent on other factors.

Most Profitable Near Cities.

Transportation is the most important factor having to do with the distribution of commercial apple orchards in Ontario. In other words, the commercial apple orchards are located within reach of transportation facilities, and the better facilities have been with relation to large cities and to the developing markets of the prairies, the more rapid has been the development of commercial orcharding. A location near a large city may be desirable, but if better soil and climate are to be found at a distance, the more distant location is likely to be preferred, provided transportation facilities are good.

Some districts in Ontario possess excellent conditions of soil and climate, but are lacking in transportation facilities, and until facilities are available little development can take place in commercial orcharding.

Labor Situation Very Acute.

At the present time the labor situation is acute, and is rendered more so from the standpoint of the apple grower by virtue of the emphasis which, very correctly, is being placed upon the production of exportable food stuffs. The labor shortage will result in the majority of small orchards being more or less neglected. But the large commercial grower of apples has been in difficulty for years over the matter of labor supply. For commercial orchard operations on a sizable basis, it is necessary to be within reach of a temporary supply of labor for apple picking. Otherwise it becomes necessary to build dwellings for men and their families so that a supply of labor may be always available.

The difficulties of the labor situation at picking time can be lessened considerably by the planting of varieties which ripen in succession, and by taking care to get the right proportion of each. A large area of one variety ripening at one time is extremely difficult to handle. — Prof. J. W. Crow, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.

The Forehanded Beekeeper.

In March the careful beekeeper will find a great deal to do in the way of preparing next season's supplies. All used appliances should be put in the best of shape and necessary new ones secured and prepared before the busy spring season arrives. New supplies necessary should be ordered at once. The beekeeper's supers are his barns, his bees are his harvesters, and given barnroom they will harvest his crop with less risk of weather injury than farmers expect in almost any other crop. Without sufficient barn-room a percentage of the crop will be lost. Containers sufficient for the large crop that may be expected next season should also be ordered at this time. This applies particularly to present war-time conditions when supplies of material are uncertain.

Fruit Growers Are Optimistic

IF every branch of the farming industry is being undertaken this year with as much enthusiasm and hopefulness as is fruit growing by the Niagara district men, production is pretty sure of receiving the much-desired boost. The peach growers, who form the majority of the orchardists in that part of the country, will not hear of any such trouble as frozen roots or unpromising buds, even though this winter their trees were subjected to the lowest temperature that has developed in the Niagara belt for years, namely, 20 degrees below zero. The claim that this hard freeze did not endanger the buds is established on the fact that humidity was lacking when it occurred. Prof. McCubbin, of St. Catharines, has found plenty of live fruit buds to satisfy him that the prospect for a fair show of blossom is a good one, and the growers are satisfied to accept his decision, backed by their own investigations.

Another point in favor of the probability of a good season for the fruit growers is the promise of a supply of help for the cultivating and harvesting seasons that exists in the efforts of the labor section of the Organization of Resources Committee. Further, the fruit growers are well satisfied that their line of endeavor is calculated to produce food that is absolutely needed to take the place of staples needed for shipment overseas, and to maintain the health of the general public and it is their intention to institute a campaign for the advertising of their product so that distribution will be ensured. A resolution to ask the co-operation of the Provincial Government in this proposed advertising campaign was passed at the Niagara Fruit Growers' convention.

One measure, no doubt proposed with the idea of helping agricultural production, failed to secure the backing of the Niagara district growers at their recent convention. Several members spoke in opposition to the daylight saving scheme, using the following arguments: First, the starting of the working day an hour earlier by the sun would mean a waste of time to fruit growers as the work of cultivating in certain growing crops and the harvesting of fruits cannot be commenced until such time in the day as the night dew is off the foliage; second, quitting work an hour earlier at night with the intention of starting an hour earlier the next morning would mean trouble in securing a good night's rest because the average farmhouse is too warm for sleeping in until some considerable time after sundown; third, with other industries closing an hour earlier than at present, the growers would be forced to discontinue their work of harvesting an hour before otherwise necessary so as to be able to make shipments to or do business in the world outside their fruit farms.

No doubt a fruit grower, or other farmer could, and would, work from sunrise to sunset, no matter what the official hours might be; but a hired man working on a ten-hour-a-day basis, as most do in the fruit district, would want to regulate his starting and quitting hours to accord with those of the inhabitants of the town or village so as to be able to share his free time with his friends and neighbors. Of course, arrangements can be made for overtime, but the idea of paying for overtime all the times does not appeal to the fruit grower.

The fruit growers are agreed among themselves with regard to every matter of importance to their industry with the exception of the standardization of fruit packages. Yet, even in this matter, they seem agreed to a certain extent, namely, that each grower is opposed to standardization if it entails a change from his own particular style of package or that used in his particular district. Far from being decided on a package for fruits that might be considered similar by the consumer, for example, peaches, plums, apples, etc., the growers cannot even decide on a standard package for peaches, some preferring a deep 11-quart basket, others a shallow ditto, and yet others a deep 9-quart. To the consumer and, probably to the dealer in fruit, the standardization of packages looks feasible and it is to be hoped that the arrangement can be brought about with reasonable satisfaction to all the growers.

A Slight Risk.

A British photographer writes to the Photo-Era that a camera is a dangerous bit of mechanism to toy with just now. He says that the captain of an English cargo-boat told him his ship met with an accident on its last voyage to Canada. Having a pocket kodak, he planned to go ashore and snapshot the damaged bow as a record for his owners. A port authority strongly discouraged him, and on being pressed for a reason, said, "Well, you see, the harbor guards are young men with new rifles, and if they see you bobbing about with a camera you might get a bullet through you!"

National Games.

One of the odd features about the Canadian national games is that they are so closely associated with certain towns. Kitchener, which won the Ontario Hockey Association championship this year, has always been prominent in this sport and won a hockey trophy twelve years ago by defeating Toronto Argonauts by a score of 5 to 4. Kingston is another town which is closely associated with Canada's great winter sport, just as the names of St. Catharines, Brampton, Orangeville and Cornwall, all great lacrosse towns, suggest to everybody the national summer game of the Dominion.

BRETHREN OF THE SWORD

Home of Cult Was at Wenden, on the North Line of the German Offensive in Russia.

The National Geographic society issues the following war geography bulletin on Wenden, on the line of the German offensive in the direction of Petrograd:

The town of Wenden, one of the oldest in the province of Livonia, is situated a few miles by rail northeast of Riga. It is a picturesque place, built two miles from the left bank of the River Aa. The Aa flows in a southwesterly direction from this point through that part of Russia known as the Livonian Switzerland, not on account of the height of mountains—the highest hill is only 265 feet—but because of the charm of the landscape with its well-wooded slopes bordering the river valley.

The story of Wenden goes back seven centuries to the time when the Brethren of the Sword, recognized by Pope Innocent III in 1202, made this place their headquarters in the campaign inaugurated by them to disseminate Christianity among the heathen Livonians. A castle was built here in 1210, and though it is now scarcely more than a crumbling ruin, as it was never restored after the destructive fire of 1748, around it cluster many romantic and fascinating stories.

One of the most celebrated grand masters of the Brethren of the Sword was Walter von Plettenberg, who rose to power during the closing years of the fifteenth century and was finally recognized as a prince of the empire by the Emperor Charles V in 1527. Plettenberg also built the castle of Riga (1494-1515), which has fared better than the Wenden stronghold, for it is still used as the seat of the Russian authorities (or rather, was used up to the time of Riga's fall a few weeks ago).

The most tragic chapter in the history of Wenden was enacted in 1577 when the members of the garrison of the castle, besieged by the forces of the implacable Ivan the Terrible, blew themselves up rather than fall into the hands of the czar. The castle was soon repaired, however, and a short time thereafter was the residence of Patricius Nidecki, appointed bishop of Wenden in 1583 by Stephen Bathory, king of Poland.

MORE TAR AND FEATHERS.

W. M. Hicks, Socialist Lecturer, "Gets His" From Oklahoma Mobs.

ELK CITY, Okla., April 11.—William Madison Hicks, ex-minister and Socialist lecturer, now under Federal indictment for promoting the "World Peace League," was taken from the police by a mob of 100 citizens and given a coating of tar and feathers. Hicks was ordered to leave the county.

The ex-minister had been jailed for alleged propaganda against Liberty Bonds.

NOISES IN EARS, TWITCHING NERVES

Told of the Exhausted Condition of the Nerves—Indigestion and Weak Heart Action Were Other Symptoms.

KINGSTON, Ont., March 22.—There are few people in this city who are not acquainted with the exceptional restorative power of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Reports have come from almost every street of the Limestone City telling of cures effected by this treatment, and the druggists have been surprised at the enormous demand for this great nerve restorative.

This is not to be wondered at when cure is effected in such extreme and complicated cases as the one described in this letter

Mrs. M. A. Couling, 61 Stanley street, Kingston, Ont., writes:

"For a number of years I suffered from a rundown condition of the system, due to overwork. I could not sleep and was restless and worried. I had pains through my back, buzzing in the ears and twitching of my nerves and muscles. I had indigestion and my appetite became poor. I would get drowsy after eating and frequently suffered from great weakness. My circulation was poor, my hands and feet always cold and my heart action weak. I consulted doctors, but they could do nothing for me. Whilst in this condition I decided upon a trial of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. After taking eight boxes of this medicine I am relieved of all the symptoms from which I suffered before, and in general I feel like a new woman. I used to be very constipated so I took Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills in connection with the Nerve Food, and am completely cured of that trouble, too."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50c. a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.75, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

THE LUMBER INDUSTRY

HOW WAR CONDITIONS HAVE AFFECTED THE DEMAND.

The Trade In Ontario Picked Up In the Past Two Years, But Quebec's Output Was Below Par — From the Pacific Coast Come Reports of Increased Activity.

FOR over two years after the outbreak of the war the lumber trade of Ontario remained below normal, but considerable activity then developed with the increasing demand for military and manufacturing purposes, prices advanced and a steady improvement set in which has continued throughout the greater part of the past season. As predicted in 1916 the scarcity of labor, high wages and the greatly increased cost of supplies tended to curtail the cut of logs, with the result that the output in the Georgian Bay district was much reduced in 1919. The first six months of the year were active ones, with a strong demand from the United States as well as from the home trade, principally for munition and other purposes, with the result that dealers in western Ontario are carrying over lighter stocks than in the previous year.

The cut of lumber last year in the Province of Quebec was from 30 per cent. to 40 per cent. smaller than that of 1916. Unfavorable logging conditions last winter, together with the great scarcity of labor, contributed to the decrease. Another reason is that a number of firms which ordinarily manufacture both lumber and pulpwood have been converting all their spruce logs into pulpwood. The position of the lumber industry at the present time is unsatisfactory as far as the manufacturer is concerned, owing principally, to labor conditions and to the excessively high cost of everything used by the lumberman. The effect will be to curtail logging operations again this winter and to reduce the output of lumber for 1918. The export trade to Great Britain has been very light owing to the lack of tonnage. There has been a good demand for Canadian lumber in the United States, but shipments to that country have been hindered by the car shortage. The market in Canada for manufactured lumber has been quiet on account of the inactivity in building operations and the temporary falling off in the demand for munition boxes. The demand for lumber, however, has been better than in 1916 and prices have ranged from 20 per cent. to 30 per cent. higher.

There were no forest fires of consequence during last year in the Maritime Provinces. The lumber cut in these provinces in 1916-17 was estimated at 700,000,000 feet, or about 25 per cent. below the average of the past six or seven years. The cost of production was 40 per cent. greater than the average for the same period, nevertheless the manufacturers who were able to make deliveries have secured a fair margin of profit. In 1913, the year before the war spruce deals alongside a vessel in a Maritime Province port cost about $12 per thousand and were sold for about $16. Last year the cost was $15 and the selling price $21. The manufacturing cost of boards and scantling is, as a rule, about 10 per cent. more than that of deals, and the selling price is generally about $2.50 per thousand feet less, except in the case of good pine boards. The latter are worth at the time of writing about $23 per thousand loaded on cars for export to the United States. It was impossible this year to ship deals to England on private account, excepting in small odd steamer lots, and early in the season by sailing vessels.

After agriculture, the only two important industries, as yet, in the prairie provinces are lumbering and coal mining, and while their proportions in relation to agriculture are insignificant, spruce lumbering contributes appreciably to the prosperity of the northern districts of all three provinces.

With the cessation of building operations after the commencement of the war, the lumbering industry suffered a severe set-back lasting for about two years, but with good crops and high prices for agricultural products a strong demand set in for lumber for farm uses, and during the past two years the sawmills and lumber yards have experienced a marked return of prosperity. The cut for 1916-17, which would probably show some increase over the preceding seasons, is not yet ascertainable. The figures for the previous year are as follows:

	Feet.
1912-13 ..	231,223,000	$3,463,843
1913-14 ..	146,571,000	2,093,578
1914-15 ..	123,196,000	1,674,270
1915-16 ..	160,336,000	2,304,226

In the British Columbia lumber industry the improvement reported over 1916 was more than maintained, and although the demand has now slackened considerably, the feeling is distinctly encouraging. The output of the coast mills was about normal as compared with the 50 per cent. cut of the previous year, and the selling price of common lumber has been about $5.25 over the price prevailing in 1916. The production of the year is estimated at 1,250,000,000 feet, an increase of 25 per cent. over 1916. The consumption has been almost exclusively either local or for export eastward. As only the very best quality of spruce can be utilized for the manufacture of aeroplanes, it is feared that the large quantity found unfit for this purpose will glut the market. Fortunately stocks on hand are about the same now as in 1916, when they were the lowest for several years. The Queen Charlotte Islands, where there are large blocks of standing spruce, are coming into the field as producers, and several new mills are being erected.

WILL RESTORE VIMY.

Village In France "Adopted" By the Citizens of Toronto.

The privilege of rebuilding the ruined village of Vimy has been accorded the people of Toronto by the Government of France, advice to this effect having been received by the Toronto branch of the Secours National. The selection of Vimy for Toronto restoration is peculiarly appropriate, the nearby ridge having been made historic by the gallantry of Canadian soldiery.

During the past year or more the policy has been adopted by exhausted France of allowing to certain American and Canadian cities the rehabilitation of particular devastated towns and villages, Cleveland, Detroit, St. Louis and sundry other United States cities having already claimed the privilege of thus assisting in the upbuilding of a new France.

Toronto has become godmother to the village of Vimy, and when the time for restoration comes will do what is possible to give the villagers a fresh start in the old home. In Vimy, as in many another village along the western front, the duty of the mothering city will be to recreate instead of to restore. Of Vimy there is nothing left but a confused pile of shattered brick and mortar, interspersed with fragments of roof timbers and the wreckage of household furniture. When the Germans swept over northern France early in September, 1914, Vimy was hastily evacuated. It was an agricultural rather than a mining village, the nearest coal pits being some distance to the east across the plain which stretches from the Vimy Ridge toward Avion and Mericourt.

The main road from Arras to Lens crosses the summit of the ridge just above Vimy, and runs through a detached part of the village known as Petit Vimy. The railway also passed northeastward from Arras to Lens, and Vimy had rather an important station, which has been hammered by the guns into a tangled mass of steel supports and sheet iron roofing. The land around Vimy was fertile, and the growing of sugar beets was a profitable occupation. The village itself stood upon a round-topped knoll, with a stretch of low-lying land extending to the west between it and the famous Ridge to which it gave its name.

Before the battle of Vimy the Germans had many batteries of heavy artillery in the neighborhood of the village and of the adjacent Farbus Wood. After they were driven from the ridge across the plain toward Avion and Mericourt they naturally supposed that the Canadian guns also would seek shelter behind the knoll on which Vimy stood and in the Farbus Wood. For months the enemy shelled Vimy and the Wood with their "heavies." The earth and the debris of the houses were churned up continually, and in the deeper shell holes the storm water formerly carried away by a willow-bordered brook accumulated after the course of the brook had been deflected by a chance shot.

The position of Vimy and the fertility of the soil around it make its restoration certain. The monuments to Canadian valor now rising at various points on the crest of the ridge where the German lines were broken on that fateful April day will prepare the traveller of the future who climbs the summit and descends into the village for the finest memorial of all—the new Vimy, with its cottage homes grouped around the little central square now littered with the hideous wreckage of war. Children will again play in the square unafraid of bomb or shell, and read the inscription on the walls of "The Mairie": "From Toronto to Vimy, in token of the days when Canadian troops fought here for enduring peace."

Unearths Corn-Grinding Quern.

An interesting relic of early Scotland was unearthed in Cramond recently. A grave digger was preparing for a burial, when he dug up, at a depth of about five feet, the neat half of the upper stone of a primitive corn-grinding quern, measuring 18 inches in diameter, and showing half of the central hole. Search without success was made for the other fragments.

WOULD LIE AWAKE THE ENTIRE NIGHT

Worried So Over Condition Nearly Cried Eyes Out, She Says

"After I had taken Tanlac a while my husband was so delighted with the way I had improved that he tried it too, and now we are both telling all our friends what a wonderful medicine it is," recently said Mrs. Louisa Buck, of 5 Gray avenue, Mt. Dennis.

"For the past four or five years," continued Mrs. Buck, "I had been greatly worried over my rundown nervous condition. I had so little appetite that I couldn't relish a thing I forced down. My nerves were always on edge and the least little thing would excite me so I felt like I was going to faint. I could not rest well at night and many a time I would lie awake all night long without getting a wink of sleep. My skin was sallow and unhealthy looking and I felt off till my clothes wouldn't begin to fit me. I had no life nor strength to do a thing and felt so miserable at times that I would almost cry my eyes out.

"One day my husband was telling a friend of his about my case and his friend said, 'You get her a bottle of Tanlac and it'll fix her up all right.' 'Well, he got it for me, but I had taken so much medicine without getting any better that I had little faith in it. I took four bottles, however, and my appetite has grown so I enjoy everything I eat. My nerves have improved wonderfully. That tired, worn-out feeling is entirely gone and I am strong enough now to do all my own housework. Tanlac has made a different woman of me and my friends say I look better, and I am sure I feel better than I have in years."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

SOME KINDS OF STIMULANTS

Alcohol and Wine Favored by Europeans, Poppy by Chinese, Bhang by the Indians.

When the European is weary he calls for alcohol to revive him; when he is joyful he takes wine, that he may have more joy. In like manner the Chinese woos his "white lady," the poppy flower, the Indian chews bhang, the West African seeks surcease in kola, observes a correspondent in National Geographical Magazine.

Khat is more to the Yemen Arab than any of these to its devotees. It is no narcotic, wooing sleep, but a stimulant, like alcohol. Unlike alcohol, it conceals no demon, but a fairy. The khat eater will tell you that when he follows this fairy it takes him into regions overlooking paradise. He calls the plant the "flower of paradise."

How and when khat came into the Yemen is not certain. Botanists say that it was brought over from Harrar, in Abyssinia, many centuries ago. There is a tradition among the wise men of the East that the sheik Ibrahim Abou Zarbayn introduced it into Hodeidah from Ethiopia about 1430. But ask any Yemen Arab and he will tell you "It has been always. Allah gave it to us in the beginning, to make us forget labor and pain."

Contrary to the general opinion held by those who pretend to know anything about it at all, khat is never used as a beverage in the Yemen, but the fresh leaves are invariably chewed. The youngest leaves are the best. They have a sweetish, slightly astringent taste, not unpleasant to the European palate, but certainly not alluring. When brewed, they lose most of their strength and the flavor of the decoction is much like that of those grapevine "cigarettes" which most of us enjoyed (?) in boyhood days. The old leaves are tough and ought to tan a leathern tongue.

Just what is the exact toxic effect of khat on the human system has never yet been ascertained. It is certainly a stimulant with a lively and nearly immediate effect upon the brain and nerve cells; the gloomiest man becomes cheerful under its influence, the most enervated active. Withal, I have been unable to learn of a single case of immediate or harmful reaction such as invariably follows the use of other stimulants.

On the Still Hunt.

Many persons have commented on the manner in which Canadians keep on the still hunt after men who desire to get all the praise that comes from wearing a uniform without ever going into action. These men have not been often denounced by speakers or writers, but they are frequently checkmated whenever they attempt to claim honors that should be given to men who have actually done some fighting. An example of how this still hunt is carried on can be furnished in the case of a major, once a very high-handed recruiter, who went as far as England, and then returned to Canada when the privates of his regiment were drafted to France. He got appointed to a safe job of exhibiting pictures, with some men who have served and been wounded under him. Recently he visited Philadelphia, where he gave an interview which conveyed the impression when printed in the Philadelphia Ledger that he had seen active service. Within a week the Philadelphia Ledger received a number of letters from Canada giving the facts about the major's military career. Later he visited Baltimore, and the Baltimore Sun published an article telling how the officer had escaped without a scratch during the fifteen months' active service, though thousands of his comrades fell about him. The Toronto Evening Telegram punctured the article by publishing it with a sarcastic introduction. That is the quiet but effective manner in which Canadians do these things.

THE MOTOR SHOW PROMISES BIG RESULTS

Every Available Inch of Space in the Armouries Taken by Exhibitors

That this year's motor show under the auspices of the Red Cross will eclipse any previous effort of a similar nature is predicted, as the interest by exhibitors, the sale of advance tickets, the help that is being given to provide entertainment in the Armouries for the vast crowds that will attend, all go to show that the motor show inaugurated last year will be much bigger this and succeeding years.

The fashion show, which is an attraction by the young ladies of the Peter Robinson Chapter I. O. D. E., will be run twice each evening. The first show from eight to nine o'clock and the second from 9 to 10 o'clock.

An excellent musical programme has been arranged, including a 30-piece orchestra, under the direction of Prof. Gliddon. The best soloists in the city will give their services free from a stage in the centre of the main floor.

The Parade.

The motor parade on Tuesday will be an extravagant affair. All the automobiles, big or little, old or new, trucks, delivery cars, and bicycles will be there.

The Y.M.C.A. circus tank and almost everything that runs by power, headed by Fire Chief Grange and the full Fire Department.

Everything is moving fine for the show, and if anybody asks you to get a strip of 5 tickets for a dollar just get them—remember the cause.

STRATFORD MAY RAISE FUND BY TAXATION.

STRATFORD, April 10.—At a meeting of the special committee appointed from the public meeting to consider Stratford's contribution for patriotic purposes this year it was decided to recommend to Thursday night's meeting that $50,000 be raised for the Patriotic Fund by taxation but that all subsequent patriotic grants this year be raised by voluntary subscription. The committee was unanimous in their recommendation. It is believed that the total will reach about $100,000.

Heart Beat So Fast
Could Not Sleep
HAD TO SIT UP IN BED

Heart trouble has of late years become very prevalent. Sometimes a pain catches you in the region of the heart, now and then your heart skips beats, palpitates, throbs, or beats with such rapidity and violence you think it will burst. You have weak and dizzy spells, are nervous, irritable and depressed, and if you attempt to walk upstairs or any distance you get all out of breath.

There is no other remedy will do you so much good, restore your heart to a natural condition, build up your strength and give you back vigor and vitality as Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. A. Russell, Niagara Falls, Ont., writes: "At nights I could not sleep, and had to sit up in bed, my heart would beast so fast.

"When I went to walk very far I would get all out of breath, and would have to sit down and rest before I could go any further. I was advised to get Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and before I had used two boxes I could sleep and walk as far as I liked without any trouble."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

THE EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

The Patterns Are Guaranteed to Give Excellent Satisfaction

LADY'S ONE PIECE COMBINATION.

This combination is so simple that it requires very little explanation, for the diagram shows just how it is made. It is all in one piece, with perfectly straight sides, and there is a sort of deep notch at each side which forms the opening for the knees when the combination is sewed up. There is a straight band top, which may be embroidered or finished with a wide beading run with ribbon. The shoulder straps also are of ribbon. The simplicity of this garment makes it a splendid model for crepe de Chine, washable satin or glove silk.

The lady's one piece combination pattern No. 8754 is cut in three sizes—36, 40 and 44 inches bust measure. As on the figure, the 36 inch size requires 1¾ yards 27 inch or 1⅝ yards 36 or 40 inch material, with 1¼ yards beading and 2¾ yards ribbon. Price 10 cents.

This Pattern Can Be Obtained From the Examiner Office on Payment of 15 Cents.

OUR DALY SHORT STORY

Like Cures Like

By OSCAR COX

Everybody always said I was contrary, and I suppose that's my nature.

There's a sayen among sartin doctors that "like cures like;" they have a Latin lingo about it, but that I don't know, never haven had much larnen. Any way I've got a story about myself that I reckon shows what I mean. I'm goen to tell it.

One day I harnessed up the mar' to go over to Bunkerville to do some traden. While I was drivin' along the road I come to a leetle house that had been vacant a long while and I noticed curtains in the winders and a sign out: Matrimonial Agency.

Now, I hadn't any notion o' marryen it all; I always thought this sentimental love business was kinder ridiculous, and what a man wants some woman to boss him fer I couldn't see. But if I hain't got no romance I got a hull lot o' curiosity. I just thort I'd go into the house and see how the matrimonial agent hamboozled people to harness up for a lifelong fight.

Wall, I got out o' the wagon, tied the mar' to a post before the door, and rang the bell. A good-looken young woman let me in, and when I told her that I wanted to see what she could do for a lone bachelor she invited me into a cozy room and set a cheer before me. She told me that she had several young wimen on her list that wanted husbands and she would introduce me. I axed her if she could recommend 'em to make good wives.

"Recommend nothen," she said, "if people want to tie theirselves up with a knot that only a hull lot o' lawyers' expenses can untie it's no business o' mine. I help 'em to git into matrimony, but I don't pursuade 'em to go thar."

"I like your honesty," I said, "and I must confess I like your idee. I just come in here out o' curiosity. I don't believe in matrimony any more 'n you do. If it warn't fer the fol de rol connected with it there wouldn't be so much of it as ther is. This settin' alongside a gal in a rose garden, or by a fire light holden hands and the feller tellen her she's an angel is all compounded rot. They call the first month o' married life the honeymoon. That's before the fighten commences. It's like bracen up soldiers for war. They dress 'em up in uniforms and have a band to play inspirin' music to make 'em forgit they're to be killed. That's what they're fer and nothin' else."

"Yes," said the agent, "when a gal is about to be married they dress her up in a lot o' finery, and a lace veil 'n put a bokay in her hands and she thinks she is an angel sure enough. But she finds out that the feller that's been talken about bein' her slave is maken a slave o' her."

"Do you know," I answered to this, "that in all my life I never met so sensible a woman? You have my idee exactly. I wonder where you got it? But I can't see how you do any business if you talk to your clients as you do to me."

Why, it doesn't affect 'em a bit. If a man or a woman is bent on getten married a stone wall won't stop 'em, you might as well try to pull up a runaway horse with a bit made out of a spear o' grass. But there's no use a talken about matrimony to a feller that don't want to git married. I reckon I'll go down to the cellar and bring up some cider. We kin set by the fire and talk about sompen sensible."

She brought up the cider and tuk some cake out of the cupboard and we set down side by side before the fire and eat and drunk.

"Pon my word," I says, "it's mighty comfortable setten beside a sensable woman like you; ef I had met sich a person before this I'd a passed lots o' time companiable instead o' mopen alone."

"And if I'd met a man like you mebbe I'd a made a sensable matter-o'-fact match without any gewgaws, and wouldn't been in a business thet I don't approve of. We could a formed a partnership, for some regular trade."

"Sartin," I said, "we could a done that very thing."

The firelight was kind o' genial and the young woman's face lighted up by it, was purty as a newly painted plow just out o' the store. Somehow sompen got into my arm—the one next to her—to rest itself on the back o' her cheer. It hadn't been there very long before it slid down all by itself, without my doing anything about it, and rested agin her shoulder. She didn't say nothin', and what did the consarned arm do but draw her to me. She turned her face toward me and her lips looked so red and tempten that I put mine agin 'em to see what they felt like."

Well, we sat there a long while talken—we didn't say nothin' more about matrimony—and when I got up to go home she said seen that I was the first sensable man she'd ever met she'd like me to stop gain when I was passen.

Somehow after that I drove nearly every day to Bunkerville; that is I started for Bunkerville, but I never could git by the matrimonial agency; and when I come home the house looked like there'd been a funeral there. One day there was a wedden at the agency between me and the agent, and you bet it wa'n't no cheap affair. There was a satin wedden dress for the bride, wedden presents, flowers and all the monkey shines of a first-class tieun.

The Rivals

By ELMER MARSH

Jim Farleigh received permission from his father to give a house party during the Christmas holidays at their country place, and I, who was very chummy with Jim, was of course invited. They called the place Vieudeleau. There was everything there to make life enjoyable; a ballroom, a billiard room, a swimming tank and a gymnasium.

We were a young party, the men's ages averaging twenty-two, the girls' twenty. There was a belle among the girls, Eva Trowbridge. The principal reason for her being a belle was because of her very lovely disposition. It was natural for her to be considerate to everyone. This included me, but since her kind of treatment of me was the same as the others, I didn't put it down for a preference, though I would have been glad to think that I was the prime favorite.

Some of the other men didn't take my view in respect to themselves, and there were two guests who were madly in love with her. They were Jack Pierson and Ned Armstrong.

Jim Farleigh was fond of boxing, fencing and other athletic sports, and had reserved a corner of the gymnasium for the use of the gloves and the foils. One morning when I was in the gymnasium doing some stunts on the parallel bars, Pierson and Armstrong came in and walked straight to the reserved corner. They called to me as they passed and gave me to understand that they were going to fence, and wished me to act as umpire. I noticed that each had a foil under his arm which he stood in a convenient place against the wall.

I took a seat where I could watch the fencing. They took off their coats and vests, and each taking a foil from the rack, put themselves in position for the fray. I wondered why they had brought in foils and used others. But this was a passing thought with me. Before beginning to fight Jack Pierson examined the button on the end of his foil, and coming to me asked me if I didn't think it might break off if tried too severely. I looked at it, and told him it was perfectly safe. Ned Armstrong did the same, and I also approved his foil.

They fenced for a while, but it didn't seem to me that either was doing his best work. Finally Jack proposed to rest for a while and smoke a cigarette. Neither one of us had any cigarettes, but my case was in my coat pocket at the other end of the gymnasium. I went for it and, returning, each one of us took a cigarette and lighted it. The fencers took only a few puffs, when they threw theirs away and again placed themselves on guard.

While previously they had fenced languidly, now every nerve, every muscle, was at a tension. They could not have been more alert if they had been fighting for their lives.

The two men were quite evenly matched, and I should have enjoyed the contest had it not been that I did not like the spirit with which they were fencing. Instead of friendly contest, it seemed a serious one. Their faces were red and their eyes gleaming.

Finally I arose from my seat and put myself between them. So great was their antagonism that I was in some danger of being punched by their foils. Finally I succeeded in stopping them, and they lowered their weapons.

"If you fellows can't fence in a friendly way," I said, "you had better stop. If one of you should hurt the other, it would be poor return for Jim Farleigh's hospitality."

Instinctively I looked at the top of Jack's foil, and could not see the button. I seized the foil and held it near enough to observe the tip. There was no button on it. It was sharp as a bayonet. I took up Ned's foil, and it was the same.

"What does this mean?" I asked angrily.

Neither answered.

"You men," I continued, "have disgraced yourselves in fighting on the premises of your host. And you have roped me into your igneminious conduct. You intended if either was hurt to call on me to prove that an accident occurred through the breaking of a foil. You sent me for cigarettes, and while my back was turned you took up these foils that you had brought with you, and then began to fight in earnest. Give them to me."

I took the weapons, and as I did so heard steps behind me. Turning, I saw Eva Trowbridge and another of the girl guests.

"I just got wind of the affair," she said, "and that it was about me. I desire to say to you, Mr. Peterson and Mr. Armstrong, that I concur with the words spoken by your umpire. If you don't hasten to take your departure from this place at once, I will go myself."

Then, turning to me, she said feelingly: "I shall never forget the favor you have done me in stopping this disgraceful, this stupid affair."

She put her hand on my arm and walked with me out of the room.

The two men who had offended her by fighting for her made excuses and left immediately. I suggested to her and to her friend to say nothing of the matter, and I think it got no further.

From that moment I received every encouragement from Miss Trowbridge and was overjoyed to take advantage of it. She is now my wife.

Responsibility and the Will.

Responsibility strengthens the will. Many a weak man when put into a position of responsibility has made good and astonished his associates by the exhibition of qualities that they never imagined he possessed, and that probably would have lain dormant had not responsibility brought them to the surface. There is no great mystery about this. A position of responsibility forces a man to make quick decisions, and this training naturally strengthens the will. There is still another reason why responsibility develops a man's will. If an individual is holding down a position of trust he is naturally looked up to by his subordinates. This puts him on his mettle, and he uses all his resources in the determination to prove worthy of that trust. Responsibility has also been known to cure men of the drink habit for the same reason.—Dr. James Walsh in American Magazine.

Telephone Economy

Scarcity of Material

MATERIALS of many different kinds enter into the make-up of the modern telephone plant.

¶ Iron, steel, tin, copper, nickle, aluminum, lead, platinum, brass, asbestos, mica, carbon, rubber, silk, cotton, woods of many kinds, dyestuffs, chemicals—these are but a few of the basic elements in a telephone system, gathered from nearly every country on the globe.

¶ The demands of the war have caused an acute shortage in telephone material. Not only is it abnormally expensive; some of it connot be had at any price.

¶ We ask your help in conserving the supply of telephone material. We suggest care in the handling of the instrument and apparatus on your premises, so as to avoid costly repairs.

¶ All orders for the installation of telephone equipment not absolutely necessary should be postponed until present conditions are past.

¶ In this way you will be putting into practice an effective war-time economy and helping us to meet the more urgent needs of the Country's business.

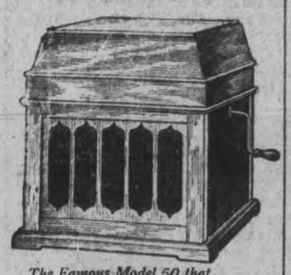
ANOTHER KNOCKOUT!



The Famous Model 50 that Defeated the Talking Machines

Mr. Edison's

New Diamond Amberola

Again Demonstrates Its Wonderful Tone Qualities

READ THE FACTS

In the ballroom of the Hotel McAlpin 650 Phonograph Experts gathered and heard a Tone Comparison between an $80 Edison Diamond Amberola and a well-known "Talking Machine" that sells at $171. The comparison was conducted behind a curtain, so that no one in the audience knew which machine was playing. In this way an absolutely unbiased opinion was procured. Three comparisons were made on each instrument. At the end a vote was taken. Those present voted unanimously in favour of the New Edison Diamond Amberola.

THE AMBEROLA won on sheer merit. These are tests that prove; real comparisons conducted behind a curtain; tests in which the advertising writer plays no part, and tests which are judged by real people. You owe it to yourself to hear this latest product of Mr. Edison's genius

MADE IN THREE MODELS

Model 30—$48.00
Model 30 is the best phonograph on the market to-day at anything like the price. Has genuine Diamond Stylus Reproducer (no needles to change). Cabinet comes in Golden Oak only.

Model 50—$80.00
Model 50 is the one used in the comparison tests. Cabinet comes finished in Mahogany, Golden Oak and Fumed Oak. Has genuine Stylus Reproducer. (no needles to change).

Model 75—$113.00
Model 75 in a beautiful full length cabinet, finished in Mahogany, Fumed Oak or Golden Oak. Has record space to hold 84 Blue Amberol Records. Has genuine Diamond Stylus Reproducer.

All these models play Mr. Edison's Blue Amberola Records, the longest and smoothest running records made. Records will play over 3,000 times without showing any sign of wear. All the great Edison artists and all the latest popular music are on the Blue Amberol.

Sunday School Lesson Questions

April 14, 1918.

Jesus requires confession and loyalty. Mark 8:1-9:1.

Golden Text: If any man would come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me. Mark 8:34.

1. Verses 1-4. Notwithstanding that God does not now supply our needs miraculously, he does supply them surely; why then may we not trust him, without anxiety for the future?

2. Verse 5. What is the proof that our ability, our opportunity, and our resources are ample for our full duty?

3. Verses 6-10. What are the evils of waste, and the gain of economy?

4. Verse 11. Why is it impossible to learn spiritual truth when in an antagonistic frame of mind?

5. Verses 12, 13. What reasons are there to believe that if Jesus had performed ever so wonderful a "sign," it would have made any difference in their attitude to him?

6. Why did not the wonderful "signs" which Jesus had already performed satisfy them?

7. Verse 14. Is it ever wrong to forget, and if so, under what circumstances?

8. Verses 15, 16. As Jesus did not mean to reprove them for not taking bread, whether they were blameworthy or not, why did their consciences accuse them of neglect?

9. Why ought all who would be good, to beware of phasisaical hypocrisy, ostentation, pride, placing the letter before the spirit, and of Herodian superstition?

10. Verses 17, 18. What part does a clear conscience, an unselfish spirit and a tender heart play, in understanding the ways of God?

11. Verses 19-21. How many times in your life have you eaten all the food you could procure, and were yet hungry, and how many times have you had plenty of food left after every meal? Then why do you worry?

12. Verses 22-26. What analogy is there between this blind man's experience and when our spiritual eyes were first opened? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

13. Verse 27. Why did Jesus want to know who the people said he was?

14. Verse 28. Why did Jesus not publicly declare himself as the Christ, and why did he refuse to let them make him king? (See John 6: 15.)

15. Verse 29. How did Peter know that Jesus was the Christ? (See Matt. 16:15-17.)

16. There is belief and belief, but what is the only way to reach the supreme conviction that Jesus is the Christ? (See I Cor. 12:33.)

17. Verse 30. Why, seeing Jesus came to earth as the Christ, did he forbid them to make that fact known?

18. Verse 31. Why should you say or not, that it was God's purpose originally that the Jews should reject and crucify Jesus?

19. Verses 32, 33. If Jesus at this time had adopted Peter's view, what would have led him to do it?

20. Verses 34, 35. What is the nature of the self-denial, and the suffering which all true Christians must endure?

21. Verses 36-38. If a millionaire dies without salvation, and a poor man dies trusting in Christ what will be the difference in their wealth in eternity?

22. Chap. 9:1. How did some of those standing there, witness "the kingdom of God come with power"?

GERMAN CIGARS "RANK."

Mixture of Ersatz Weeds Called "Infamia Scandalosa."

AMSTERDAM.—Weird and wonderful are the mixtures that pass as tobacco in Germany now that the Government has decreed that anything is tobacco that contains not less than 5 per cent. of that weed. The rest may be dried leaves of beech, cherry, chicory, hops, beetroot, sorrel, potato, rhubarb, or coltsfoot.

One German writer says that the result is "a rank offence, it smells to heaven." Cigars made from this "tobacco" go by the appropriate popular name of "Infamia Scandalosa."

Sir Joseph Flavelle Denies Attempt Is Being Made to Take Orders For Wooden Ships From Quebec

"OPEN TO ALL"

Special to the Examiner:

"OTTAWA, April 12.—To the contention of "Le Canada" of Montreal, that Sir Joseph Wesley Flavelle, head of the Imperial Munitions Board, has informed Quebec that that province will get no more orders for wooden ships, and intimating that the statement of Sir Joseph is evidence that "they evidently wish to punish Quebec," Sir Joseph this morning declared that the Imperial Munitions Board had for some time past ceased giving orders for ships anywhere in Canada; that existing orders would be completed; and that in future the Government of Canada would take over the whole shipbuilding programme of the Dominion. "The Government," he said, "is now assuming all responsibility." Enquiry at the Marine Department elicited the information that the Government is not building wooden ships, but that there is nothing to prevent anyone who desires to build them from doing so." As a matter of fact," it was stated, "a great many are being built, but the Government is not building them."

Enjoyable At Home By Court Chemong

A social evening was held by Court Chemong, No. 530, I. O. F., in the W.O.W. Hall last night. There was a large attendance of the members and their friends. Brother G. Metcalfe, Chief Ranger, presided as chairman, and on the platform were Brothers W. Madill, G. W. Powell, Dr. Carmichael, A. Allison, W. G. McKee, J. W. Buyers, S. B. Lynde, D.S.C.R., and his son, J. D. Lynde, of Toronto, and Brother Reid, of Ottawa, most of whom gave brief addresses.

The programme was as follows:

Piano and banjo selection by Mrs. Poole and Mr. Parkins.
Vocal solo—Mrs. Wagstaffe.
Vocal solo—Miss Allen.
Violin solo—Master Swartz.
Recitation—Max Peters.
Musical trio—Mrs. Poole and Messrs. Parkins.
Comic song—Mr. C. Coleman.

Brother J. A. Freeman and his daughter supplied violin and piano music throughout the evening, and Mrs. Poole acted very acceptably as accompanist to the singers.

The progressive euchre prizes were won by Brother J. D. Lynde, first, and Mr. Jos. Lowes, second; and the ladies' prizes were won by Miss McCracken, first, and Mrs. I. Kennedy, second.

Mrs. A. Bradshaw supervised the serving of the refreshments.

The committee in charge of the "At Home" were: Brothers J. W. Buyers, R. H. Howden, O. E. Grose, Geo. Metcalfe, and Companions Mrs. A. Bradshaw and Miss Eva Rhodehouse, to whom great credit is due for the excellent arrangements.

A LEAGUE OF NATIONS

Former President Taft Makes a Stirring Speech

ALBANY, N.Y., April 12.—The New York Legislature, after listening to a stirring war speech by former President Wm. T. Taft, to-day unanimously and enthusiastically adopted a resolution declaring that the State "favours the entrance of the United States after the war, into a league of nations to safeguard the peace that must be won by the joint military forces of the allied nations." Taft said that when the United States had five million men in France the victory was won.

Offensive Opens Up in Palestine

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, April 12.— Turkish and German forces in Palestine on Wednesday opened an offensive, attacking the British front near the coast, the War Office announces.

British Centre Has Been Pushed Back Seven Miles In The Flanders Battle

Merville Has Been Captured by the Germans—Severe Fighting Reported in Official Despatches.

COUNTER ATTACKS

The British centre in the Flanders battle has been pushed back seven miles from the original line along the Lawe River, it is shown by Haig's official statement to-day.

The communique reported "severe, continuous fighting" in the neighbourhood of Merville and Neuf-Berquen last night. Merville is on the north bank of the Lys, three miles due west of Estaires and seven miles west of the Lawe, along which the line ran at the beginning of the battle. Neuf-Berquin is a mile and a half east of Merville.

Merville, according to Haig, was captured by the enemy last night.

Neuve-Eglise, where the British fell back to new positions, is nearly three miles west and north of Ploegsteert. This retirement increases the salient immediately south of Ypres.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

LONDON, April 12.— (British Official.)—Last night the Germans captured Merville. Heavy fighting is continuing in the neighbourhood of Merville and Neuf Berquin. On the remainder of the northern battle front there is little change. North of Festubert the British regained ground by counter attacks. On a front between Loisne and Lawe Rivers German attacks were repulsed.

British aviators yesterday dropped more than a ton of bombs on the railway station at Luxemburg.

PARIS, April 12.—(Official.)—Heavy artillery fighting occurred last night in the vicinity of Hangarden Sarterre, on the front north of Montdidier. French patrols developed activity in the sector between Noyon and Canny Surmatz. The French took a number of prisoners. French successfully raided German lines near Chernizy, north of Ailette and west of Butte Demesnil, bringing back prisoners.

BERLIN OFFICIAL.

BERLIN, April 12.—German General Headquarters announced last night that the fighting yesterday along the Somme and the Oise was limited to artillery duels and minor infantry operations.

AUSTRIAN OFFICIAL.

VIENNA, April 12.—Austrian Headquarters last night reported "successful operations by thrusting troops west of Lake Garda and in the valley of the Brenta.

Submarine Will Be Defeated

England's Official Message of Confidence Contains a Cheering Note —"The Allies Can Win"

HEAVY ATTACKS

Special to the Examiner:

CHICAGO, April 12.—England's official message of confidence in America, delivered by Lord Reading, British Ambassador, was in the hands of delegates to the Chamber of Commerce of the United States to-day.

"Fighting side by side, the Allies can win," the Ambassador assured a cheering throng.

He predicted the eventual defeat of the submarine.

"THEY WILL NOT WIN."

"During the last few weeks," said Lord Reading, "we have met heavy concentrated attacks from the Germans, made possible through the withdrawal of their forces from the Russian-Roumanian front. It would be idle to pretend the attack did not succeed in some degree, but they have not attained their objective, and they will not."

Route For The Automobile Procession

The automobile procession which will be held on Tuesday, April 16th, will start at 7.50 p.m. The cars will line up along Simcoe street, down Water street to the Market Place, and to te corner of Charlotte and George streets. The course of the procession will be from the corner of Charlotte and George streets west on Charlotte to Park, north on Park to Hunter, east on Hunter to George, north on George to Antrim, east on Antrim to Water, north on Water to Smith, west on Smith to George, south on George to London, west on London to Aylmer, and south on Aylmer to McDonnel street. Here the procession will divide. The first part will proceed east on McDonnel to George, south on George to Murray, east on Murray to the Armouries. The second half will proceed south from McDonnel and Aylmer to Murray, east on Murray to George, where the cars will remain on the south side of Murray street, opposite the Armouries, for the formal opening of the Motor Show.

If you can decorate your car, and if not, come along and make this the largest and grandest parade ever seen in Peterboro, remembering that your efforts are all for Red Cross Work.

All cars should be lined up on Water street or Simcoe street not later than 7.50 that evening.

The Woman's Suffrage Bill

Members Object to Inclusion of War Time Election Act—Bill Before the House

MEASURE DENOUNCED

OTTAWA, Ont., April 12.—What is to be the fate of the War Times Elections Act. That is a question which is receiving the attention of the legislators in the corridors. The Act as passed by closure, last session, was to remain in force until demobolization had been completed so that it was undoubtedly intention of its framers that it should be used for another election. But there are men in the Government as at present constituted, who last session described the Act as a great iniquity and who spoke bitterly against it in the House. They include Hon. Messrs. Cavell, MacLean and others, while in addition all the present Union-Liberals from the West assailed it, fore and aft, and also voted against it.

Woman's Franchise.

Nevertheless the Woman's Franchise Act now before the House contains reference to the measure.

On Friday last during the debate on the Quebec riots, Hon. W. S. Fielding interjected a significant remark during the address of Colonel Arthurs of Parry Sound. Colonel Arthurs had declared that the people had by their vote at election "said that this Act which deprived these Germans of their vote was absolutely to their liking and was good common sense." To which Mr. Fielding retorted: "Members of the cabinet said quite the contrary, and yet the cabinet has been sustained. The War Time Elections Act was not the policy of the present Government, it was the policy of the preceeding Government, and many of the men who sit in the cabinet to-day denounced it, and quite properly so."

Mr. Fielding attends the Union caucus. Yesterday McMaster of Brome in the course of a speech defending the Woman's Suffrage Bill, asked that "all mention of War Time Election Act or its application be removed from the bill before the House."

ARE OPPOSED.

"I know that there are other gentlemen sitting opposite," he declared, "who think that the war time elections act is a blot on the fair name of Canada. We do not wish to see the conferring of the franchise on women tarnished by its restrictions." Mr. Johnston of Last Mountain, proved shortly after that there were, as Mr. McMaster had ventured, men on the Government side who disliked the war time elections act. "If I thought that by endorsing this bill," he aid, "I was in any way endorsing war time elecions act, my vote would certainly be registered against it. I hope when the time comes I will have the privilege of voting for this bill, and also of voting to wipe off the statute books the war time elections act."

The war tiem elections act will undoubtedly come up for discussion in the House at an early date.

Municipalities Will Have To Bear The Cost

Special to the Examiner:

TORONTO, April 12.—That various municipalities of the province will have to pay the salaries of the jail physicians for examining any prisoners whom they believe to be suffering from venereal disease is the opinion of the Provincial Board of Health. "For the work that they do in this connection, I think that the municipalities should bear the expense," said Dr. J. W. S. McCullough, Chief Officer of Health. The amount of money that physicians will get for this extra work that they will be called upon to do will likely be determined by regulations to be passed by the Provincial Board in accordance with the powers which they were given at the last session of the Legislature. Dr. Adam R. Wright, chairman of the Board, and Dr. McCullough held another meeting today with a number of leading doctors of the province to get their opinions as to what should be the best methods to adopt to stamp out the disease. It is likely, however, that regulations will not be drawn up for some time.

Proposed Plan Of Irish Parliament As Adopted At Recent Convention

Ulster and Customs Constituted Chief Difficulties of Convention —Re Representation.

"GUILLOTINE METHODS"

London, April 12.—The Irish convention laid a foundation for an agreement on the Irish question which is unprecedented in history. Sir Horace Plunkett, chairman of the convention, says in a letter accompanying the report of that body. The convention did not find it possible to overcome objections of the Ulster Unionists, says Sir Horace. A majority of the Nationalists, all the southern Unionists and five of the seven Labour representatives, agreed upon a scheme of self government, which is given in the conclusions reached by the majority, which he states, should be enacted into law.

The principle of representation for Ireland in the Imperial Parliament was insisted upon by the Southern Unionists, say Sir Horace, and the Nationalists conceded it. The Irish members of Parliament at London, under this plan, would be elected by an Irish Parliament. The difficulties of the convention, Sir Horace remarks, may be summed up in two words—Ulster and customs.

THE IRISH PARLIAMENT.

London, April 12.—The Irish convention report, submitted to-day, declared that body voted 54 to 17, that any conscription measure must be submitted to the Irish Parliament before it can be enforced.

The parliament, according to the report, will consist of a senate of 84 members and a House of Commons of 200. The Senate will be representative of commerce, industry, labor, county councils, churches, universities and the peerage.

The Nationalists agree to guarantee the Unionists 40 per cent. of the membership in the Commons

The resolution of ultimate control of the customs excise was postponed. In the meantime it will be controlled by the Imperial Parliament.

The plan for the proposed self-government of Ireland was adopted by the convention, 100 to 42, it was officially reported by that body to-day.

London, April 12. — The Ulster Unionist delegates said Plunkett remained in the convention only in the hope that some form of Home Rule would be proposed which might modify the determination of those whom they represented to have neither part nor lot in an Irish Parliament. The Nationalists strove to win them by concessions but they were unable to accept any scheme discussed and the only plan they presented was confined to the exclusion of their whole province.

AMENDMENT DEFEATED.

London, April 12.—An amendment to the Government's man-power bill, substituting 48 for 51 as the age limit, was defeated in the Commons last night by a vote of 262 to 152.

The Government agreed to permit the House to sit on Friday and Saturday thereby adding two days for the discussion of the bill. John Dillon said he understood motor cars, machine guns and tanks had been shipped and were sailing away from the front towards Ireland. He pleaded strongly against what he termed the government's "guillotine methods."

The Battle Is Dying Down

British Machine Guns Slaughtered Germans in Large Numbers--Further Battles Possible

PRISONERS TAKEN

Ten O'clock Despatch:

(United Press).

(By William Philip Simms).

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, April 12. — When I left the Armentieres area, fighting appeared to be dying down, following the British withdrawal.

Armentieres was threatened after the capure of Ploegsteert and the enemy advance toward Steenwerck. The evacuation was ordered early on Wednesday afternoon.

AIRPLANES PARTICIPATED.

Low-flying airplanes participated in the fighting throughout the day. The Germans crossed Lawe Creek, wading over near Lestrom (a mile south of the Lys), but their exploit was extremely costly; the British machine guns slaughtered them in great numbers. Although wave after wave came up, they were unable to advance beyond the village.

BATTLE LESS SEVERE.

The battle around Armentieres is less severe, and on a smaller scale than at Amiens. The former really is two independent, synchronized battles, pinching off Armentieres by an attack on a ten-mile front south and on a six-mile front, north of the city.

Some German prisoners taken at Vimy declared there were no fixed objectives after the initial ones. They were ordered to push on as far as they could.

Further battles similar to this are possible during the quiet on the main battle front.

Two O'clock Despatch:

(By William Philip Simms).

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, April 12.—The battle around Armentieres has been resumed with redoubled fury.

The enemy has passed the Loisne and Lawe streams, in the direction of St. Venant (seven and a half miles west of Estaires, on the Lys Canal), and are advancing beyond Steenwerck, toward Bailleul (seven miles north-west of Armentieres and three miles beyond Steenwerck).

Some ground has been lost in order to conform to the movement to the south.

This morning, east of Ploegsteert, there was a terrific German bombardment.

A German officer, taken prisoner, declared the Germans were ordered to capture Amiens to-day at all costs.

LETTERS FROM "CANADIAN OVERSEAS."

Several letters have been received from "Canadian Overseas," who is well known to the readers of the Examiner. The first one will appear in to-morrow's issue. The letters are interesting, and present many new phases on the war situation at the front. "Canadian Overseas" is now driving an ambulance in France, but has found time to send a few interesting letters to the Examiner.

ARTILLERY ACTIVITY

British Repulse Several Attacks With Severe Losses to the Enemy

"A GRIM RACE"

LONDON April 12.—German troops made a determined attack along the Messines Ridge and succeeded in gaining some ground, says a Reuter despatch, but the British once again drove them out by counter attack early this morning. The Germans are developing great artillery activity in the southern area, the despatch says.

The Bray-Corbie Road is being fiercely shelled, heralding, it is believed, further infantry attacks. Three attacks which the enemy advanced yesterday in great waves near Ville Chapelle, were repulsed with immense losses to the Germans. The ground was strewn with their corpses.

In the brilliant sunshine the battle is continuing with fierceness which has scarcely flagged since the beginning. The Germans are throwing in their reserves in the same prodigal manner as in the opening days of the offensive.

WAR OF ATTRITION.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, Thursday, April 12. — The battle has got beyond the consideration of a city lost or won here or there or the abandonment of five or ten miles of territory and has settled down to the grim race to determine whether German power is enough to make good the threat to annihilate the British army and force its capitulation. It is a cold proposition of which side can kill the most men in the next few weeks, and at the same time find more recruits to fill the depleted ranks.

POLICE MAY GIVE FIRST AID HELP

Chief Thompson remarked to the reporters yesterday morning that there is usually at the police station an officer or constable who is skilled in first aid and that their services should not be overlooked by citizens in their emergencies. He was recalling the death of Hazel Jean Ackford, the little two year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ackford, 52 George street, who died on Wednesday morning, half an hour after she had swallowed some pills. Precious moments were lost calling up doctors who were not at home. Finally Dr. Carmichael was reached, but the child was dead when he arrived at the Ackford home. The little girl had previously won Chief Thompson's heart, and her death struck home almost as a family loss. He observed that most of the police force are qualified in first aid, having taken St. John Ambulance course. Hence, when only first aid is required, a call to the police station will bring immediate response, and perhaps help save a life. Back of the suggestion is a desire to render whatever service the Police Department has to offer, and citizens are recommended to remember this proferred help in any extremity that requires immediate attention though it may be elementary.

FRIDAY, APRIL 12TH, 1918.

CANADA'S PART.

The figures given by Sir Robert Borden in the House on Wednesday enable the country to form some idea of the part Canada is taking in the struggle to make the world safe for democracy, and of the gigantic expenditure necessary to finance the Dominion's war efforts. To date the war has cost Canada $875,000,000, and for the present fiscal year the estimates for war purposes total $516,000,000, making a total to the end of the year of $1,391,853,804. Canada's national debt, which before the war was $336,000,000, will have increased by the end of the year to $1,600,000,000, a truly staggering sum.

The estimates for this year's operations are interesting. Of the $516,000,000 to be voted by parliament, it will require not less than $180,000,000 to pay 110,000 troops in Canada, 150,000 troops in England and 140,000 in France. The maintenance of the forces in France costs an average of 9 shillings and four pence per day, so that $115,000,000 will be needed for that purpose. Assigned pay for the troops overseas accounts for $54,000,000, while separation allowance requires an appropriation of $27,750,000. Rations for the forces in Canada at 50c. a day takes a total of $20,075,000, while in England the average is 38 1-2 cents a day, amounting to $21,000,000. Clothing will cost $19,080,000, equipment, such as harness, vehicles, blankets and tents, but not including rifles or machine guns, requires $20,000,000. Other expenditures are $5,000,000 for ammunition, $2,600,000 for machine guns, medical services $2,800,000 ocean transport $4,612,500, and railway transport $11,062,500. In addition to these amounts, Canada will pay Great Britain after the war for rationing 140,000 troops in France, for accoutrement provided, and for the transport of Canadian troops in England and France.

SIR SAM; AGAIN.

If a decoration were offered for the member of the House of Commons who said the most foolish things in a session Sir Sam Hughes would have little difficulty in carrying off the prize. Several weeks ago Sir Sam asked some very mysterious questions about the retirement of the British forces, the tone of his remarks leaving the impression that the doughty warrior from Lindsay believed that if he had been in charge the line would not have fallen back. The other day the ex-Minister of Militia took occasion to criticize the Imperial Government, remarking that "Great Britain does not appear to be making any too much of a success of winning the war." Apparently Sir Sam, who a few weeks ago, seemed to have the idea that he should have Sir Douglas Haig's position, now is rather inclined to think he could do better than Lloyd-George. In either position the member for Victoria and Haliburton would be of great assistance—to the enemy.

"PETTY ANNOYANCES."

General Mewburn's attempt to explain the reasons for conditions on transports bringing wounded Canadians home, about which there has been such general complaint recently, would have been much more successful if he had said more about the troubles of the soldiers crowded down into the filthy holds and less about the "indignities and mental tortures" suffered by the officers who were ordered home because they were not needed. The Minister of Militia characterized the conditions about which returned men have complained as "petty annoyances and discomforts," apparently implying that their suffering was small in comparison to that of the officers in the first-class cabins, who had to endure "mental torture" because they being surplus officers and their battalions having been broken up there was no place for them at their own rank and they were forced to return to Canada. No one will quarrel with General Mewburn's statement that many of these officers raised battalions in good faith in the expectation of going to the front, and are not "fakirs, funkers or slackers," but there will be a general feeling that their disappointment at not going to the front hardly entitles them to more consideration than is given to the men who have sacrificed their health and strength in the trenches. And there seems no doubt that the conditions on the transports warrants a more vigorous description than that of General Mewburn, who sees in them only "little annoyances."

NO DEFINITE PLANS.

The report of the Grand Jury, at the Sault Ste. Marie Assizes, stating that a returned soldier had been found in jail who was being kept there because he had no other place to go, represents, perhaps, an extreme case of neglect in connection with Veterans of the war, but unless the Federal Government takes hold of the problem with the vigour it showed in dealing with the liquor question, such cases are liable to become common in Canada. People will endorse the resolution of the Jury, which strongly urged "that the Government find a place for such soldiers who are deserving of the best their country can give them."

The new Department of Soldiers Civil Reestablishment, was under discussion in the House on Wednesday, and the Government, as Sir Wilfrid Laurier pointed out, did not seem to have any concreted plans as to what the Department would undertake. The Premier pointed out that the main idea was to secure the authority necessary for the constiution of the Department, and, speaking of the returned men, asked: "Suppose we told them to shift for themselves." Whereupon Sir Sam Hughes came back with the information that "that was happening already."

The problem is a big one and the State should lead the way in handling it although both provincial and municipal authorities have a responsibility in connection with the question.

IF WE REALIZE IT—

(Rochester, N. Y., Post and Express.

"Men of America, your backs are to the wall. It is time to go on or go under." This is the message James M. Beck says should be proclaimed. Mr. Beck is no alarmist; he is one of the clearest visioned and most fearless of our public men. He does not doubt which way American men mean to go; they are determined to go on until they win the war. But he questions their ability to go, if they do not realize they must go now, or never. Our backs to the wall we do not mind because the bulwark in front of us makes this seem no risky posture. We are fighting an enemy more powerful in the field than we are; able to keep a force fighting us in secret right in our homeland; able to make our burden of production constantly heavier; able to bring war to our shores, save for the soldiers and sailors of England and France. This is not palatable truth but it is absolute truth. It is the bulwark of our allies in front that makes us careless of what is behind. Nations as well as men have gone from plenitude of power to utter defeat through carelessness. England trusted to her power to "muddle through." She is through muddling now, but she has paid a dreadful price for carelessness against warning. It is perhaps unjust to say that we have been an over-confident people, since we have not yet failed of our expectations. But if the armies of France and England should fail; if the British fleet should fail; if we faced Germany unaided—then we should feel the wall at our back. This we have reasonable belief will not happen, but suppose it should. That we do not see the peril now is not due to our own preparedness, but to the protection of our allies. A military dependency in a great war is no safe role for any nation to play; it is particularly unsafe and ill-chosen role for us to play. The vast majority of Americans would hate it, and hasten at top speed to abandon it, if they realized the position we occupy. Men like Mr. Beck are the agents through which this realization must come, if it comes before Germany brings it. Bring it she will, if we do not stop her where she now is.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

General Mewburn's ideas of "petty annoyances" lead one to wonder what he would consider a serious complaint.

The statements made by the Toronto members of the 1st Canadian contingent at their meeting the other night seem to prove beyond a doubt that some dubious election methods were practised among the Canadian troops in France on behalf of the Union government.

"I may state," one Original First is reported as saying "that on the eve of the election a telegram came to the trenches which read: If Union government and conscription are endorsed the 1st contingent goes home. So we backed Union government to the limit."

The Toronto Telegram remarks that if the Minister of Militia overlooked any body in his eulogies, it was only the infantry and artillery. And after all, as the Telegram puts it, they only do the fighting.

The cause of the War Veterans is injured by such proceedings as took place in Toronto the other night. If the man who was attacked had been guilty of seditious conduct the services of the law are available.

If the amendments to the censorship regulations make it possible to suspend Le Devoir, and put an end to the seditious articles of Bourassa, they will be enthusiastically received.

"Our men wait in the trenches without fear for the future. Everywhere there is confidence and sure fore-knowledge that if the enemy attacks our heights his price for that attack will be terrible," is the cheerful message from W. A. Willison, Canadian Press Correspondent with the Canadian forces in France.

REALIZE THE SITUATION.

The new attack by the Germans in the valley of the Lys is a striking proof of the truth of Lloyd George's words in his historic speech of Tuesday, "The enemy has definitely decided to seek a military decision this year, whatever the consequences to himself." Phillip Gibbs, one of the ablest of war correspondents, confirms this opinion, and states that the full weight of the German armies is being thrown against the British lines in an effort to destroy our forces while holding the French in the south. That the situation is serious, even critical, there is not a doubt.

There are, however, people who still cling to the dangerous idea that the retirement of our lines is more or less in the nature of a trap for the Huns. People with such opinions are almost as bad as the blue ruin pessimist who sees nothing but defeat and disaster in the situation. For both classes a careful reading of Lloyd George's address is recommended, and this extract, in particular, should be remembered:

"Make no mistake, there is no cause yet for exultation, except in the valour of our troops. For a long time there will be cause, grave cause, for deep anxiety, and there will always be to the end cause for exertion and for sacrifice, and if these are given with he unstinted devotion with which our brave men in France are offering them, there will be cause for confidence in the country."

Grocers Speak Of Food Queries And Other Extremes

Predictions some of the grocers are whispering to a few of their confidants are almost alarming. "It won't be long," said one of them, "before we have flour and sugar tickets. That's what I expect. It wouldn't surprise me to see the people coming here with cards issued to them from a central office, requisitioning a certain amount of flour and sugar every week. Some of us can only buy sugar in small quantities, and it is not infrequent to hear of men in the trade who are actually out of supplies. Of course there are some who have big contracts behind them, but these are exceptions. Flour is becoming scarce, and anything may happen, dependent upon this year's crop."

Another grocer expressed the opinion that there might be no deliveries of dried fruit from the United States into Canada this year. The gardens of Spain, France, Italy, Greece and Turkey have long since been closed to the occident, and are falling into comparative neglect, due to the cancellation of exports. The common boarding-house prune has become habilitated to its high estate among the luxuries. California lemons are five cents each in the stores, and the retailers have to pay eight dollars a crate for them. It is stated that there is very little snow on the peaks of the Rocky mountain ranges in California, and that the irrigation systems on the plains will be parched for lack of water." According to the reports reaching the grocers, the snow caps melt slowly during the summer months, thereby maintaining a steady flow of water that is harnessed by the fruit growers, and used to provide the requisite moisture for their groves of prunes, apricots, peaches and the many other varieties from California's cornucopia.

However, changes work slowly, and the effect of the transition is scarcely perceptible. The people are eating war bread they never dreamed of a short time ago, and the humble sandwich must not show his face in the restaurants during meal hours. Walnuts are one dollar a pound, and other unessential trimmings are equally scarce and approaching impossible prices. No wonder you hear the grocers talking to themselves about cash-and-carry, no credit and other restrictions that were cheerfully tolerated under the unhealthy competition of former days. The grocery business is getting down to hardpan, and any wild utterances of the "counter prophets" are possibilities if the Germans require many more months before they are conquered.

SERGT. COONES BACK FROM FRONT

Wearing the coveted ribbon that showed that he had won the Military Medal for bravery at the front, Sergt. Roy Cooner, of Apsley, known as the tallest man in the 93rd Battalion, arrived in the city this morning on his way home. Sergt. Coones went overseas with Lieut.-Col. Johnston's unit, and was transferred to the 52nd Battalion in France, going through the battle of Vimy Ridge and the hot fighting around Lens without a scratch, but typhoid fever did what German shells and bullets failed to accomplish, and caused the big Apsley sergeant to be invalided to England in October last. He has been in hospital since that time.

Sergt. Coones was awarded the Military Medal for taking charge of his company at Avion in June last after all the officers and senior noncoms. had become casualties. The ex-93rd man took command of what was left of the company and held the position for twenty-four hours in the face of great pressure from the enemy.

Speaking to the Examiner this morning, Sergt. Coones remarked that the fight at Avion was even hotter than Vimy Ridge. The village near Lens was pulverized by the Canadian artillery, and the infantry "went over the bags," as Sergt. Coones expressed it, five time during the day, the first charge being at 3.30 in the morning. It was a desperate fight, but the Canadians took the position, and are still holding Avion.

Soldiers Home On Furlough Charge That Union Government Has Broken Election Pledge

Charges that the Union Government had broken faith with the soldiers at the front, were made at a meeting of "Oirginal Firsts," who are home on furlough, at their meeting in Victoria Hall, Toronto, on Wednesday night.

When the meeting opened last night the chairman stated that it was called to protest against being sent back to France under existing circumstances. He asked if any were present who had not served for three years in France. One man stood up.

"Have you been holding a job in England?" he was asked. When he replied in the affirmative he was asked to retire. Two others followed suit. The meeting then proceeded, and the chairman broached the subject.

"I saw a lot of rot in one of the papers last week, when twenty-six First Contingent men left on their return overseas to the effect that they were tickled to death to go back," he said. "One man said he had been eleven months in France. I know that man, and he was not there more than eleven days. All these men here to-night are direct from the first line trenches."

NOT PLEASANT PROSPECT.

"If any man here to-night is pleased at the prospect of going back he is different from me. I am willing to go back to France if the able-bodied single men are sent first and the alien enemies cleaned out." He then told of having visited a friend of his since his return, who was in charge of certain work. Among the men under his control were fifty Austrians, earning $7.00 a day, "while we are risking our lives for $1.10." He added:

"I don't intend to be dragged back in chains. But I will put up a mighty big kick against returning while these conditions prevail."

"We voted for Union Government," said another man. "Now why don't they back us up? We backed them up to the limit."

"I may state," said another, "that on the eve of the election a telegram came to the trenches, which read: 'If Union Government and conscription are endorsed the First Contingent goes home.' So we backed Union Government to the limit."

"Yes, that was the understanding," said a third.

"They didnt say we would get only three months furlough," a fourth added.

The discussion, in which many of the fifty men voiced their sentiments, continued:

"While we have been away our wives have had it thrown at them that we went overseas to get away from our wives and families."

"We want to stay home because we have done our bit in the line. Let others do their's. That's the situation."

"A sergeant at headquarters here complained the other day because he had attended to twenty-five furlough cases in one day and only received $3 a day. Give me his job and I'll be glad to stay here with my wife and family."

"Overseas men, even though they have been wounded are sent back in preference to able-bodied men who have never been over because we are trained. Others can be trained just as we were."

ADMIRES CONSCRIPTS.

"I take my hat off to the conscripted men. I never would have been in the army either if I had known we were to be treated like this. My wife is sick and still I have to go back. It makes me bloody well sore, believe me."

THIRTEEN OVER FORTY.

"I am 47 years old and I do not see why I should go back when so many able-bodied young fellows are knocking around doing nothing."

"I too, am 47."

The chairman asked all men over 40 years of age to stand up. Thirteen responded. He then asked all over 45 to stand up and four responded. "We are growing old in the service of our king and country," he observed.

"Who are we under, the Canadian or English authorities?" asked one man.

"Sir Edward Kemp is responsible. He is the one who says we have to go back. If he says we go back we have to go."

"The British soldier gets furlough every nine months and the French soldier every three months."

"We backed Union Government to the limit and we look to them to back us up."

"Yes, why shouldn't we? We helped them when they needed help."

"This meeting is not to get out of going back. All we ask is justice. We are Canadian citizens. We are not like those that went last week—overjoyed to go back. They are not going back to face the Boche. They are going back to jobs in England."

"We had it thrown in our faces all the way across and before leaving that we were travelling at public expense. Apparently the authorities thought we were getting more than justice."

"Hear, hear," came from many of those present.

"I earned my trip at the public expense."

"We are all married men. The married men here have not yet been called so why should we go back now after having already served over three years."

"A year ago they said they would not send us home because there were no reinforcements and none of the first contingent would be left. Now they must have reinforcements or they would not send us home. Then, if they have reinforcements, why send us back?"

DIFFERENT IN ENGLAND.

"The remnants of the 'contemptible little British army' have all been with drawn from France and given jobs in England. Not one of that first army that crossed over has been left in France. Why should we not get the same treatment?"

The following resolution was passed unanimously:

"Whereas we find that the married men have not yet been conscripted, and that a large number of single, fit young men are employed both on military jobs and also on civilian work, who could very well take our place in France, we therefore do place ourselves on record as being of the opinion that it would be only just to us to allow us to remain in Canada with our families and to permit of our taking the place here in Canada of those who should be transferred to either Britain or France, and further we would ask permission to appear before a medical board before being returned overseas if that be found necessary."

TWO WOMEN SENT TO REFORMATORY FOR DISORDERLY LIVING

Mrs. Mary Rowe was sentenced to one year, and Mrs. Nora Dwyer to nine months in the Mercer Reformatory by Magistrate Dumble this morning, following their arrest in a police raid last night on a room they have been occupying for two months in the old Palace Hotel on Hunter street. Mrs. Rowe pleaded guilty to keeping a disorderly house, and Mrs. Dwyer to being an inmate. Two convalescent soldiers who were taken in the raid were each fined $13.75 for being frequenters.

The two women have been under the surveillance of the police for months, and last night a watch was put on the place from nine o'clock until midnight when the only tenanted room in the old hotel was broken into. Mrs. Rowe lived in Lakefield before coming to Peterborough. Her husband was killed in France, and Mrs. Dwyer's husband is still at the front. About a year ago, the Patriotic Fund had Mrs. Rowe's four children made wards of the Children's Aid Society, and Mrs. Dwyer's four or five children were placed in St. Vincent's Orphanage. Chief Thompson stated that the women had been given every chance to redeem themselves, but they were incorrigible and a bad influence in the city.

Magistrate Dumble charged them with having been unfaithful to their husbands, and stated that a term in the Reformatory might lead them to better lives.

It is understood that the police have a number of other women on their list of wrong-doers, to whom this morning's sentences should be a timely warning.

Others, and which have just been unpacked, are priced at $25 to $35.

Millinery,

After All, Is a Matter of Creative Genius

If you could watch a designer of millinery we know (and who has been attached to the New York house from whom much of the millinery you see here comes) you would perceive an artist at work. You would watch with intense amazement how for hours he twisted a little flower over to this side, and in a little while when the model began to take shape, this was changed, and that switched over a wee trifle. Yes—millinery, after all, is a matter of creative genius. It requires a born artist to design these wonderfully conceived hats.

And this showing, a gathering of unique hats, has a price range beginning as low as $3.00, and rising gradually to $15.00.

A Most Beautiful Showing of Charming Silk Skirts that will bring Hosts of Women to the Store

We've done our share in getting these extraordinary skirts. All that remains is for you to see them—examine them—try them on. Then you'll do the talking and questioning yourself as to how you could possibly leave the store without one.

Silk taffetas in beautiful striped colourings, plain shades of navy, brown, black, etc., with beaded and embroidered panels all gathered and flared. Each one is prettier than the other.

Action Against Rev. Isaac Couch

Interesting Case Will Open Up in Ottawa Next Week

OTTAWA, April 12.—Before Mr. Justice Rose, the spring term of the Ontario Supreme Court will open on Monday next.

Among the other actions listed is that of Rev. Isaac Couch, former pastor of McLeod Street Church, against J. C. Spence, principal of Fifth Ave. Public School, for $10,000 damages for having, so it is alleged, written a libellous letter which lost the plaintiff the position of pastor of an Owen Sound Church. Startling evidence about certain anonymous letters which have been creating quite a stir in local Methodist circles during the past two years is expected to come out. Mr. Couch is now pastor of a Methodist church in Quebec city, where he was transferred by the last Montreal conference.

ORIGINAL CAST AT GRAND TO-MORROW.

Love is the dominant note that thrills through "Pollyanna," and deeply moves everybody connected with the optimistic comedy. Patricia Collinge, the Glad Girl, loves children; Mrs. Porter, the author of the story, and Mrs. Cushing, the dramatist, adore their royalties; the players fondly embrace their salary envelopes and the producers fairly worship the box office returns. Pollyanna on the stage is a great promoter of joy and thanksgiving, and makes everybody on both sides of the curtain glad to be alive. It will be played by the original New York cast, including Patricia Collinge, Oswald Yorke, Beatrice Morgan, Joseph Jefferson, Helen Weathersby, Mattie Ferguson, Maud Hosford, Stephen Davis, Glen Hunter, Harry Barfoot and Selma Hall, at the Grand, to-morrow matinee and night.

SUPPOSE you drop in to-morrow and see the elegant Spring and Summer Suits and Overcoats for men and Young Men, now being shown here. It's really surprising how interested men become in these garments as soon as they see them and try them on.

Perhaps YOU would like to get a better Suit for the money than you ever had.

COME HERE, THEN

The very newest Furnishings Hats, Caps, Raincoats, etc., for Men and Boys are here in the very highest qualities and at the lowest prices.

ELECTION METHODS WILL BE REVEALED IN THE HOUSE

Opposition Members Claim That Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Representative Had Difficulties in Getting Away From England.

Special to the Examiner:

OTTAWA, April 12. — W. T. R. Preston, Sir Wilfrid Laurier's representative in England during the soldiers' voting, is expected in Ottawa any day. The purpose of his visit is to submit to the leader of the Opposition documents and papers which he has in his possession bearing upon the polling of votes, the methods employed, etc. Such documents and information as he possesses he did not care to entrust to the mails, or to communicate over the cables, so he is bringing it along himself.

It is claimed by Opposition members here that Mr. Preston had considerable difficulty in getting away from England, and that from time to time information which he desired to send by cable or letter was severely censored. It is expected that the whole question of election methods will come up in the House on some day in the near future.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir: In the Examiner of the 10th inst., we read of eighteen water services being broken by the frost, and now being repaired.

While I know that anything coming from your humble servant will receive scant courtesy from the Utility Commissioners, or the Superintendent of the Water Works System, I submit, with all due respect to them that this state of affairs should not be allowed to continue. The superintendent says that "apparently the most vulnerable strip was directly beneath the street car tracks." Why should it not be the most vulnerable strip, uncovered and swept bare, as it is, during the entire winter? It is from the same cause exactly that we have so many frozen pipes and hydrants—want of proper covering.

The superintendent further states that six feet is the level on which the water mains are laid, and while it may do little good in saying so at this late date, it is very questionable if this is a sufficient depth for this latitude. The best authorities on the subject agree that for a latitude of forty degrees the covering should run from four to six feet, and for forty-five degrees, from six to eight feet, depending, of course upon the nature of the soil. For our latitude this would call for a covering of six feet eight inches and taking into consideration the cold gravelly soil—especially in the northern section of the city—it is questionable if a minimum depth of seven feet, at least, should not be insisted upon.

The question arises: Is there no way to avoid this interminable expense to the people of almost annually tearing up the streets, causing a loss to the merchants, delaying traffic, etc. Certain it is, that if the Utilities Commission, after repairing these broken services, persist in covering them with the same old material with which they were formerly covered, the same danger from frost will exist, and the same expense and tearing up process will go on indefinitely. On the other hand if these hydrants and distributing mains now being repaired, are packed around with a fine porous clay (any quanity of which can be had within half a mile of the city) this danger will be avoided, or, at least, greatly lessened, and if not, then more drastic steps must be taken, such as boxing the pipes and filling around with mineral wool, asbestos, hair, felt or some other non-conducting substance. In many cities in this northern zone, a packing of plaster of paris and sawdust has given very good results.

I am quite sure, Mr. Editor, that the people would readily submit to any initial expense to avoid this interminable tearing-up process, with the consequent inconvenience and loss.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor,
I am yours, respectfully,
J. W. FITZGERALD.

Auntie—It is a very solemn thing to be married, dearest Ethel.

Ethel—It's a great deal more solemn not to be married, darling auntie.

Mr. Kendry's New Limousine At The Motor Show

The Banks Garage has just delivered to Mr. Jas. Kendry a Willys-Knight Limousine, which is by far the most beautiful motor car that has been delivered in Peterborough. This car is equipped with the renowned Knight sleeve valve motor—the same as is used in the British tanks in Flanders, on account of its remarkable exemption from motor troubles and because of its dependability. This motor has only twenty-eight parts and is the quietest running gas engine in the world. It produces more power for the piston displacement than any other motor made.

Many of the best machines are no longer available. Almost every repair department has given up its best for the government service; consequently it is wisdom to get a car that does not require frequent service attention. Repairmen at quick call have not been essential to satisfactory Willys-Knight performances. Let your choice of a car be one of these and thus be independent of trying conditions.

This splendid Limousine will be one of the leading attractions at the Motor Show. Those contemplating the purchase of a high-grade auto should make it a point to inspect and learn the merits of this motor. 2d-86

LIQUOR SUPPLIES ARE EXHAUSTED

EXPRESS COMPANIES HAVE A FEW MORE CARS TO DELIVER.

Toronto, April 12.—The large supplies of liquor which the express companies had on hand, at the beginning of the month are rapidly diminishing, according to a report given to the Ontario Board of License Commissioners.

The supply which the Dominion Express Company had to deliver has been practically exhausted, and the Canadian Express Company is said to have only five more car loads on hand. The license inspectors have not had to make many large seizures lately in proportion to the large amount of wet goods that was on hand.

This shows that most of the liquor that was shipped at the last moment was for the most part to be used for legitimate purposes.

Even in this era of high prices there are some things that are still cheap. To vertify this, read the ads.

Barn Destroyed By Fire Yesterday

A barn on Joseph Stewart's farm, Lot 13, Con. 12, Otonabee, was destroyed by fire yesterday shortly before noon. Mr. Gillespie, Stewart and a labourer were the only persons known to have been in the barn during the morning and they had been there early caring for the stock. Mr. Henry Orde, a neighbour, first saw the fire, the cause of which is unknown, but the strong east wind had fanned the flames beyond control. Another barn, thrity feet away, was saved by its position, on the east side of the burning building. The cattle were rescued, but a considerable quantity of hay and other produce was lost. The barn was partially covered by insurance. Mr Stewart desires to thank the neighbouring farmers for their splendid assistance.

DOVERCOURT SONGSTER BRIGADE DUE TO ARRIVE TO-MORROW

The Dovercourt Songster Brigade, with Adjutant and Mrs. Burton in command, will arrive to-morrow at 12.20, C.P.R. They will be met by the Temple Band, and Songsters and as many Salvationists as can get there, and escorted to the Temple. They will be taken to their billets for lunch. At 3 o'clock, from the Temple, they will start on an automobile tour around the city, arranged by Adjt. McElhiney, and at 5 o'clock will have tea with the Temple Songster Brigade. Sharp at 7 o' clock there will be three open-airs held. The Dovercourt Songsters at Simcoe and George; Temple Band at Charlotte and George and the Temple Songsters at the corner of George and Hunter.

At 8 o'clock, in the Temple, Mayor Duncan will welcome the visitors and a great musical festival will be given by the Brigade.

The solos by Mr. McGregor, who is a Gold Medalist, and Captain Beer will no doubt be greatly enjoyed.

A great musical festival will be given the Brigade at 3 o'clock on Sunday afternoon.

Prisoners Are Under Shell Fire

BRITISH AND FRENCH PRISONERS ENDURE MUCH SUFFERING.

(Special to The Examiner.)

London, April 12. — An official report made public to-day says the British and French prisoners of war in Germany have endured an amount of unjustifiable suffering for which it would be hard to find a parallel in history. They have been employed constantly under shell fire, and many have been killed by the guns of the allies.

BOSTON CAFE HAS FINEST GRILL ROOM IN THE DOMINION

No Expense Has Been Spared to Meet Every Need--Telephone and Dressing Rooms Provided

GOOD SERVICE

The Boston Cafe, which was opened last week is conceded to be one of the best equipped restaurants in the Dominion. It represents the very latest innovations in service and the appointments are the best that money can buy. Special attention has been given to the grill room, which is located on the second floor. The grill room section is beautifully decorated and the lighting effects are in keeping with the restful design of the mural decorations. Each of the tables have a separate reading lamp while the main lighting system is of the indirect type. A dressing room for ladies and a telephone are features that will commend the Boston grill room to its many patrons. Ample accommodation has been provided for the increasing patronage of the Boston Cafe and the service provided is further augmented by a staff of competent waiters.

THE LUNCH COUNTER.

Down stairs is located the lunch counter and additional tables for the use of the customers who do not wish to use the grill room upstairs. The lunch counter is finished in marble throughout and in keeping with the many improvements that will place the Boston Cafe in a better position than ever to provide maximum service Mr. N. Douros, proprietor of the Cafe, has spared no pains or expense to make the Cafe one of the best equiped eating houses in Canada, and equipped eating houses in Canada and the Boston are prepared to corroborate the assertions of others that Toronto, Montreal and the larger centres contain nothing better in the form of a grill room than the Boston Cafe.

FURLOUGH MEN MUST GO BACK

ONE HUNDRED MEN WHO HAD THEIR FURLOUGH HERE HAVE ALREADY RETURNED.

OTTAWA, April 11.—The Government is not likely to vary the conditions under which furlough was secured for men of the first division. Resolutions and also letters from individuals are being sent here urging that as they have done their bit and stood the brunt of very hard service for over three years they should be allowed to remain at home.

It is conceded that in many cases sending them back involves real hardships, but when the announcement was made that they were coming it was accompanied by a warning that they would have to return to service. It was stated that this was a specific agreement with the British authorities on he strength of which the respite was secured. If it is broken, then, the department says, it will be a case of good-bye to leaves of absence for other contingents. A hundred men who had their furlough have already gone back.

An exception is likely to be made in the case of men who are physically unfit. In such cases the weeding out will probably be done in Canada, rather than on the return to England. It is the agreement with the British authorities stipulating that the men were to return to service that now is particularly cited as a reason why the repeated applications for discharge cannot be granted.

From what could be learned to-day in high circles, it would seem that resolutions passed by the Toronto veterans are not likely to avail, even conceding that domestic conditions make it peculiarly hard on individuals who have done their bit handsomely.

Bank Robber Captured

Was Heavily Armed, but Two Police Officials Quickly Overpowered Him.

SASKATOON, Sask., April 11.—After a sensational pursuit through the night, Chief of Police D. M. Donald and Inspector Smith, head of the Provincial Police Department, shortly after 3 o'clock this morning, captured Ernest Johnson, aged twenty, the lone bandit who held up and robbed the Nutana branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce in broad daylight. The arrest was made near Clarksboro', twenty miles northea Saskatoon.

With his pockets crammed small bills amounting in all to over $6,000, and carrying a lo revolver and ammunition belt taining 100 cartridges, Johnson overtaken by the police in a r car. He turned on a lonely part o road to give battle, but the o jumped from the moving car and him to the road. He was quickly cuffed and completely tied befor had a chance to pull his gun.

Canada's War Expenditure For The Present Year Will Mean Outlay Of $1,400,000,000

Assigned Pay and Separation Allowances Represent a Respectable Sum—For the Transport Service

OTTAWA, April 12.—In asking for a round sum of $500,000,000 for war for the present fiscal year, Sir Robert Borden put war estimates of $516,853,804 before the House of Commons. It is hoped, however, to keep the total figure within the amount now voted. The sum mentioned is made up as follows:

Militia and Defence Department	$443,050,000
Other departments	73,802,804
Total	$516,853,804

This does not cover all Canada's expenses overseas, part of which, including transportation of troops in England and to France and part of their equipment, will not be reckoned up and charged to Canada, until after the war.

HOW MONEY WILL BE SPENT.

It is interesting to see how the Government proposes to spend the $500,000,000 to be voted by Parliament this year. Over $180,000,000 will be used to pay 110,000 troops in Canada and 150,000 troops in England and 140,000 in France, the amount for Canada being $50,17,500, and for overseas $132,312,500. the cost of maintaining the troops in France at nine shillings and four pence each per day. Assigned pay of overseas troops will amount to $54,000,000, while separation allowances will total $21,750,000 for men in Canada and $6,000,000 for men overseas. Rations for 110,000 troops in Canada at fifty cents per day will cost the Government no less than $20,075,000, and for 150,000 in England at 38 1-2 cents per day $21,000,000. The estimated cost of clothing for the troops in Canada and England is $19,080,000; equipment not including rifles, machine guns, small arms, etc., will cost $20000,000; ammunition is to cost $5,000,000 and come of this is to come from the Lindsay Arsenal; medical services overseas will cost $2,800,000; machine guns, $2,000,000; ocean transport $4,612,500; railway transport, $11,062,500, and veterinary services overseas $3,000,000.

FOR TRANSPORT SERVICE

An estimate of $15,675,000 is made for railway and ocean transport of 100,000 men eastbound. In other words, the Government estimates that it will cost an average of $150 per man for each of the 100,000 men to be sent to the front under the Military Service Act.

REPLACING HALIFAX BUILDINGS.

Public works cost more because the Halifax fire destroyed buildings which must be replaced and there is need of new buildings for war service elsewhere. The Department of Railways last year paid out $450,000 to make good the damage caused the railway lines by the Halifax explosion, so requires less money this year.

The Military Hospitals Commission for the eleven months ending February 28, spent $9,303,295. Of this amount $5,678,794 will not recur owing to the transfer of certain branches of the Military Hospitals Commission to other departments.

Sir Sam Hughes remarked that he understood that the Hospitals Commission is henceforth to be under the Militia Department. "No" said Sir Robert Borden. "What has been accomplished is this: The care and treatment of returned soldiers up to the time of their discharge, whether in hospital or otherwise, is now undertaken by the Department of Militia and Defence; but the care and treatment after their discharge is undertaken by the Invalided Soldiers' Commission, which is under the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment.

PEACE MUST FIRST BE SIGNED

UP TO THAT POINT AMERICA WILL SHED LAST DROP OF BLOOD.

London, April 12. — "American labor is ready to extend its hand to German labor as soon as peace is signed, but not before, James Wilson, the American Laborite declared here to-day. "Up to that point America will spend its last dollar and shed its last drop of blood."

PETERBORO'S ENGINEERS' CLUB HELD SUCCESSFUL MEETING

Canada's Water Power Illustrated —Dinner at the Empress Hotel —Able Addresses.

PAPER DISCUSSED

To discuss ways and means of simplifying the coal situation by utilizing the boundless water powers of the Dominion, the Engineers' Club of Peterboro called a half day session, starting with a most interesting and instructive picture show at the Empire Theatre at 3 o'clock.

THE PICTURES.

The pictures, which were bgought to the city by the Engineers' Club, are an eight reel series of remarkably good moving pictures of Canada's water powers developed and undeveloped, in Montreal, Winnipeg, Bow River and British Columbia, and are the property of the Dominion Water Power Branch of the Department of the Interior, which Department has secured them to advertise the water powers of Canada. he location of the different water powers was indicated by a map on the screen on which a moving hand traced the different places under discussion.

DINNER AT THE EMPRESS.

After the picture show, which was open to the public as well as the Engineers, and attended by 400 interested spectators, the Engineers retired to the Empress, where a dinner under war time restrictions was served in the capable manner always adopted by Mine Host Chris Graham.

The Club and friends present were Messrs. C. E. Canfield, president of the Club, and chairman of the entertainment, G. K. Munro, C. E. Sisson, R. B. Rogers, G. R. Langley, W. Sangster, C. F. Bookhout, Wm. Cruthers, W. J. Dickinson, D. Denham, D. Easson, H. O. Fiske, H. A. Fife, B. S. Foster, A. J. Grant, A. G. Green, S. H. Holden, A. L. Killaley, H. J. Lungren, N. Mills, W. Munn, R. N. Marr, D. L. MacLaren, W. H. Pretty, M. D. Seaton, E. R. Shirley, F. HDawson, C. Fessenden, W G. Ferguson, Alex. Gibson, D. Carlisle, T. Ruiter, Dr. Harvey, Mr. McAlpine (Toronto), Mr. Fraser (Toronto), Ryerson Ritchie and Ross Dobbins.

THE SPEECHES.

After the dinner, a paper, "Canada's Water Powers and their Relation of the Fuel Situation," which was given by Mr. J. R. Challies at the two day convention of the Canadian Society of Civil Engineers in Toronto on March 26 and 27, was read by Mr. R. B. Rogers. In this it was stated that only ten per cent. of Ontario's available hydro-electric power had been developed. "It is axiomatic," said Mr. Challies, "that our heat, light and power needs must be considered as one great national problem, and also that Canada's domestic and industrial development depends primarily on the co-ordinated use of all the fuel-power resources of the Dominion. Water power," he added, "must take a very prominent part, if the best use of the varied fuel-power resources of Canada is to be achieved."

Cheap power promises to be one of this country's greatest assets in the post-bellum industrial rivalry of the nations for world trade. Our great fuel reserves, supported by our water power resources, represent a sure source of cheap power, and should guarantee Canada her share in world trade, if our varied fuel-power resources are availed of to their maximum possible advantage.

The paper was discussed by Mr. Ryerson Ritchie, who is associated with Dr. Garfield, Fuel Controller of the United States. Mr. Ritchie threw some new light upon the fuel situation and said that Canada should be very thankful to the railways of Canada and to the car ferries across the lakes, both of which agents have been reponsible for the fuel situation being as good as it is.

Mr. A. L. Killaley and Mr. E. R. Shirley also gave some discussions on the paper.

It was suggested that Dr. Harvey was better qualified than most men in giving a discussion on any coal question.

VOTE OF THANKS.

After a hearty vote of thanks had been moved to Mr. F. L. Robinson for the gratuitous use of the Empire and to Mr. Challies for his paper, read by Mr. Rogers, a business meeting of the club wound up the evening.

Dance At The Conservatory

The dance at the Conservatory last night, conducted under strictly war-time measures, supper being absolutely dispensed with, was a successful affair and attended by about sixty of the young people of the city. The music for the evening was supplied by Linton's orchestra of Toronto. Some who attended were: Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Dr. Frederick, the Misses Elva Jackson, Kathleen Thorndkye, Irene Scott, Helen MacLaren, Beatrice Heard, M. and H. Fanning, J. Herbertson, Elizabeth White, J. Girard, G. Patterson, Helen Bulmer, M. Lynn, Vera Knox, and Messrs. B. Vincent, M. Mimms, B. McTier, W. Fanning, E. Pethick, M. Macdonald, J. Clancy, J. Batten, N. Girard, Dr. Frederick, B. Moore, Mr. Guise-Bagley, H. Patterson, W. Rutherford, V. Grady, M. Knox, P. Gliddon, O. Gliddon, R. Byers, S. Sheehy, M. Merrill, H. Huff, S. Low, C. Macdonald, V. Wall.

A Half Million Dollar Fire Loss

Vermillion, Alta., April 12. — Five hundred thousand dollars loss resulted from a fire which started in Joe McKeen's implement warehouse at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and was under control at eight last night. A high wind prevailed. A dozen buildings were destroyed.

HALIFAX CASE IS ENDED.

Supreme Court Judge Turns Down Action Again Pilot MacKay.

HALIFAX, N.S., April 12.—At the criminal sittings of the Supreme Court yesterday Mr. Justice Russell declined to grant a motion made by Crown Prosecutor Cluney for an order to prefer an indictment against Francis MacKey, who was pilot on the steamer Mont Blac, on a charge of manslaughter in connection with the French steamer's fatal collision with the Belgian relief ship Imo in Halifax harbour on December 6th last. The MacKey case has thus apparently ended, the grand jury having been discharged for the term.

The case of Commander Wyatt, R.N.R., who was chief naval examination officer here at the time of the disaster, and against whom a true bill on the charge of manslaughter was found, will be tried on Wednesday next.

SUSPENDED SENTENCE FOR YOUNG BANDIT

WINDSOR, April 11—Everett Davey, aged 17, who held up Edward Vokes of Kingsville, and with a revolver compelled Vokes to hand over $2, all the cash he had and his automobile, was arraigned before County Judge Dromgole at Sandwich and let go on suspended sentence. Davey admitted the hold-up. The youthful bandit had been picked up by Vokes, who was driving from the city to Kingsville, after he ha dbegged for a lift.

WILL COST THE CITY $8,000

THIS IS ESTIMATED COST OF CONVERTING MARKET ARCADE INTO STORES.

Turning the blank space under the market hall on George street north of Charlotte, into two up-to-date stores, will cost the city $4,000. The shops, which will probably be finished by July 1st, will fill a long felt want in transforming a hideous gap into two good business stands, and the rental of which it is expected, will more than pay for the outlay. As yet tenants have not taken the new quarters.

OTHER BUILDINGS.

Other buildings underway in the city are:

J. J. Quinlan, concrete dwelling, on Oxford street, $800.

Patrick Kennedy, concrete dwelling on Concession street (near Carlisle), $800.

J. A. McIntyre, garage, 319 Maitland avenue, $125.

G. L. Stevens, alterations to house, 208 McDonnel street, $700.

Thomas J. Moore, garage, 332 Reid street, $40.

George Dunkley, woodshed, 280 Wescott street, $100.

H. Kellett, shed, 294 Smith Street, $60.

W. G. Morrow, alterations, 302 Water street, $50.

Try Magnesia For Stomach Trouble

It Neutralizes Stomach Acidity, Prevents Food Fermentation, Sour Gassy Stomachs and Acid Indigestion.

Doubtless, if you are a sufferer from indigestion, you have already tried pepsin, bismuth, soda charcoal, drugs and various digestive aids and you know these things will not cure your trouble—in some cases do not even give relief.

But before giving up hope and deciding you are a chronic dyspeptic just try the effect of a little magnesia—not the ordinary carbonate, citrate, oxide or milk, but the pure bisurated magnesia which you can obtain from practically any druggist in either powdered or tablet form. Take a teaspoonful of the powder or two compressed tablets with a little water after your next meal, and see what a difference this makes. It will instantly neutralize the dangerous, harmful acid in your stomach which now causes your food to ferment and sour, making gas, wind, flatulence, heartburn, and the bloated or heavy lumpy feeling that seems to follow most everything you eat.

You will find that, provided you take a little bisurated magnesia immediately after a meal, you can eat almost anything and enjoy it without any danger of pain or discomfort to follow and moreover the continued use of the bisurated magnesia cannot injure the stomach in any way so long as there are any symptoms of acid indigestion.

20 YEARS IN JAIL FOR DISLOYAL TALK

WASHINGTON, April 11.—The sedition bill, prohibiting under penalty of twenty years imprisonment and $10,000 fine, for language or acts of disloyalty or obstruction of the army draft and liberty loans, was passed yesterday by the Senate without a record vote. It now goes to conference between the House and Senate, and final enactment is expected soon.

THE Y. M. C. A. CIRCUS WAS PRESENTED LAST EVENING

The Initial Performance Was a Big Success — Will Be Presented Again To-night — Would Have Done Credit to Barnum.

"Bigger, better and brighter than ever" was the opening announcement on the bill that heralded the Y.M.C.A. circus, presented at the Grand Opera House last evening to the satisfaction and amusement of a large audience. The circus is due for another appearance to-night, and judging by the rush for tickets there will be a full house. The circus lived up to its advance notices and more than justified the claims of the pink programme that was distributed at the doors. In the words of the programme, "words are but a dead medium to describe the glories of this conglomeration of brawn and beauty." The "ladder pyramids," "daring dance" were easily alone worth the price of admission, while the clown work must have caused Barnum to turn over in his grave.

The audience were surprised at the skill and ingenuity of the athletes and clowns. As Prof. Oh Somespeiller announced, 'You wn see something that you never saw before.' The band, consisting the best musicians of Sousa, Creatore and de Vignetti, under the leadership of Prof. De Gink, was the greatest of them all, to say nothing of the daring gymnasts, tumblers, fancy dancers and mountinous pyramid builders. Altogether a very brilliant spectacle, which will be seen for the last time to-night.

Then the Have-a-Laff Six, the musical act par excellence, with the newest and latest song hits: "We Feed the Baby Garlic So We Can See Him in the Dark," "The Magic Melody," "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia," "Dark Town Strutters Ball."

The coons were funny with "Rastus" Huff in the premier role. He brought the house down with a bandanna handkerchief. Included in this premier act were "Black Joe" Lamb, "Washington" Anderson, "Caroline" Cottingham, "Sammy" White, "Mississippi" Parks," and last, but not least, that inimitable fun-provoker, "Rastus" Huff. His leghorn lid would be a feature at a public auction.

Peterborough's baby bantams in the dumb bell drill pleased the audience with their accuracy and precision. Prof. However Deshedoit the great fire-eater, introduced the world's greatest sleight of hand "feets."

Then came the senior leaders on the parallel bars, each with a stunt of their own. Also William Tell & Son-If-He-Ever-Mist.

The "Pyramids" made a big hit and were worth the price of admission. The International Torupe brought from such far-off points as Nassau and Norwood, were excellent. "Crusty," the battle-scarred British tank, loaned for the occasion by the War Office, gave a good account of itself. And then folowed an Irish lilt that truly reminds you of the Emerald Isle.

The Canadian nobility condescend to appear, not juggling bacon, but trying not to jungle Homeless Hector, their Saratoga steed. Then followed the Canadian clown dance, the daring dive through the ring of fire, the athletic drill. Then the perrennial Suzzie "Thirsty Band," formerly known as the Bacfence Katorkestra, with Signor Biga Disoerdi on the baton.

A list of performers follow:

"De Ginks' Simpfunny Orchestra."
"Grand Intree."
"Have-a-Laff Six.'
"Dumb Bell Drill."
"Professor Howeverdeshedoit.
"Unparalled Troupe."
"William Tell & Son."
"S.O.S. Drill."
"Ladder Pyramids."
"The International Troupe."
"Crusty the British Tank."
"The Irish Lilt."
"The Canadian Nobility in the Gym."
"Canadian Clown Dance."
"The Daring Dive."
"Athletic Drill."
"The Perrenial Suzzie Thirsty Band."

PAID $1,180 A TON FOR DAMAGED FLAX

LONDON, April 11.—The record price of $1,180 a ton was paid for a consignment of damaged flax at Dundee this week. The flax had been damaged by water, and the sale was therefore not subject to the usual price restrictions. The figures at which the consignment was sold is the highest ever paid for the fibre.

Moved by Coun. Porter, seconded by Coun. Smith, that the Reeve and Coun. McDonald be a committee to see about the extension of the library room.

The Finance committee reported the following accounts and recommending there being paid: Municipal World, electric supplies, $3.08; Municipal Clerk, election expense, $18.26; Electric Light Co., 1 month's lighting, $62.05; Richard Simpson, 80 hours' work at $2, $16.00; Bell Telephone acct., $5.91. Total, $105.30.

Moved by Coun. Porter, seconded by Coun. McDonald, that the report of the Finance committee be received and adopted.—Carried.

Council instructed officers to take a look for vacant land which might be taken over for cultivation purposes under the Vacant Land Cultivation Act.

Moved by Coun. Porter, seconded by Coun. McDonald, that the Council adjourn.—Carried.

COLONY AT HILL 63 MAY HAVE TO JOIN THE TIDE OF REFUGEES

Despatches From the War Front Make no Mention of War Torn Hill Which Shelters Folks Who Have Lived Through Many Months of War.

"KILLED BY A SHELL"

(By William G. Sheppard, Former United Press War Correspondent on the Western Front).

CHICAGO, Ill., April 12.—Hill Sixty-Three has not been mentioned yet in despatches covering the Armentieres fighting, but it is surely in it, because it broods over Ploegsteert Wood.

Newspaper correspondents who have been there know all the folks in this district, for Hill 63 has protected their homes through all the long, hard months of the war, and they have pursued their lives under its shelter just as if the German trenches had been miles away instead of only yards.

Sold Oranges.

Widow Blemy had a little shop along the country road at the foot of Hill 63. She is a Belgian, every inch of her. She sold oranges, candies, eggs and milk to the soldiers.

One day in her store, after two Tommies told her in very poor French that they wanted some of her oranges, I saw her throw in an extra orange, saying, "You speak French so well that I'll give you an extra one."

When the soldiers went out Mme. Blemy said to me: "I am doing everything I can to keep them happy and strong. You Americans are feeding the Belgians, but why aren't you on the fighting line?"

This was before the Americans declared war.

A Belgian Widow.

Across the stone-paved way from Mme. Blemy's stored lived a Belgian widow and her three children. Their little farm was neatly tended but the widow complained to me that the children would rather spend their time in taking care of Mr. O'Reilly's grave than in raising grain.

She took me into the yard, the children trooping behind, and she showed me a well kept grave bordered with violets and crocuses.

On the grave cross was marked, "Here Lies Patrick O'Reilly, of the Seaforths."

"Mr. O'Reilly used to visit at our house," explained the widow. "The children used to run out to meet him as he came from the trenches. He loved to play with them. One day he was killed by a shell. We asked the soldiers if they wouldn't bring his body to our farm so that we could care for the grave.

"And now, you see, we keep it clean and green and beautiful."

Nearby was a little farm, where lived an aged farmer and his wife, Belgians, for this is the corner of Belgium still intact, whose sons have gone to war. Every spring time they have done their own plowing, pulling the drag with ropes fastened to their own shoulders.

The communiques don't say whether Hill 63 is still sheltering this little colony of Belgians who live at the edge of Ploegsteert Wood. Most of them perhaps have gone by this time to join the tide of refugees that must be getting out of the way of the German army.

WILL CONTEST LUNDY WILL.

Mr. W. R. Lundy, 243 Gladstone Avenue, Detroit, is coming to Peterboro shortly to contest the will of his brother, the late John James Lundy.

Concert At St. George's Church

Last evening the "House Full" boards might just as well have been placed outside the Parish Room of St. George's Church, South Peterborough, for the house was full, even to the doors.

The occasion was a grand concert, given in aid of the funds of the Church of St. George. It will be remembered by some anyway, that annually on Shrove Tuesday a concert is held, preceded by a pancake social, and on Mardi Gras at this church room they are served galore. But this year the roads leading to the Parish room were impassable from the enormous amount of snow. As a result the concert was postponed and the pancake feast abandoned. Hence the concert last evening.

The proceedings were opened by the chairman, Colonel J. Mills, calling upon all to stand up and sing "God Save the King." Needless to say that, amongst such enthusiasts as the colony of Britishers worshipping at St. George's, it was sung with heart and voice.

Colonel Mills then in a brief, but to-the-point speech, remarked on the absence of men, saying that if every church throughout Canada had done its duty as has St. George's (where there is scarcely a man left, all of them having voluntarily enlisted) there would have been no need for conscription in this country, neither would our boys at the front be begging for reinforcements.

The programme was then proceeded with, the opening number being a march, "The British Belle," a potpourri of ancient and modern English patriotic tunes. This was executed by the Gazeley orchestra, conducted by Mr. Gazeley himself, some twelve of its members having kindly volunteered their services. A trumpet solo, "The Holy City," by Mr. Gazeley followed. Sergeant Stanley, a veteran, who said he would rather face a regiment of Huns than stand up to sing before an audience, rendered "Queen of the Earth" in such manner as to elicit hearty applause.

A selection, "War Songs" by the orchestra, was the next number. This was a collection of British and American war songs, many of the sweet melodies of the Southern States arising from the Civil War being introduced. This number evoked immense applause. Mr. Chas. Coleman, who is evidently a favourite among the St. George folk, sang in a serio-comic style about a lassie. But, oh, Mr. Coleman, she wasn't a Peterborough lassie; what do you mean by it? It was a "Hieland Lassie, my Scotch Bluebell," that Mr. Coleman had uppermost in his mind and voice, and evidently the Hieland Lassie was accorded a hearty reception. As an encore the vocalist gave "The Man They Left Behind." Sergeant Muir then gave a recitation, "From the Trenches to the Sea." Mr. Farley followed with a violin-cello solo, accompanied on the piano by Mr. C. A. Spence, who is in charge of the Mission Church of St. Alban, Browntown.

Then came the period of intermission in order as Rev. Jas. Price, the Rector, said, to give the band a rest; but so as to prevent the ladies talking too much, Sergeant Muir would occupy part of the period of rest with a recitation, after which there would be a few minutes—not for silent prayer, but—for conversation.

In the second part of the programme Miss Blade, the organist of St. George's, favoured the audience with a pianoforte solo. The orchestra then played the well-known hymn, "Abide With Me," to the popular tune written expressly for this hymn by the late Dr. W. H. Monk. Mr. Farr (accompanied by Mr. Oscar Freeburn) sang "Where is My Boy To-night?" and elicited such applause with shouts of 'encore,' that he had to give another item. Mr. Gazeley then followed with a trumpet solo. Mr. C. A. Spence brought the house down with his recitation, entitled "The Revenge," which was a story of the good old English naval pluck shown during the days of the Spanish Armada. Mr. Farthing offered another 'cello solo, and the orchestra played a Finale. The universal singing of the National Anthem, "God Save the King," and "O Canada," brought the proceedings to a satisfactory close.

All the numbers were well rendered and heartily received, and thanks are due to the Gazeley orchestra for their valuable and freely offered assistance, as also to Messrs. Loader and Freeburn for their services as accompanists.

On the motion of Col. Mills, seconded by Mr. C. A. Spence, a hearty vote of thanks, accompanied by three cheers, was tendered to the performers. Col. Mills added that the members of the G. W. V. A. were always ready to do their bit in helping any good work.

DOMINION BANK MANAGER ARRESTED

Special to the Examiner:

TORONTO, Ont., April 12—Charged with the theft of about $3,000, Lewis M. Maynard, manager of the Dominion Bank branch, McCaul and Dundas streets, Toronto, was arrested by a detective at the Union station this morning as Maynard stepped from the C.P.R. Ottawa train.

The charge was sworn to by General Manager William McAgy, of the Dominion Bank. Maynard appeared in police court and was remanded for one week without bail.

As Maynard got off the Ottawa train with Inspector Bunty, Detective Nursey walked up and said, "May I carry your grip?" Maynard replied that he could carry the bags himself. Then he was arrested.

Maynard has been manager of the McCaul and Dundas streets branch since it was opened three years ago, and his wife and child reside in Toronto. It is reported that Maynard has admitted his downfall due to hand book and race track gamblers, who fleeced him badly.

CATCH OF RATS IS SMALL DUE TO THE COLD NIGHTS

The cold weather has interfered with the trapping of muskrats in this district. The largest catch reported around Rice Lake was less than three hundred counted by Alfie Crowe, of Hiawatha. Some of the Indians to the south have stripped their marshes and have departed, some to Balsam Lake and others have gone up the I. B. & O. above Bancroft.

The price to-day is from $1.18 to $1.20, but the scarcity of pelts has strengthened the market and trappers are showing an inclination to hold out for prices right up to the time limit of April 2nd.

Mr. Cyril Lech states that the cold nights have frozen the marshes, thus covering the traps, and often killing the rats in their rush-pile houses. A few nights ago Mr. Dan McAllister, a trapper at the mouth of the Otonabee, had a narrow escape from drowning when his canoe struck a stump in the dark and overturned. He managed to keep afloat until Mr. Lech and several others who heard his cries for help hurriedly paddled out to him.

At Barries Ltd. the visible supply of rats is much smaller than usual, but when all is considered, Mr. Barrie expects a fair season. Two conditions which militate against the fur supply in lines such as coon, fox, skunk, as well as rat, are the conscription of so many men formerly engaged in trapping, and in the fact that more money can be made by the Indians in working in the lumber districts cutting trees. The supply so far brought in is from the south, as the northern waters have not opened up. The fur this year, presumably on account of the severe winter, is of much better quality than in many years past. In four years the cost has been raised four hundred per cent a single skin, this year bringing $1.00 to $1.20. The supply diminished on the continent 40 per cent last year.

Kline's New Idea

Plenty of ladies who are looking for their Spring clothing outfit have hesitated to buy because of the cost coming all at once, being too big for them. It will be good news to them to hear that Mr. H. Kline has started selling on an easy payment plan so that it is not necessary to wait till the money has all been saved, but they can have the garments and wear them while they pay for them. He has a splendid stock of new Spring Goods, and in addition to his easy terms, his prices are extremely reasonable. There is a fine selection of ladies' suits, silk dresses, serge skirts, black and striped silk skirts crepe de chene, Georgette crepe, and silk blouses, Irish Damask table cloth, Nottingham lace curtains, boys' suits, etc., as well as all furnishings.

This ladies' bargain store has always been popular, but it is safe to say that its popularity is bound to take a big jump now. Find the place at 430 George street, one door north of Jordan's flower store.

PLANING MILL CO. GET PERMISSION TO ERECT BUILDING.

The council yesterday afternoon granted permission to the Peterboro Planing Mill Company to erect at the rear of their factory a wooden building, 48 feet by 20 feet, on condition that the company cover the new and present building with iron and roof them with non-combustible material; also that the shavings be kept in a brick building and removed; and that the company agrees to tear down and remove the new buildings when the war is terminated and upon notice from the city.

FOOD ORDER PUTS END TO BUN MEALS?

The new food laws apparently strike at the confectionery stores that have been selling "bun dinners" to farmers on Saturdays. The average bun weighs two ounces and that is the limit of white bread that may be served at any meal. There is an option of four ounces of bread made from substitute flours, but the substitutes are reported scarce and dear.

WINDERS AT BONNER-WORTH CO. MAKE PRESENTATION.

On Friday afternoon the winders of the Bonner-Worth Co. gathered together to bid farewell to Miss Ethel Boyce and to show the high esteem in which she was held by her girl friends. She was presented with a fountain pen. Miss Mary Watts made the presentation, and Claire Hudson read the address, which was as follows:

Dear Ethel,—We have gathered here to present to you this small token of our esteem for you, and trust you will accept same in memory of the time you have spent with us.

Signed on behalf of the Winders,

O. A. C. STUDENT DISLOYAL.

Spaniard who Wanted to Celebrate German Victories was given a Stiff Sentence at Guelph.

Guelph, April 11.—Santiago Abadia, a resident of South America, who has been a student at the Ontario Agricultural College since last September, was arrested yesterday at the college by Inspector D. H. Reynolds, of the Immigration Department, and this morning in the police court was fined $100 and costs or two and a half years in the penitentiary, and ordered deported to his own country, after he had pleaded guilty to writing a letter to a friend in Columbia which contained objectionable matter under the War Measures Act. The letter was written in Spanish and was intercepted by the Dominion Censor. Part of the letter reads:

"In relation to the war, if I am not mistaken, you are pro-ally. I respect your incination, but I am becoming more pro-German daily, and every morning I pray for the Kaiser and his army. What I regret most is not being able to celebrate the German victories as we used to in San Bartolome with the addition of a little pill of rice or one or two cigarettes."

In referring to the Americans the letter stated that they were playing the scab and hoping the others will pull the chesnuts out of the fire for them. The prisoner had enough cash to pay his fine and is now being held pending arrangements for his deportation.

RUSSIA'S GIGANTIC LOSS OF TERRITORY.

Thirty-Two Per Cent. of Entire Population of Country Lost to the Germans.

PETROGRAD, April 12. — Under the terms of the peace treaty, the Commissioner of Commerce announces, Russia has lost 780,000 square kilometres of territory with 56,000,000 inhabitants, or 32 per cent. of the entire population of the country.

The announcement says Russia has also sustained the following losses:

One-third of her total mileage of railways, amounting to 21,530 kilometres (13,350 miles).

Seventy-three per cent. of the total iron production..

Eighty-nine per cent. of the total coal production.

Two hundred and sixty-eight sugar refineries, 918 textile factories, 574 breweries, 133 tobacco factories, 1,685 distilleries 244 chemical factories, 615 paper mills, 1,073 machine factories.

The territories which now become German formerly brought in annual revenue amounting to 845,838 rubles, and had 1,800 savings banks.

$30,000,000 INCOME TAX.

Chicago, April 11.—Some men are paying as high as $30,000,000 income tax in the United States, according to Charles E. Eaton, head of the National Service Section of the United States Shipping Board and Emergency Fleet Corporation, "and I have yet to hear from these men the first objection, the first appeal. They are patriotic," he said. "They walk up and give their money in service to the nation."

A man is always known by the company that refuses to keep him.

"With Backs To Wall, We Will Not Retire"

Commander of British Forces in France Issues Statement That Thrills the Empire—"Every Position Must Be Held"

THE FREEDOM OF MANKIND IS THE ISSUE

LONDON, April 13.—(Bulletin.)—Field Marshal Haig, commander of the British forces in France, in a statement issued to his troops, said:

"Every position must be held to the last man. There must be no retirement. With our backs to the wall and believing in the justice of our cause, each one of us must fight on to the end."

"The safety of our homes and the freedom of mankind depend alike upon the conduct of each one of us at this critical moment."

"The French army is moving rapidly and in great force to our support."

STRONGER IN MACHINE GUNS SUPERIOR TANKS REPLACE OLD

LONDON, April 11.—Dr. Kellaway, Parliamentary Secretary of the Ministry of Munitions, in a speach at Bedford outlined the increase in the production of munitions.

In the first two months of 1918, as compared with 1917, it was as follows:

Light guns, 30 per cent.; medium guns, 57 per cent.; heavy guns, 38 per cent.; machine guns, 96 per cent.; shells, 83 per cent.; tanks, 39 per cent.; aeroplanes, 223 per cent.. aero engines, 245 per cent.

The average weekly production of aeroplanes in 1918 equalled the average production for two months in 1915, while one week's production of machine guns equalled five months in 1915.

Simultaneously men were steadily being released for the army. Over one hundred thousand had been released during 1917. The army was as well equipped to-day as when the German offensive began. All the guns lost had been replaced, and we were actually stronger in machine guns than at the beginning of the battle. In the air we are as strong, if not stronger. The lost tanks were being replaced by a superior model, and the ammunition had been more than made good.

PAPER CLOTHING POPULAR IN BERLIN

AMSTERDAM, April 11.—To popularize paper clothing is the object of a national exhibition just opened in Berlin under the patronage of the Imperial Clothing Office. In addition to clothing substitutes, there are utilitarian articles of various sorts formerly made of wool, linen and cotton, such as upholstery, curtains, rugs, screens and tapestry, all now composed of paper fibre.

A Lesson in Discretion.

The story that is being told of the visit recently paid to London by two Basuto chiefs contains a lesson in discretion which might be laid to heart by many. The Basutos had been to the front and learned many things and had come back to London and learned many more; for one thing they had learned all about spies. Small wonder then that the journalists, endeavoring to interview them, should find them non-committal. Speaking to a small group of journalists the Basutos thought it right to be very careful. "You never know whom you are talking to," they said, so the story goes, "that gentleman over there, for instance," regarding a substantial but entirely innocuous journalist, "wanted to know a lot of things, and how could we be sure he was not trying to find out when we were going back, so he could tell the Germans."

A Masterly and Simple Solution.

That very canny person, President Kruger, was once called upon, as King Solomon before him, to pass judgment in a matter of ownership. The case was that of two brothers, who had been left a farm and could not agree as to the division which had to be made. They agreed that, rather than take the matter to the courts, they would let President Kruger decide. President Kruger appears to have hesitated about as little as King Solomon did. He instructed the elder brother to make what he considered a fair division, and then he gave first choice to the younger brother. A solution like Solomon's, both masterly and simple, commends the Christian Science Monitor.

FAST DISAPPEARING.

Hard to Find the "Saving Young Man" in these Days.

What, by the way, has become of the young man who used to be known in the old home town as a "saving young man"?

You remember him of course, "back yonder." He used to be held up to the other young men as a model, and when the girls became old enough to "keep company," fond mothers pointed him out as the boy for every right minded girl to consider in all her matrimonial thoughts.

"What kind of a man is this that Mary Smith is going to marry?" one would ask.

"Well, he's a hard worker, and he is saving," would come the reply, and Mary Smith would be regarded as a lucky girl.

In those good old days, hard work and "saving" marked the only royal road to wealth. These qualities also indicated that, as a husband, the "saving" young man would have that essential quality for insuring a happy home—he would be a "good provider."

Go back to the old home town now and look about among the silver-haired citizens who have lived there for years, paid the taxes, maintained the schools, reared children, sent them out into the world with a practical education and substantial views of life, and who are now settled down to the enjoyment of old age and you will find that they were the "saving" young men of their generation.

The young women likewise, were taught the great grace of "saving."

"What kind of a wife for a poor man?" mother used to say to daughter, when daughter asked for some frivolous thing like an extra ribbon or a pair of real Sunday shoes. Also daughter was taught to cook and to sew and to can fruit and to make preserves—all with the idea of some day being the "saving" wife of a "saving" husband.

But down in the old home town now you will not find many saving young men or young women.

"Mother canned 50 quarts of fruit this year," the daughter of an old home town mother said recently. "But I don't see the sense of working so hard. We could buy all the fruit we want for less than it costs to can it."

Daughter is "going with" one of the eligible young men of the old home town. He is the son of a business man, whose father came into the business as a clerk because he was "saving." Now, the son burns up more for gasoline in father's car than ever his father dreamed of spending for his combined pleasures—counting church collections and all. If one should ask, "What sort of a young man is this that 'Hi' Murray's daugher is "going with?" nobody would answer, "Well, he is hard working and saving."

The old fashioned boys and girls are disappearing from the old home town.—Kansas City Star.

Baby's Health In The Spring

The Spring is a time of anxiety to mothers who have little ones in the home. Conditions make it necessary to keep the baby indoors. He is often confined to overheated badly ventilated rooms and catches colds which rack his whole system. To guard against this is a box of Baby's Own Tablets should be kept in the house and an occasional dose given the baby to keep his stomach and bowels working regularly. This will prevent colds; constipation or colic and keep baby well. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

GRAIN MARKET

Oats declined another ½c yesterday, a less active export demand and fine weather acting as a bearish influence which more than offset the bull factor of a good cash demand and light offerings. A setback in corn following yesterday's sharp advance also had a tendency to weaken the oats market. Barley continues comparatively weak, going back another couple of cents, car lots outside, though the car-lot quotations are still 5c to 6c above the local street market price. The local breweries are now off the market for barley.

EARL GREY'S ESTATE LARGE.

London, April 11.—The late Earl Grey, once Governor-General of Canada, left nearly $1,300,000. In his will he bequeated his propery in Prince Rupert, British Columbia, to the present Earl and his own two daughters.

CATTLE MARKET

Trade opened this week with a good demand for anything of fair butcher quality. The very light, thin stuff only was neglected. For handy-weight butcher steers or heifers, anywhere from about 1,000 pounds up and fair to choice in quality, the demand has held good and strong for each succeeding market, and at prices averaging about 25c higher than last week. Good heavy steers have also been in a strong market, prices holding firm, more than one full load going at $13 and up to $13.25. Fat cows and bulls have been in good demand at high prices.

With such a strong market for butcher cattle the market for stockers and feeders has been sympathetically strong, and notwithstanding the higher prices generally prevailing, averaging about 25 cents higher than the previous week for anything good, the trade has been generally active, with plenty of outlet for good stock. The near approach of the grass season has given a healthy stimulus to the stocker trade, a feature this week being the high average prices for good grass cows.

There have been heavy runs of calves all through the week, and, as was to be expected, the market broke considerably from recent high levels. A large proportion of the week's offerings was of the poorest quality, and these suffered a decline of anywhere from $1 to $2. Choice calves were about 50 to 75 cents easier than last week.

Receipts of sheep and lambs continue to be so small as to scarcely constitute a market, prices generally holding steady but firm.

Although hogs did not come down as much as was predicted at the opening market, a weaker feeling generally pervaded the trade. Several of the packing houses set their limit at $20.25, fed and watered, and steadily refused to go beyond that price. The week-end markets, however, settled down to $20.50, fed and watered, which was practically the closing price for the week. Lower prices are again predicted for next week.

Cattle Receipts.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

A HAPPY EVENING

"I am delighted that you came" I said to Merton Grey when he expressed his regret that George was not at home, "I should have had a long, lonely evening had you not called."

"Then I, too, am more than pleased that I came at this time."

I told him that a woman was staying with me, not mentioning her name, but that she was not feeling very well and had retired to her room. I thought perhaps he would ask who it was, but, to my relief, he only said:

"Don't expect me to say I am sorry or I'm not."

What a good time I had. I think he also enjoyed himself. We talked and laughed. I told him of Signor Torretti and that I was going to spend a lot more time at my music than I had done since I married; that the Signor had encourged me to new effort. Then I played for him. All his favourites. Strange, many of them were also mine. It was ten o'clock before I knew it. I rang the bell and asked James to bring us a bite of something for supper. Merton said he wasn't hungry, but I noticed that he ate heartily of the unusually attractive and tasty meal James brought to us.

Ever since the day I exploded wrathfully before him and Mary, James had been singularly thoughtful and accommodating. Instead of disliking him, as I did at first, I had begun to depend upon him and to value him greatly.

ARTISTIC PLACE CARDS.

I told Merton that as soon as George returned I was going to give a dinner.

"Just the kind I want to. George said I might plan it all myself." I said, forgetting that Mr. Gray knew nothing of my position as regarding entertaining; that George thought me incompetent.

"Please invite me!"

"I intended to—if you are a good boy."

"Oh, I'll be very good."

"Very well, then you may come."

This foolish badinge almost made me forget that I was an old married woman; mistress of a beautiful house. I felt as I used to, when I looked and talked nonsense with the boys at home.

"I am thinking of a costume dinner. We had such a good time at Evelyn's party, I should like to do something too. Something different, I mean."

"That's a good idea — a costume dinner. When you decide upon the period, let me know. If you will accept them, I will paint the place cards for you."

"Really! Oh, that would be lovely!" then, suddenly, I remembered what I had heard about the extravagant prices this young artist received for his work. It would be expecting too much of him. He probably had only offered out of a spirit of politeness, and had not expected me to snap him up like that. So I added: "But Mr. Gray, you really you must not think of doing so much for me. Your time is very valuable, I know."

"If you will trust me, I will make them as artistic as I know how," he said in return, entirely ignoring my last little stilted speech.

"I would trust you with anything," I exclaimed delighted that he had not changed his mind.

"You are saying a good deal when you say that," he said very seriously, then lightly, "I'll try not to spoil your dinner."

After that, we discussed the different periods which would give my dinner either the quaintest or the prettiest setting. Finally he rose to go.

"If I may run in again, in a day or two, I will bring you some pictures I have—a book or two, also, showing the dress of the different periods. They may help you to decide."

"Thank you so much! Please do."

After he had gone I went back into the library—we had gone in there for our little supper; it was smaller and more cosy than the drawing room,—and curled up in the big leather chair and thought over all he had said. What a charming man he was. I had so enjoyed my evening with him.

It was long after midnight when I finally crept softly upstairs so as not to waken Mrs. Sexton. I was so happy myself, that I felt an unusual thought fulness even for her,

To-omorrow—Mrs. Sexton is amazed at the Artist's offer.

Humors of the War.

The unfailing sense of humor that sustains the soldier in this war is not as fully appreciatde as it might be at home. It is hard to smile and crack jokes with death and mud tugging at the heart-strings, but the merry quip and joke play a part in keeping up the fighting spirit of the men. The Christmas number of the Maple Leaf Magazine is full of good things, and has a laugh on every page. Some of the leading writers in England are contributors. There is "Dragonet"—George R. Sims—who has discovered Canada in England, and who, after constant intercourse with the Canadian lads overseas, calls Canada "Our Lady of Smiles." To "Dragonet" a "Canadian in khaki and a smile have become synonymous." But it is not only the contributed articles by famous writers that reveal the smiling face of the Canadian soldier and light up the drab background of war. The letters received from the relatives of soldiers, touching questions of separation allowance and pensions, are full of quaint humor that keeps the officers well supplied with mess-room yarns. Here are a few extracts from letters that have found their way into the Maple Leaf Magazine:

"I have not received no pay since my husband 'as gone nowhere."

"We have received yours truly—I am his grandfather and his grandmother. He was born and brought up in this house in answer to yours truly."

"You have changed my little girl into a little boy. Will it make any difference?"

"My Bill has been put in charge of a spittoon. Will I get more pay?"

"I am glad to tell you that my husband has now been reported dead."

"In accordance with instructions on ring paper, I have given birth to twins enclosed in envelope."

A correspondence that brings such gems would keep a whole battalion grinning.

A Link to the Past.

Joseph Mayo, born in Langley, B.C., one hundred years and eight months ago, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. P. Hernandez, in Vancouver, recently. His father was a Hawaiian, the first to arrive on the coast of North America. In his early days Joseph Mayo followed trapping and hunting, and when the Hudson Bay Company established its fort at Langley, he assisted in its construction. The dead pioneer was one of the party that met the steamer Otter and the steamer Beaver when these vessels arrived at the fort with Governor Douglas, Rear Admiral Baynes and other distinguished visitors for the purpose of establishing the mainland capital. On Nov. 19, 1858, the Union Jack was flown over the fort Increases Profanity.

"The telephone," says William Lyon Phelps in the New Republic, "has surely spread the habit of cursing. As Figaro says, 'To get your telephone connection is no longer an achievement; it is a career.' Learning to play the typewriter has also loosened the tongue. A friend wrote me—he is a professor in a woman's college—that in playing his machine he had discovered in his nature depths of depravity hitherto undreamed of. But golf has done more for swearing than any other modern employment; it has made taciturn gentlemen as efficient as teamsters. The disappointments of golf are so immediate, so unexpected, so overwhelming. Nearly all men, and women, too, must swear naturally in their thoughts; else how explain such easily acquired proficiency?"

Japanese Seek Market Outlet.

Plans are now under way to secure a wide market in foreign countries for matches of Japanese manufacture. At one time Japanese matches had an excellent market both in the East and in the West, says the Pathfinder, but, owing to lack of standardization of the product and to the marketing of inferior goods by some of the manufacturers, it finally fell off quite seriously. It is now proposed rigidly to maintain a high standard of quality in all Japanese matches and to have the product of all members of the newly formed match manufacturers' federation inspected before shipment abroad.

Liverpool's Girl Conductors.

"Does this car travel by Dale street or by Church street?" asked an anxious passenger as he stepped aboard at the corner of Tunnel road, Liverpool, during a darkness which could be felt. "I do not know," was the girl conductor's naive reply. When the passenger expressed surprise coupled with pain, as he had fear of missing the last train to Southport, the conductress added the explanation that her "duty was merely to collect the fares," and she "had nothing to do with the route the car might take." With this the belated one had fain to be content.

Home in Halifax roofed with Brantford Asphalt Slates

A handsome roof that defies the weather

An added touch of beauty to any house is a roof of Brantford Asphalt Slates, which are in soft, harmonious shades of reddish brown and dark green. The colors are permanent and unfadeable, being the natural shades of the slate just as it is taken out of the quarries.

It will also prove a very economical roof, because Brantford Asphalt Slates do not split, get loose, absorb water or rot. They are strongly fire-resistant and are classified as non-combustible by the fire insurance companies, and allowed to be used in cities where the most rigid fire-prevention By-laws are in force.

Brantford Asphalt Slates are very moderate in cost. The regular size of the slates and their pliability make them easily and quickly laid, thus saving time and cost of labor. Being made of high grade felt saturated and coated with asphalt, and with a surface of crushed slate, they make a roof that defies the elements and is a permanent part of the building, just like the walls and the foundation.

Brantford Asphalt Slates

are being used more extensively every year for city, country and summer homes, churches, golf clubs, stores, garages, and wherever an artistic effect is desired on a pitch roof.

If you are going to do any building this year or have an old roof that needs replacing, it will be to your advantage to investigate Brantford Asphalt Slates.

JAP SOLDIERS IN WAR GAME

Trench Fighting at Night, Mining and Counter-Mining Included in Modern Combat Practice.

The week's fighting maneuvers of the Engineers' battalion of the Japanese Imperials Guards and First division were carried out on a scale never before attempted, says the East and West News. The war play occurred at Otahara, in the Tochigi prefecture. The operations included rival armies' trench fighting at night, exactly as practiced in the present Europe war. Mining and counter-mining, with many other special features of modern warfare, were practiced. The present type of hand grenades was used.

Japanese were first to introduce these missiles at Port Arthur, but the recent form of the grenade is quite changed and the weapon much improved. The Mills standard bomb, a British invention, was chiefly employed. It is about the size and shape of a large lemon, is made of steel, the outside corrugated into 48 small squares which, upon explosion of the bomb scatter in a wide area. It will not explode until released from the hand of the thrower. A lever, fitted into a slot at the top, extends halfway around the circumference and is held in place by a fixing pin. A small metal ring upon this pin renders its extraction easy when ready to be thrown. In casting, the bomb and lever are tightly grasped in the right hand, the left foot is advanced and the bomb is hurled with an overhead bowling motion, much as in cricket. As the bomb leaves the hand, the lever, actuated by a spring, is loosened and falls to the ground, thus removing an impediment to the true flight of the missle. When the lever flies off, a strong spring is released, forcing the firing pin into a percussion cap. This ignites the fuse, which burns until the main charge of ammonial explodes.

This magic spot ends corns

PLACE it on your throbbing corn tonight. It takes but a second. Relief will come instantly, because the felt ring relieves all pressure.

The medicated spot of wax soothes while it works.

You will wonder why you waited so long.

Tomorrow your corn will not hurt as it has today.

And within 48 hours the corn will come out easily, painlessly.

Paring Is Extremely Dangerous

and only a makeshift. Infection is possible. Harsh and mussy liquids are disagreeable.

Blue-jay is irresistible to the average corn. Once in a while an old and stubborn corn requires a second treatment.

Tonight prove these truths yourself. It costs so little. Then you will never let a corn hurt again.

How Blue-jay Acts

A is a thin, soft pad which stops the pain by relieving the pressure.

B is the B&B wax, which gently undermines the corn. Usually it takes only 48 hours to end the corn completely.

C is rubber adhesive which sticks without wetting. It wraps around the toe and makes the plaster snug and comfortable.

Blue-jay is applied in a jiffy. After that, one doesn't feel the corn. The action is gentle, and applied to the corn alone. So the corn disappears without soreness.

BACKYARD POULTRY PAY

How Seventy-six Hours Gave a Profit of $58.29.

SUGGESTIONS FOR FARMER

Spraying Material Should Be Ordered Early This Year—Keep the Farming Mill Going—Work In the Dairy, Stable and in the Orchard.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

HOW A PROFIT of $58.29 was made from twenty-six hens, which turned the table scraps, and $26.13 worth of feed into $84.42 worth of eggs is described in a recent circular of the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

The birds were not selected with a view to the greatest production possible, but rather to the securing of such a flock as any amateur might go out and purchase. The flock consisted of twenty-six birds—four of which were three-year-old Black Leghorn hens, six White Leghorn pullets and one Black Minorca pullet hatched in May, and the balance were cross-breds Black and White Leghorns, hatched in June. They were not put into winter quarters until well on in November, and it was December 7th before the first egg was laid.

How the Flock Was Kept.

An old wood shed about eleven by twelve feet was utilized as a poultry house. In the south side, fifteen inches from the floor a line of windows two feet wide was placed and above these an opening about eighteen inches wide was made across the entire front. In this a frame, covered with light cotton, was hinged. This frame was kept hooked up to the ceiling through the day, except in the severest weather.

Hoppers of oyster shell, beef scraps and dry mash were kept constantly before the flock. The dry mash consisted of bran, middlings and cornmeal, equal parts, one-half part gluten and one-half part blood flour. A deep straw litter was kept on the floor into which all whole grain feed was scattered.

In the morning, mixed grain, usually cracked corn, wheat and oats, equal parts, was given. At the same time warmed water was given. At noon the water was renewed and all the kitchen waste, such as vegetable parings, was fed. Usually at this time a few handfuls of mixed grain were also scattered.

The methods followed were such as almost any city dweller could follow. A very small place for a house and no yard room are required. By buying pullets in the fall and selling them when poultry is high in the early summer the most will be had out of the flock without interfering in any way with either your own or your neighbor's back-yard garden.

Timely Agricultural Suggestions.

Seed grain and root seeds secured from the best sources available and in ample quantities for spring seeding are a most profitable investment at this time of the year. It is not too late to germinate seeds of various kinds of farm crops to determine their suitability for spring seed. A poor seed sown is a seed wasted—and food is too scarce to waste any of it this year.

Plenty of exercise for the breeding animals will insure stronger and more profitable young.

When the work is not too pressing, get the fanning mill busy to ensure a good supply of sound, plump seed grain free from weed seeds. The oftener the seed is put through the fanning mill the larger and plumper the grain will be, and the fewer the weed seeds in it. Always avoid sowing sunken grain and weed seeds—they are about the poorest investment a man can make.

Secure an amply supply of spraying material now. Bluestone will be required for spraying potatoes, iron sulphate for spraying mustard, lime sulphur for the fruit trees and paris green or arsenate of lead for potato beetles and other insect pests. Be sure to secure the supply of formalin for treating seed grain to prevent smutt and for treating potatoes to prevent scab. One pint of Formalin is sufficient to treat from 20 to 30 bushels of grain and the same amount will treat from 40 to 45 bushels of potatoes. Keep the Formalin bottle well corked and do not leave it in a place where it is likely to be frozen.

Securing farm labor will be the great problem in agriculture this year. Write to the Ontario Government Public Employment Bureau, 15 Queen's Park, and also consult your agricultural representative. Put in your order early with these men and you may get the help you require—and without cost.

The ideal temperature in the dairy stable, combined with good air, is between 50 and 60 degrees Fahrenheit. It is a good plan to have a reliable thermometer hanging at some central point in the stable and note the variation in the temperature from day to day. On fine days turn all the cattle outside for an hour in the sunshine. It may mean a little less milk, but it will be paid for in the improvement of the health of the young stock.

The trees in the apple orchard may be scraped down now, so as to make more effective the later spraying of the trunk and the main branches. Egg masses of the Tussock moth, conspicuously white against the dark bark, may be removed by means of a wire brush or hook on a pole.—Ontario Agricultural College Notes.

Beans contain as much carbon as wheat, and almost double the amount of nitrogen.

When the scissors have lost their edge, open and close them over the neck of a bottle.

Where Life Itself Depends On A Clean Shave

The man who faces a 1918 gas attack with a mask that does not fit quite tight, comes out a casualty—if he comes out at all! Even a two or three days growth of beard under the rubber facing of the mask will let in gas enough to be dangerous—it can be fatal!

That's why clean shaving means more to our boys than comfort—more even than morale—it means life!

Keen as our own troops are on shaving, our American Allies are going us one better. Every soldier under the Stars and Stripes will be supplied with a Safety Razor.

What about your Soldier boy? Has he a razor that will give him a clean and comfortable shave right in the firing line, where his life depends on perfect protection?

The one razor that has stood every test of active service is the Gillette. It does a quick, clean job anywhere. The men who are Gillette-equipped swear by it—and the rest envy, or borrow! Until your boy gets a Gillette Safety Razor, his personal equipment is not what it should be?

German Mayor Has Sense of Humor.

The Prussian town of Altwasser has developed a humorous burgomaster. The Schwaebische Tagwacht says:

"The burgomaster of Altwasser, who has been flooded with anonymous letters accusing him of failing in his duty as regards the food supplies, has caused a reply to his accusers to be posted at the town hall. It reads:

"'I am blamed in letters for the scarcity of potatoes, for the heavy rains and the consequent muddy state of the streets, and for the unlawful appropriation of food cards on the part of many of the inhabitants. Besides the writers of these missives attack me for providing my household with more than I am entitled to and for pocketing public funds as salary.

"'I invite some of these pettifogging spirits, who have no other resource than to besmirch the reputation of their public officials, to come and dine with me any Sunday.

"'They would regret not having stayed at home to partake of the meat with which they are no doubt provided, instead of the cabbage and turnips which they would find representing the joint on my table.'"

Men Must Go Out Shopping.

One result of the replacing of men by women in many of the British industries is the increase of shopping by men unfit by age or physical disability for army service, notes a correspondent. Tradespeople, who have noticed the gradual increase of their men customers, are not at all adverse to the innovation, because they find generally that a larger amount of business can be got through in a given time.

The Strength of the Allies.

"It is safe to say, quoting from Mr Lloyd George's recent statement, that the strength and composition of the British army is as follows: The total forces recruited in England, Scotland and Ireland are five and one half million men to which we must add a million from the Dominions. The armies of France appear to be indomitable and as elastic as ever; and the steady influx of American troops into the country has relieved her heroic people of all further anxiety on the score of man-power. As for material resources, Great Britain and America can offer almost boundless assistance. Their countries are not invaded. Their industrial activity is unimpaired, and their wealth appears inexhaustible.—Ian Hay (Major Ian Hay, M.C.) in the World's Work.

A NECESSITY IN THE HOUSE.

Most of the common ills of life arise from a torpid, sluggish condition of the Liver, Kidneys or Bowels, and because they act on each of these organs in a direct and specific way Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills overcome serious and painful diseases over which ordinary medicines have no control.

Gravitation.

Absolute proof that the gravitational attraction between masses of matter varies with changes in their electrical potential due to electrical changes upon them has been obtained by Dr. Francis E. Nipher in a year of experiments in the laboratory of Washington University, St. Louis. It is said that Dr. Nipher has succeeded in reversing the law of gravity.

Dramatic Ocean Greeting

THOUGH a mere land lubber the call of the sea was too strong for W. H. Boswell, of the Passenger Dept. C. P. R., Charing Cross, London, England, and when he joined up he decided to follow the footsteps of his Viking ancestors. He followed a period of training at one of Britain's great naval bases and then he was was posied to a patrol boat and found his sea legs. That patrol boat has proved a friend in need for many of the passengers and crews sent adrift on the ocean's wide expanse by the horrible Hun, and when the "Calgarian" was sunk she picked up one of her boats with survivors. One of the first to come aboard was Commander Kendall, the navigating officer, and a hearty greeting took place between the gallant C. P. O. S. captain and the erstwhile C. P. R. "Round the world rate expert" which resulted in the latter loaning the former a clean collar, on the understanding that it would be returned to him, so that when in the days to come his children ask, "Father, what did you do in the great war," he will point with pride to the glass encased collar and say, "Son, that was my collar, worn by Capt. Kendall, of Dr. Crippen and 'Empress of Ireland' fame, whom I helped to save from a watery grave when the 'Calgarian' went down in March, 1918."

Captain Kendall, by the way, has had many adventurous experiences since the war broke out—on the English Channel dodging submarines while he brought across refugees to England from Belgium, in the North Sea on decoy ships—perhaps the most dangerous service of all—and more recently in transport work, such as that which culminated in the affair of the "Calgarian." At present he is saying nothing, remembering the warning of Job: "Oh that mine adversary had written a book," but at the end of the war any book he wrote would make Jules Verne seem tame by comparison.

Spring Impurities Clog The Blood

A Tonic Medicine is a Necessity at This Season

A TONIC MEDICINE IS A NECESSITY AT THIS SEASON.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are an all-year-round tonic, blood-builder and nerve restorer. But they are especially valuable in the spring when the system is loaded with impurities as a result of the indoor life of the winter months There is no other season of the year when the blood is so much in need of purifying and enriching, and every dose of these pills helps to make new red blood. In the spring one feels weak and tired—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills give new strength. In the spring the appetite is often poor — Dr. Williams' Pink Pills develop the appeite, tone the stomach and aid weak digestion. It is in the spring that poisons in the blood find an outlet in disfiguring pimples, eruptions and boils—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills speedily clear the skin because they go to the root of the trouble in the blood. In the spring anaemia, rheumatism, neuralgia, erysipelas and many other troubles are most persistent because of poor, weak blood, and it is at this time when all nature takes on new life, that the blood most seriously needs attention. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually renew and enrich the blood, and this new blood reaches every organ and every nerve in the body, bringing new health and new strength to weak, easily tired men, women and children—Here is a bit of proof: Miss Anna Patterson, R.F.D. No. 1, Thorold, Ont., says: "My trouble was one of general weakness, which thinned my blood and gave me at times unbearable headaches, loss of appetite, and also loss in weight. I tried several remedies but without success. Then I heard of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and decided to give them a fair trial. The result is that I feel like a new person. My appetite improved, I gained in weight, my blood is thoroughly purified, and my face cleared of some unsightly pimples which had troubled me. If one good turn deserves another then I have much pleasure in recommending Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

If you need a medicine this spring try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills—they will not disappoint you. These pills are sold by all medicine dealers, or you can get them by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., of Brockville, Ont.

GIRL SAVES A TROOP TRAIN

Flags Approaching Engine After Finding Plot of Wreckers.

TOLEDO, Ohio, — Discovering a tie spiked across the Baltimore & Ohio track, ten miles south of Toledo, near Perrysburg, Grace Doyle, 20 years old, a school teacher at Roachtown, ran down the track, removed her coat, and with it flagged a train approaching rapidly.

It was a freight, followed closely by a heavy troop train. It took the freight crew twenty-five minutes to remove the obstruction.

Several troop trains had passed there within a few days, and it was evident that the person who spiked the tie to the track had information that another was approaching. Federal authorities have been notified.

Once Dishonored But Won Glory

"MONEY lost, little lost; honor lost, much lost; pluck lost, all lost," is an old English saying, and it is no doubt partly due to the fact that the Anglo-Saxon race respects pluck almost above every other quality that Great Britain is what she is. No story finds such a swift response in our hearts as the story of a man refusing to lose his courage and battling with adverse fortune, finally win out. Such was the story of Lt.-Col. Elkington, who lost his rank in the early days of the war, but re-enlisted as a private in the French Foreign Legion, distinguished himself and was eventually restored to his original rank in the British army. It is a story that thrilled England. Now there is another story very much like that of Lt.-Col. Elkington, of a commanding officer cashiered for what was considered an error of judgment or a lack of courage, who re-enlisted as a private, fought for nearly three years, and so distinguished himself that he too has been given back his original rank with his previous seniority.

The name of this second hero is Lt.-Col. Edward Parker Engl. . He went overseas among the firs of the British expeditionary forces, and the disgrace which befell him occurred in the course of the retreat from Mons. He was in command of an ammunition column, and for five days and five nights is said to have had but an hour of sleep. His column was plodding along one black night when a staff officer galloped past and said, "If you don't get a hustle on you will be surrounded." Thinking to save the column, Col. England ordered that some ammunition cases should be thrown away in order that better speed might be made. It is said that more ammunition was abandoned that he had intended. In any event the ammunition cases were found by some troops that were behind him, and the matter was reported. Although Col. England had got his column through safely, he was court-martialed, and it was decided that he had made such a grievous blunder that he could not be again entrusted with a British battalion. He was dropped from the army, and vanished from the ken of his friends.

The disgrace was a severe blow to Col. England, who had but lately recovered from a severe attack of illness, brought about by concussion of the brain, and he remained in hospital for some time. When he was able to leave he decided that a long sea voyage was what he needed, and so departed for South Africa. After arriving in the fall of 1915, ex-Col. England concluded that he could still do his bit, and so under his own name he enlisted as a scout in the South African Horse. He went through a twelve months' campaign in East Africa until the horses gave out and the troopers were dismounted. After that he was transferred to France and became attached to the Devons, with whom he saw some heavy fighting. He was in the "show" at Passchendaele, and got his "blighty touch" in a night raid, a severe wound in the chest, and an arm plentifully sprinkled with shrapnel. He was invalided home, and it was while he was lying in hospital at Nottingham that he learned that official cognizance had been taken of his conduct and that he had been restored to the rank of lieutenant-colonel.

Lt.-Col. England has been soldiering for thirty-two years, according to Hayden Church, who interviewed the hero in England, and tells the story in the Detroit Free Press. He is a Lancashire man and got his commission as a lieutenant in the artillery in 1886. Ten years later he received his captaincy, his majority in 1901, and two years later was advanced to the rank he held at the time war broke out. He had been serving in India, but in August, 1914, happened to be home in England on sick leave. One can well imagine that a man in his physical condition was not fit for the terrific task that the "Old Contemptibles" had to undertake, and with this fact in mind, a civilian jury would probably not have inflicted such severe punishment upon him, for what was, at worst, an error of judgment, made in most trying circumstances. Nevertheless, Col. England does not claim that he was unfairly treated. He was a good soldier and took his medicine.

He did not enter the ranks as a private, giving his age as forty, when he was ten years older, in order to prove that the court-martial that disciplined him had made a mistake. He fought, not for his own reputation, but because he was an Englishman and a soldier. Lt.-Col. England says that if he were to resume his fighting days he would never be an officer. "As a private," he says, "I had an excellent time, lots of fun and no worries. And the boys with me—my chums in arms—were all of the best. The lads of Devon have suffered tremendous losses in this war, but they fight like demons." When asked what he intended to do when he left the service, Lt.-Col. England replied that he hoped to get a little hunting if his arm healed. While he was away serving as a trooper in South East Africa and later as a private in the Devons, his wife was working in a Devonport military hospital. She is a soldier's daughter as well as a soldier's wife, her father being Gen. Boyce Combe, C.B. As the song almost says, "There's something in the Englands after all."

CANADA'S PRIDE

CANADIANS have good reason to be proud of the position Canada holds in the world today. This pride is justified by the activities of her people, by her unlimited natural resources, by her splendid institutions, and particularly by her Industries.

Facts about the immensity of some Canadian industries would astonish most people.

These industries, when viewed in the light of comparison with other countries, are simply tremendous.

The growth of any industry is limited to the number of people it can serve, and that is a fact not often properly appreciated when Canadian industries are compared to similar enterprises in, say, the United States.

For example: the population of the United States exceeds 100,000,000. Opportunity for industries there is almost unlimited. In comparison, Canada with its seven million population is a small country—yet in spite of this comparatively small population, Canada possesses several industries which in actual size rank among the biggest in the world.

In shoemaking, one Canadian concern has developed a volume of business and a service to the Canadian people which is not equalled by another shoe manufacturer anywhere in the world. This concern, if located in the United States, would rank as one of the twelve largest out of some two thousand shoe manufacturers there.

While the sales of the largest shoe manufacturer in the United States—selling to the American people—do not exceed twenty-five cents per capita per year, the sales of Ames Holden McCready to the Canadian people last year were approximately eighty cents per capita.

In a comparative sense, therefore, this Canadian concern is greater than the foremost American shoe manufacturer in the United States.

Thus Ames Holden McCready truly merit the distinction of their title "Shoemakers to the Canadian Nation."

Just imagine for a moment the enormous work of supplying a large portion of Canada's 7,000,000 people with its boots and shoes:

—it requires—huge up-to-date factories equipped with the most modern machinery able to turn out 8,000 pairs of shoes a day.

—it requires—a variety of nearly 800 different styles to meet the requirements of all classes of people, for different grades, shapes and kinds of shoes.

—it requires—the maintenance of six large distributing branches in principal cities from coast to coast, and in these are carried over a million dollars worth of stock, ready for quick delivery to retailers.

—it requires—sixty travelling salesmen to call on the retail trade, because out of approximately 10,000 retail dealers who sell shoes in Canada, more than 5,000 handle A.H.M. Shoes.

—it requires—many other details of organization and equipment, but this brief outline will give you some slight idea of the part that this great shoe concern is playing in the business of supplying footwear to the Canadian people.

You will be interested in these facts, because the next time you buy footwear bearing the A.H.M. Brand, you will know that they are the product of a large and efficient organization making shoes which will in every case give you the greatest value for your money.

Big Jump In Use Of Sugar

Even if Canadians are compelled by the shortage to get along with considerably less sugar than they are now eating, it may console them to know that they are still better off than were their ancestors, who got along with scarcely more than one-twentieth the amount of sugar the present generation has been accustomed to have. According to a pamphlet published by the National Bank of Commerce, the total sugar production of the world, so recently as 1840, was only 1,288,000 tons, whereas in the four years from 1914 to 1918 the average production was more than 19,000,000 tons.

Three hundred years ago, the pamphlet points out, sugar was a rare and precious luxury, reserved only for the tables of royalty, or at best of the wealthiest and most powerful classes. In those days all sugar was cane sugar, for beet sugar was not discovered until 1747. However, in the ten years from 1889 to 1899 beet sugar, thanks to intensive cultivation and great efforts to promote its production, actually constituted three-fifths of the world's supply. Since then, however, cane growth has regained primacy, and since has formed about 55 per cent. of the total.

The United States is the greatest sugar-consuming nation in the world, with Great Britain second. The greatest producers of sugar for export are Cuba, Java, and the insular possessions of the United States. British India is the second largest sugar-producing territory in the world, but consumes its entire production at home.

UNKNOWN LAKES AND RIVERS

Interior of Labrador Found to Possess Many Unmapped Bodies of Water and Streams.

Chains of lakes hitherto unmapped and rivers equally unknown were traversed in the interior of Labrador by the exploring parties of representatives of the National Geographic society and the Carnegie museum, Pittsburgh, which arrived at St. Johns, N F., recently, says a correspondent. The journey covered about 750 miles over a route never before traveled by white men and was made more difficult by the fact that the five Indians who were taken along as guides proved to be unfamiliar with the country.

The party included E. B. C. Todd, curator of ornithology in the Carnegie museum; O. J. Murie, curator of mammals in the same institution, and Alfred Marshall of Chicago.

They left Seven Islands bay on the north side of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, about the end of May and traveled north by canoe and portages, reaching Fort Chimo, near Urgava bay, August 22. In addition to mapping the country, they studied its natural history.

Mr. Todd said the existing maps of a large district were found to be very inaccurate and altogether misleading having been made by guesswork from information supplied by Indians.

JUST ABLE TO CRAWL ABOUT

Mr. Weldon T. Hawkes, Curryville, N.B., writes: "Last spring I was taken very ill with a severe cold. I got wet and it started with a chill. I was sick four weeks, and was just able to crawl about. People all said I had inflammation of the lungs, and I think I did. I told a friend to get me two bottles of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and before the first one was taken my cold and cough were broken up, and the second did its work completely. I am raising a family and I find that it is a good medicine for the children."

There is no remedy that will cure stubborn colds or coughs, the kind that won't let go, like Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup.

It allays the inflammation, soothes the irritation, heals the diseased mucous lining of the lungs and bronchial tubes, and rids the system completely of all the bad effects of lingering coughs and colds.

There are so many spurious "Pine" preparations on the market that you should see you get "Dr. Woods" when you ask for it.

Put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c. and 50c.; manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited. Toronto, Ont.

Spring Impurities Clog The Blood

A Tonic Medicine is a Necessity at This Season

A TONIC MEDICINE IS A NECESSITY AT THIS SEASON.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are an all-year-round tonic, blood-builder and nerve restorer. But they are especially valuable in the spring when the system is loaded with impurities as a result of the indoor life of the winter months There is no other season of the year when the blood is so much in need of purifying and enriching, and every dose of these pills helps to make new red blood. In the spring one feels weak and tired—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills give new strength. In the spring the appetite is often poor — Dr. Williams' Pink Pills develop the appeite, tone the stomach and aid weak digestion. It is in the spring that poisons in the blood find an outlet in disfiguring pimples, eruptions and boils—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills speedily clear the skin because they go to the root of the trouble in the blood. In the spring anaemia, rheumatism, neuralgia, erysipelas and many other troubles are most persistent because of poor, weak blood, and it is at this time when all nature takes on new life, that the blood most seriously needs attention. Dr. Willams' Pink Pills actually renew and enrich the blood, and this new blood reaches every organ and every nerve in the body, bringing new health and new strength to weak, easily tired men, women and children—Here is a bit of proof: Miss Anna Patterson, R.F.D. No. 1, Thorold, Ont., says: "My trouble was one of general weakness, which thinned my blood and gave me at times unbearable headaches, loss of appetite, and also loss in weight. I tried several remedies but without success. Then I heard of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and decided to give them a fair trial. The result is that I feel like a new person. My appetite improved, I gained in weight, my blood is thoroughly purified, and my face cleared of some unsightly pimples which had troubled me. If one good turn deserves another then I have much pleasure in recommending Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

If you need a medicine this spring try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills—they will not disappoint you. These pills are sold by all medicine dealers, or you can get them by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., of Brockville, Ont.

GIRL SAVES A TROOP TRAIN

Flags Approaching Engine After Finding Plot of Wreckers.

TOLEDO, Ohio, — Discovering a tie spiked across the Baltimore & Ohio track, ten miles south of Toledo, near Perrysburg, Grace Doyle, 20 years old, a school teacher at Roachtown, ran down the track, removed her coat, and with it flagged a train approaching rapidly.

It was a freight, followed closely by a heavy troop train. It took the freight crew twenty-five minutes to remove the obstruction.

Several troop trains had passed there within a few days, and it was evident that the person who spiked the tie to the track had information that another was approaching. Federal authorities have been notified.

Once Dishonored But Won Glory

"MONEY lost, little lost; honor lost, much lost; pluck lost, all lost," is an old English saying, and it is no doubt partly due to the fact that the Anglo-Saxon race respects pluck almost above every other quality that Great Britain is what she is. No story finds such a swift response in our hearts as the story of a man refusing to lose his courage and battling with adverse fortune, finally win out. Such was the story of Lt.-Col. Elkington, who lost his rank in the early days of the war, but re-enlisted as a private in the French Foreign Legion, distinguished himself and was eventually restored to his original rank in the British army. It is a story that thrilled England. Now there is another story very much like that of Lt.-Col. Elkington, of a commanding officer cashiered for what was considered an error of judgment or a lack of courage, who re-enlisted as a private, fought for nearly three years, and so distinguished himself that he too has been given back his original rank with his previous seniority.

The name of this second hero is Lt.-Col. Edward Parker England. He went overseas among the first of the British expeditionary forces, and the disgrace which befell him occurred in the course of the retreat from Mons. He was in command of an ammunition column, and for five days and five nights is said to have had but an hour of sleep. His column was plodding along one black night when a staff officer galloped past and said, "If you don't get a hustle on you will be surrounded." Thinking to save the column, Col. England ordered that some ammunition cases should be thrown away in order that better speed might be made. It is said that more ammunition was abandoned that he had intended. In any event the ammunition cases were found by some troops that were behind him, and the matter was reported. Althoug' Col. England had got his column through safely, he was court-martialed, and it was decided that he had made such a grievous blunder that he could not be again entrusted with a British battalion. He was dropped from the army, and vanished from the ken of his friends.

The disgrace was a severe blow to Col. England, who had but lately recovered from a severe attack of illness, brought about by concussion of the brain, and he remained in hospital for some time. When he was able to leave he decided that a long sea voyage was what he needed, and so departed for South Africa. After arriving in the fall of 1915, ex-Col. England concluded that he could still do his bit, and so under his own name he enlisted as a scout in the South African Horse. He went through a twelve months' campaign in East Africa until the horses gave out and the troopers were dismounted. After that he was transferred to France and became attached to the Devons, with whom he saw some heavy fighting. He was in the "show" at Passchendaele, and got his "blighty touch" in a night raid, a severe wound in the chest, and an arm plentifully sprinkled with shrapnel. He was invalided home, and it was while he was lying in hospital at Nottingham that he learned that official cognizance had been taken of his conduct and that he had been restored to the rank of lieutenant-colonel.

Lt.-Col. England has been soldiering for thirty-two years, according to Hayden Church, who interviewed the hero in England, and tells the story in the Detroit Free Press. He is a Lancashire man and got his commission as a lieutenant in the artillery in 1886. Ten years later he received his captaincy, his majority in 1901, and two years later was advanced to the rank he held at the time war broke out. He had been serving in India, but in August, 1914, happened to be home in England on sick leave. One can well imagine that a man in his physical condition was not fit for the terrific task that the "Old Contemptibles" had to undertake, and with this fact in mind, a civilian jury would probably not have inflicted such severe punishment upon him, for what was, at worst, an error of judgment, made in most trying circumstances. Nevertheless, Col. England does not claim that he was unfairly treated. He was a good soldier and took his medicine.

He did not enter the ranks as a private, giving his age as forty, when he was ten years older, in order to prove that the court-martial that disciplined him had made a mistake. He fought, not for his own reputation, but because he was an Englishman and a soldier. Lt.-Col. England says that if he were to resume his fighting days he would never be an officer. "As a private," he says, "I had an excellent time, lots of fun and no worries. And the boys with me—my chums in arms—were all of the best. The lads of Devon have suffered tremendous losses in this war, but they fight like demons." When asked what he intended to do when he left the service, Lt.-Col. England replied that he hoped to get a little hunting if his arm healed. While he was away serving as a trooper in South East Africa and later as a private in the Devons, his wife was working in a Devonport military hospital. She is a soldier's daughter as well as a soldier's wife, her father being Gen. Boyce Combe, C.B. As the song almost says, "There's something in the Englands after all."

CANADA'S PRIDE

CANADIANS have good reason to be proud of the position Canada holds in the world today. This pride is justified by the activities of her people, by her unlimited natural resources, by her splendid institutions, and particularly by her Industries.

Facts about the immensity of some Canadian industries would astonish most people.

These industries, when viewed in the light of comparison with other countries, are simply tremendous.

The growth of any industry is limited to the number of people it can serve, and that is a fact not often properly appreciated when Canadian industries are compared to similar enterprises in, say, the United States.

For example: the population of the United States exceeds 100,000,000. Opportunity for industries there is almost unlimited. In comparison, Canada with its seven million population is a small country—yet in spite of this comparatively small population, Canada possesses several industries which in actual size rank among the biggest in the world.

In shoemaking, one Canadian concern has developed a volume of business and a service to the Canadian people which is not equalled by another shoe manufacturer anywhere in the world. This concern, if located in the United States, would rank as one of the twelve largest out of some two thousand shoe manufacturers there.

While the sales of the largest shoe manufacturer in the United States—selling to the American people—do not exceed twenty-five cents per capita per year, the sales of Ames Holden McCready to the Canadian people last year were approximately eighty cents per capita.

In a comparative sense, therefore, this Canadian concern is greater than the foremost American shoe manufacturer in the United States.

Thus Ames Holden McCready truly merit the distinction of their title "Shoemakers to the Canadian Nation."

Just imagine for a moment the enormous work of supplying a large portion of Canada's 7,000,000 people with its boots and shoes:

—it requires—huge up-to-date factories equipped with the most modern machinery able to turn out 8,000 pairs of shoes a day.

—it requires—a variety of nearly 800 different styles to meet the requirements of all classes of people, for different grades, shapes and kinds of shoes.

—it requires—the maintenance of six large distributing branches in principal cities from coast to coast, and in these are carried over a million dollars worth of stock, ready for quick delivery to retailers.

—it requires—sixty travelling salesmen to call on the retail trade, because out of approximately 10,000 retail dealers who sell shoes in Canada, more than 5,000 handle A.H.M. Shoes.

—it requires—many other details of organization and equipment, but this brief outline will give you some slight idea of the part that this great shoe concern is playing in the business of supplying footwear to the Canadian people.

You will be interested in these facts, because the next time you buy footwear bearing the A.H.M. Brand, you will know that they are the product of a large and efficient organization making shoes which will in every case give you the greatest value for your money.

Big Jump In Use Of Sugar

Even if Canadians are compelled by the shortage to get along with considerably less sugar than they are now eating, it may console them to know that they are still better off than were their ancestors, who got along with scarcely more than one-twentieth the amount of sugar the present generation has been accustomed to have. According to a pamphlet published by the National Bank of Commerce, the total sugar production of the world, so recently as 1840, was only 1,288,000 tons, whereas in the four years from 1914 to 1918 the average production was more than 19,000,000 tons.

Three hundred years ago, the pamphlet points out, sugar was a rare and precious luxury, reserved only for the tables of royalty, or at best of the wealthiest and most powerful classes. In those days all sugar was cane sugar, for beet sugar was not discovered until 1747. However, in the ten years from 1889 to 1899 beet sugar, thanks to intensive cultivation and great efforts to promote its production, actually constituted three-fifths of the world's supply. Since then, however, cane growth has regained primacy, and since has formed about 55 per cent. of the total.

The United States is the greatest sugar-consuming nation in the world, with Great Britain second. The greatest producers of sugar for export are Cuba, Java, and the insular possessions of the United States. British India is the second largest sugar-producing territory in the world, but consumes its entire production at home.

UNKNOWN LAKES AND RIVERS

Interior of Labrador Found to Possess Many Unmapped Bodies of Water and Streams.

Chains of lakes hitherto unmapped and rivers equally unknown were traversed in the interior of Labrador by the exploring parties of representatives of the National Geographic society and the Carnegie museum, Pittsburgh, which arrived at St. Johns, N. F., recently, says a correspondent. The journey covered about 750 miles over a route never before traveled by white men and was made more difficult by the fact that the five Indians who were taken along as guides proved to be unfamiliar with the country.

The party included E. B. C. Todd, curator of ornithology in the Carnegie museum; O. J. Murie, curator of mammals in the same institution, and Alfred Marshall of Chicago.

They left Seven Islands bay on the north side of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, about the end of May and traveled north by canoe and portages, reaching Fort Chimo, near Urgava bay, August 22. In addition to mapping the country, they studied its natural history.

Mr. Todd said the existing maps of a large district were found to be very inaccurate and altogether misleading having been made by guesswork from information supplied by Indians.

CHILL STARTS COLD WAS SICK FOUR WEEKS
JUST ABLE TO CRAWL ABOUT

Mr. Weldon T. Hawkes, Curryville, N.B., writes: "Last spring I was taken very ill with a severe cold. I got wet and it started with a chill. I was sick four weeks, and was just able to crawl about. People all said I had inflammation of the lungs, and I think I did. I told a friend to get me two bottles of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and before the first one was taken my cold and cough were broken up, and the second did its work completely. I am raising a family and I find that it is a good medicine for the children."

There is no remedy that will cure stubborn colds or coughs, the kind that won't let go, like Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup.

It allays the inflammation, soothes the irritation, heals the diseased mucous lining of the lungs and bronchial tubes, and rids the system completely of all the bad effects of lingering coughs and colds.

There are so many spurious "Pine" preparations on the market that you should see you get "Dr. Woods" when you ask for it.

Put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c. and 50c.; manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Pugsley, Dingman and Co., Limited, Toronto.

Comfort Soap Premiums are all right but — the way they are now advancing in price—and going down in quality—has simply caused us to stop buying new supplies—until after the war, at least.

But, of course, we wouldn't think of giving you less value—so—you'll now get a bigger, much bigger, bar of Comfort Soap at the same price but the new wrappers are not good for premiums.

Wouldn't you rather have the bigger bar?

You certainly would—if you saw the kind of premiums now being offered us by the makers.

You certainly would—if like thousands of others, you used Comfort Soap because of its splendid merit without saving the wrappers.

You certainly would—for in these War times you can do without premiums but you must have soap—the Comfort kind—and as much as you can get for your money.

Now at Grocer's. Same price.

All old Comfort wrappers still out will be redeemed as before.

SECRET OF FRENCH CULTURE

Vibrating Balance Between Head and Heart at Top Speed, Is Deduction of Magazine Writer.

Intensely alive, is the chief impression one has of the French, writes John Galsworthy in the Atlantic. They balance between head and heart at top speed in a sort of electric and eternal see-saw. It is this perpetual quick change which gives them, it seems to me, their special grip on actuality; they never fly into the cloud regions of theories and dreams; their heads have not time before their hearts have intervened, their hearts not time before their heads cry, "Hold!" They apprehend both worlds, but with such rapid alternation that they surrender to neither.

The secret of French culture lies in this vibrating balance; from quick marriage of mind, and heart, reason and sense, in the French nature, all the clear created forms of French life arise, forms recognized as forms with definite utility attached. Controlled expression is the result of action and reaction. Controlled expression is the essence of culture, because it alone makes a sufficiently clear appeal in a world which is itself the result of the incalculable interplay of complementary or dual laws and forces.

French culture is near to the real heart of things, because it has a sort of quick sanity that never loses its way; or, when it does, very rapidly recovers the middle of the road.

PRINCESS IS CZAR'S MANAGER

Eudoxia, Eldest Daughter of Ruler of Bulgaria, Said to Be Cleverest of Family.

Princess Eudoxia, the eldest daughter of the czar of Bulgaria, is said to be the cleverest member of Ferdinand's family. She manages the Sofia palace, receives ministers and envoys and apologizes to them for Ferdinand's mysterious absences; runs Ferdinand's farm at Vitosch when Ferdinand is not hiding there; directs his business speculations and his enormous private wealth, and, in particular, runs his big land-development scheme around Chaskovo, near the Turkish frontier.

Eudoxia is black-eyed, lively and pretty, with an ambition, Sofia declares, to be married quickly, and cynics add that Ferdinand chose the German side instead of the allies' because Germany has vast supplies of bridegrooms of royal, princely and ducal blood. In Sofia, Eudoxia is known as "Balkanske Dieva"—the Maid of the Balkans. In summer she makes solitary tours in the hills, puts up in shepherds' huts, and shocks Ferdinand, who is a timid man with a sharp distrust of his subjects, and a faith, inherited from a thousand years of Bourbon ancestors, that women, like men, of royal blood are three times sacred.

Trying to Do Their Bit.

While nearly every woman is trying to do her bit in some way, there are at least a hundred thousand other fair ones who believe they can serve their country by breaking into the movies, notes a New York critic. That is why every motion-picture office is crowded with applicants and why motion-picture managers are busy men these days of frantic filmdom. It requires much patience, nerve and sometimes a set of burglar's tools to enable a would-be actress to reach a manager, however, but an overdressed woman of rather ripe years gushed her way past the array of office boys and clerks into the sanctum of the man who hires and fires. "I wish to become a movie actress," she announced. "I feel that I have within me the makings of a great impersonator of the silent drama." "Have you ever had any experience, madam?" asked the manager. "Miss, if you please," simpered the applicant. "No, I haven't any experience. My face is my fortune." "Well, you need not worry about the income tax, if that's the case," grunted the manager. "Don't slam the door."

FIFTY TONS OF FOOD BURNED.

Toronto, April 11. — That nearly 100,000 pounds of vegetables and apples had been destroyed at the western crematory and the Don destructor between Thursday, April 4, and Wednesday, April 10, is the announcement of Street Commissioner Wilson.

At the crematory 19,335 pounds of turnips and onions were destroyed. At the destructor 60,820 pounds of onions, 10,100 pounds of turnips, and 6,400 pounds of apples were fed into the furnaces.

All these foodstuffs, Commissioner Wilson said, were so rotten that they could not be used for food. They were sent to the destructor and the crematory by the commission merchants and others by whom they had apparently been held.

"And I understand that there is quite a bit more that will be sent to us to be destroyed," said Mr. Wilson.

ME MINISTER'S DAY OFF

d George Has Been Known to Dig Out a Badger Just as a Holiday Pastime.

he picturesque account which has given of the prime minister's agriural activities on the Sussex farm he occasion of his recent vacation robably suggestive only of the verlity displayed by him in the matter oliday making.

r. Lloyd George has been even wn to dig out a badger, says Lon- Tit-Bits. In the vestibule of his ial residence may be seen a magcent stuffed specimen which he ed to bring to the surface some s ago on Lord Cowdray's estates in same county.

is doubtful, indeed, whether, ex- in the matter of arboriculture uits, the present prime minister derived a precedent from any of predecessors. The nearest apch, perhaps, is Mr. Balfour, who s in for farming at his Scottish e at Whittingehame, where some ndid cattle have been turned out.

he late Lord Salisbury found his cipal source of recreation away n the cares of office in his laboraat Hatfield house, where he followed the peculiar bent of his family in scientific and electrical pursuits.

Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, who was an omnivorous reader, was never so happy as when staying at his beloved Dover; Mr. Asquith is credited with a passion for novel reading; Lord Rosebery, whose literary tastes are well known, spends most of his time between Mentmore and his Scottish seat; while Mr. Gladstone, when not at Dollis hill, enjoyed a sea trip or a sojourn at some east coast resort.

For Winning Battles.

It is understood that the brilliant services of the late Sir Stanley Maude will be recognized by a substantial pecuniary grant to his widow and family. Had he lived, it is certain that the House of Commons would have made him a grant in accordance with the well established precedent.

After the South African War Lord Roberts was created an earl and given grant of £100,000, whilst Lord Kitchener, who had, after his achievements of Omdurman, Khartoum, and Fashoda, been granted £30,000 and a peerage, received a viscounty and a grant of £50,000.

The Duke of Wellington was allowed £600,000 in addition to other grants, and the services of Lord Nelson were recognized with an annuity of £2,000 per annum for three heirs. —Tit-Bits.

2,600 War Honors Granted.

A list of war honors filling thirty pages of the London Gazette was issued for publication on three successive days. The list is made up as follows: Bar to Distinguished Service Order, 7; Distinguished Service Order, 33; second bar to Military Cross, 2; bar to Military Cross, 32; Military Cross, 426; second bar to Military Medal, 1; bar to Military Medal, 87; Military Medal, 1,680; Military Service Medal, 209; French decorations and medals, 182.

A Warning.

The Commission of Conservation issues a note of warning in connection with the lack of coal. "Unless all signs fail," it states, "the coal shortage next winter will be more acute than this winter, and every effort should be exerted to provide a supply of dry hardwood. Farmers and villagers will be expected to look after themselves, but in cities and towns the responsibility is devolving upon the municipal authorities. These should lose no time in organizing to have wood cut, hauled and stored to dry during the summer. If this is not done, the situation next winter may be very serious indeed." The commission also urge the tapping of every maple tree to conserve the sugar supply.

Fearless Japanese Official.

Of all the eccentric characters in Japan, one of the most famous and distinguished is probably Viscount Dr. Inajiro Tajiri, president of the imperial board of audit. He flatters nobody, not excepting himself, says a correspondent, and is feared by all who are not sincere. The late Prince Katsura was once scolded by him, and not long ago Baron Shibusawa waxed hot in anger at a public meeting as he rose to refute the charges of commercial corruption which Viscount Tajiri had made against Japan's business world at large. He is outspoken when he thinks the occasion demands outspokenness. Fearlessness of public opinion or ridicule is dramatically exemplified in the very simple and unpretentious life that he is leading. His food is of the simplest variety. He daily carries to the office a bento box filled with rice and some pickled plums, and during the past 40 years he has ever stuck to his Spartan lunch.

Fish at Reasonable Price.

The Canadian government's venture to supply the public with fish at a reasonable price has proved a success. A refrigerator service from Nova Scotia to Ontario was provided, and the government's scheme was advertised. In one week there were three cars carrying approximately 60,000 pounds of fish, as against normal shipments of 5,000 pounds. The varieties sold under the government's plan, which provides that the buyer shall take the whole fish, are haddock and market cod. These were the only ones available in quantities to justify the experiment. Haddock is well known; market cod is practically a newcomer.

Migration of Caribou.

From Dawson, Yukon territory, Dominion of Canada, comes news of the migration of caribou, says the Christian Science Monitor. Great hordes are in the vicinity of Forty Mile river and at various other points. The total number of animals moving southward in search of food is estimated at 1,000,000 head. It is characteristic of the time that the migration would hardly have been known outside of Yukon territory had it not been necessary to explain officially that occupancy of the roads by the caribou interfered with the carriage of the mails.

Doctors Stand Amazed at Power of Bon-Opto to Make Weak Eyes Strong---According to Dr. Lewis

Guaranteed to Strengthen Eyesight 50% In One Week's Time in Many Instances

Free Prescription You Can Have Filled and Use at Home

Victims of eye strain other eye weaknesses, and those who glasses, will be glad to know that ding to Dr. Lewis there is real hope help for them. Many whose eyes failing say they have had their eyes ed by this remarkable prescription many who once wore glasses say have thrown them away. One man after using it: "I was almost blind. d not see to read at all. Now I can everything without my glasses and yes do not hurt any more. At night would pain dreadfully. Now they fine all the time. It was like a cle to me.' A lady who used it says: atmosphere seemed hazy with or out glasses, but after using this pretion for 15 days everything seems . I can read even fine print without glasses." Another who used it says: as bothered with eye strain caused verworked, tired eyes which induced headaches. I have worn glasses for al years both for distance and work, without them I could not read by name on an envelope or the type- on the machine before me. I can oth now and have discarded my long nce glasses altogether. I can count fluttering leaves on the trees across street now, which for several years looked like a dim green blur to me. cannot express my joy at what it has for me."

It is believed that thousands who wear es can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by the use of this prescription. Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and let it dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation and redness will quickly disappear. If your eyes bother you even a little it is your duty to take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have saved their sight if they had cared for their eyes in time.

Note: Another prominent Physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Yes the Bon-Opto prescription is truly a wonderful eye remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. I have used it very successfully in my own practice on patients whose eyes were strained through overwork or near sightedness. I can highly recommend it in case of weak, watery, aching, smarting, itching, burning eyes, red lids, blurred vision or for eyes inflamed from exposure to smoke, sun, dust or wind. It is one of the very few preparations that should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family." Bon-Opto, referred to above, is not a patent medicine, or a secret remedy. It is an ethical preparation, the formula being printed on the package. The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent in one week's time in many instances or refund the money. It can be obtained from any good druggist and is sold in this city by

The Warne Drug Company.

And the treatment that gave me health and strength, new interest in life, I want to pass on to you, that you, too, may enjoy the priceless boon of health.

Are you unhappy, unfit for your duties? Write and tell me how you feel and I will send you ten days' FREE trial of a home treatment to meet your individual needs, together with references to women in Canada who have passed through your troubles and regained health; or you can secure this FREE treatment for your daughter, sister or mother.

If you suffer from pain in the head, back, or bowels, feeling of weight and dragging down sensations, falling or displacement of internal organs, bladder irritation with frequent urination, obstinate constipation or piles, pain in the sides regularly or irregularly, bloating, dyspepsia, extreme nervousness, depressed spirits, melancholy, desire to cry, fear of something evil about to happen, creeping feeling up the spine, palpitation, hot flashes, weariness, sallow complexion, with dark circles under the eyes, pain in the left breast or a general feeling that life is not worth living, I invite you to send to-day for my complete ten days' treatment entirely free and postpaid, to prove to yourself that these ailments can be easily and surely overcome at your own home, without the expense of hospital treatment, or the dangers of an operation. Women everywhere are escaping the surgeon's knife by knowing of my simple method of home treatment, and when you have been benefited, my sister, I shall only ask you to pass the good word along to some other sufferer. My home treatment is for all.—young or old.

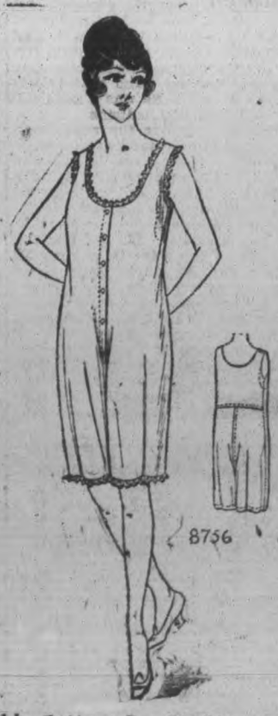
THE EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

The Patterns Are Guaranteed to Give Excellent Satisfaction

LADY'S COMBINATION CORSET COVER.



A very new and practical idea for a woman's undergarment is introduced in No. 8756. It is patterned after the athletic underwear worn by men, and it will prove equally as comfortable. It is a combination of corset cover and open drawers, and it closes at centre front. There is a seam across the waistline at the back to insure a smooth fit. The neck is cut quite low and round and it is shaped so that it does not require any ribbons. Armhole shields are stitched to the inside of the garment. Cambric, long cloth or crossbar muslin may be used.

The lady's combination corset cover pattern No. 8756 is cut in seven sizes—36 to 48 inches bust measure. As on the figure, the 36 inch size requires 3¾ yards 27 inch, 2¼ yards 36 inch or 2¼ yards 36 inch, with 3½ yards of edging. Price

This Pattern Can Be Obtained From the Examiner Office on Payment of 15 Cents.

OUR DALY SHORT STORY

A Soldier Dog

By ETHEL HOLMES

When we heard that the Germans were about to invade France my brother, Pierre, and I contended which should join the colors—for we were both exempt from military service—the other to remain with mother. She decided the matter by telling us that we must both go to the defense of our country; and so we did.

Pierre had a small dog of mongrel breed which was very much attached to him and he was as much attached to the dog. My brother who was an admirer of the great Napoleon had named him Nap.

Nap knew as well as any of us that something of great importance was transpiring in the family and that his master was concerned in it. He hung about Pierre all the day that we were preparing for our departure and when we left home, seeing us kiss our mother good-by, he knew very well that we were going away. He trotted along beside us for some distance when Pierre stopped and taking him in his arms said to him:

"Now, Nap, I must say good-by to you. Go back home and take good care of mother."

Nap must have understood what he said for he whined pitifully. Pierre released him, and we walked on, Nap looking at us wistfully wagging his tail, his affection for his master struggling with his sense of obedience. The former soon conquered and he came after us, cringing and whining to be permitted to go with us. Pierre tried in every way to drive him back, and failed. I suggested that we take him along with us and have him trained for carrying messages or hunting out the wounded on the battlefield. Pierre consented and when he called to Nap, the dog dashed to his side springing in the air for joy.

Pierre and I enlisted in the same regiment and left Nap to be trained at the training school for dogs. But they could not keep him, he ran away and hunted through the army till he found his beloved master. It was then suggested that Pierre train him, and Pierre was detailed for this duty.

Nap was found to be so efficient in carrying messages that after awhile he was used almost exclusively for this purpose. He seemed to know, when a message was tied to his collar, the nature of the duty required of him, and soon became very expert in running the gantlet of the enemy's fire, taking advantage of any cover within his reach, such as high weeds or grass, logs, fences or woods.

Nap was sent with a message one day and when [illegible] reply was badly wounded. He was carried to the hospital for animals and was given every care. It was necessary to keep him confined till his wound had healed and when this was effected he started off on a run to join his master. But he soon found out how weak he was and proceeded more leisurely. Nevertheless, when he had spent some time in Pierre's lap licking his hand and Pierre was called to the trenches—where Nap was never allowed—the dog appeared in the general's tent, and looking up at the commander wagged his tail and whined for another message to carry. Many a soldier has been eager to rejoin his command on recovering from a wound, but Nap is the only dog I have ever known to perform this act of heroism.

I had the misfortune to lose my brother, Pierre, during the struggle for Verdun. He was reported among the missing after one of the attacks made on our works by the Germans, and his body was not found for several days, when we had recovered ground that we had lost.

After the fight our regiment was given a rest. Nap looked everywhere for his master. When he did not find him he began to be troubled. When a whole day had passed and Pierre did not appear the dog remained with our company waiting for him to return. After two or three days Nap must have made up his mind that his master had been killed, for he showed intense grief.

When the regiment was ordered on duty again we pushed forward several hundred yards. Nap went with us. After some fighting I missed the dog and concluded to make a search for him. While doing so I entered a wood. Hearing a moan I followed the direction from which it came and soon came upon Nap beside his master's dead body.

Pierre was given a soldier's burial and a wooden cross was erected over the grave. Little Nap alone refused to leave the spot where his master lay. I took food to him but he would not touch it. An order came from the general to take him to headquarters, as he was needed for an important service. Several men successively tried to get the dog away from his master's grave. They all failed. Whereupon I went to him, stroked him, and taking him in my arms carried him to headquarters. He was petted, but showed no response. Then a message was tied to his collar and he was told where to take it. He took it to his master's grave.

Nap stayed there till the enemy made another rush upon our works. After the fight I found his dead body full of wounds. Had he been left alone he would have died of starvation. As it was, he died a soldier's death.

I gave him a soldier's burial.

You can have a wealth of Beautiful Hair

Nothing equals an aureole of beautiful hair as a frame for a pretty face. Without a background of nice hair a really pretty face frequently becomes plain but, with it, unattractive features assume life and beauty.

Every woman can increase her natural charm by using Newbro's Herpicide. Herpicide makes hair beautiful. Dandruff saps the vitality of the hair. Herpicide applied intelligently and regularly, checks this destruction of hair life and prevents the hair from falling out, giving it a snap and luster, a soft silky fluffiness which can be acquired in no other way.

Applications may be obtained at the best barber shops and hair dressing parlors.

The Moon's Warning

By ALAN HINSDALE

Many years ago, before steam had completely displaced sails for long ocean voyages, I was mate on a bark-rigged ship running between the Arabian coast and New York.

One night when we were anchored off a small town not far south of Bourut, the captain, fearing a mutiny, concluded to take the crew ashore for amusement. He left me in charge of the ship with two men, but he had no sooner disappeared than they took a boat and followed him. I knew that in their present mood I could not prevent them, and did not try to do so.

It was very hot, and taking off my clothes I sat on the deck smoking a cigar. The moon was near the full, but was obscured by the clouds. Presently there was a break in them and looking over the water in the direction of the land, I saw a tiny flash. This led me to strain my eyes on the point where I had seen it, but I could discover nothing except a repetition of the flash at stated intervals of two or three seconds.

Had I not been familiar with the region and the people I might have wondered till doomsday what it meant. But I knew the Arab well, and I was not long in coming to the conclusion that what I saw was the glitter of the moonlight on a knife in the grasp of one of these Arab devils swimming hand over hand.

My first thought was to arm myself; but at once remembered that the captain, fearing mutiny, had locked up every weapon on the ship and had the key with him. I confess this frightened me, for I was absolutely defenseless. I looked about for some sort of club, but saw nothing handy. Besides, if the robber could get on the ship without my being at his point of boarding he would probably be so agile that I could not hit him.

An Arab's clothing is easily thrown off, and for purposes of defense, they keep their bodies oiled. Remembering this, I hurried to the gallery, where I found a bottle of oil used for cooking and in two or three minutes had smeared myself from head to foot. Then I ran on deck and concealed myself behind a lifeboat, hoping to take my enemy unawares.

Although my supposition that a thief was coming was based entirely upon seeing a succession of flashes in the moonlight, I was correct in my reasoning in every particular. Presently from my concealment I saw a black object floating without the slightest sound on the port side of the ship. There were no flashes, for the man's hands were under water. Indeed, it was swimming hand over hand that had betrayed him. Then I saw a black head seemingly resting on the gunwale. The fellow was looking over the deck for a guard. His body next appeared and he dropped to the deck with no more sound than would have been made by a cat.

There was nothing on deck for him to steal, and I knew that he would go down the companionway to look for loot below. To do this he must pass within a few yards of the boat behind which I was concealed.

He first satisfied himself that the ship was deserted, then made for the companion way. Just as he was about to descend I jumped for him from behind, making it my principal object to get a hold upon his right wrist, where I presume he carried his knife. I jumped upon him from his right and caught his wrist. Despite the fact that it was oiled, I held it for a few minutes. But I felt a blow on the arm that held it and warm blood running down above my elbow. The dagger was in his left hand.

I had an advantage in being behind him. With my chest against his back, I had an arm on each side of him and secured his dagger wrist with my left hand. He had by this time freed his right hand but before he could turn himself to oppose me I had his right wrist in my grasp and with my right knuckles dealt the back of his left hand a blow that forced him to drop his dagger. He made a dive to take it up with the hand that was free, but before he could do so I had kicked it into the port scuppers.

Then followed a wrestling match between two men, both of whom were stripped and oiled. The fight depended on which could get the knife. For perhaps ten minutes first one then the other got the upper hand. We drifted to where the weapon lay, and I made a grab for it, and seized it. But at this time the thief had me under, and before I could put the blade into him he freed himself and in an instant was over the gunwale and in the water.

I was so enraged at his escape that, like a fool, I threw the knife at him. All he had to do was to dive for it, return and kill me. He went down, but luckily as he came up with the knife, I heard the sound of oars. The crew was returning. The thief swam away as fast as he could.

When the crew came aboard they found me besmeared with blood that had come from a flesh wound in my arm. While the captain was binding up the wound I recited my adventure to an attentive audience. The crew were much displeased at the desertion of the men who had been left with me. Indeed, my adventure changed the whole situation, and from that time every man behaved himself as became a true sailor.

Deliveries by Ford One-Ton Truck

THE commercial car is looked upon today as a necessity by progressive business firms who have hauling and delivering problems to consider.

Wholesale or retail merchants who must deliver quantities of merchandise have found the horse-drawn delivery to be too slow, expensive, and entirely inadequate.

The Ford truck, with a single driver, will do more work and cover more ground than two teams and two drivers, for it travels in half the time. This truck will reduce your hauling costs. It eliminates one driver's salary and the care which horses always require. It will make your delivery service more efficient. It will widen your area of distribution. It will be constantly ready for work—day or night. It will show a profit on your investment.

There has been a popular demand for a Ford truck as is shown by the many uses, for commercial purposes, to which our standard chassis has been put. Now, after most careful designing and exacting tests, we are able to offer the Ford One-Ton truck to meet this demand.

The Ford truck is supplied as a chassis only. This permits the purchaser to mount any one of the many body styles specially designed for the Ford truck, and already on the market, and he can select it to meet the individual needs of his business.

Price $750 f.o.b. Ford, Ont.

New Ideas For The April Sewing

Spring Costnmes Up-to-Date

NEW YORK, March 13.—I wonder if the girls and women all over the country are doing at this very time the things we are doing here in New York! We have haunted remnant sales and picked up short lengths of silk and cotton materials, and now we are having sewing bees, good old-fashioned ones where there is a prize offered for the best results, and where the rivalry is very keen. It's lots of fun, for one can never tell until one tries these days, what can be done with a short piece of goods. The overblouse long and short, is proving a great boon for the combining of two materials, and the Eton jacket effect with its straight lower edge, combined with an attractive tunic, is making bordered material more popular than ever.

Sports and Sports Costumes.

Our grandmothers probably would not have known the meaning of this new costume that has crept into our warbrobe, until it is a well-recognized part of that institution. They had their manners and customs, and costumes for them, too, that were doubtless every bit as fascinating. Now, whether we intend to walk, golf or play tennis, or—simply look on, we must have an appropriate "get up." Rajah, shantung and pongees are the favourites for these simple frocks. The colourings are, as a rule, interesting in the extreme. Vivid violets and oranges, peacock blues and lemon yellows. The earth will, indeed, be a gay place this spring and summer if the present indications tell a true story. And why not? As one of the newspapers said in a very good editorial the other day, "We work for Uncle Sam, we save for Uncle Sam. Let us play for Uncle Sam." That, too, is part of our "bit," a joyous part it should be, too. The smart little dress illustrated here is made of two materials. The long over-blouse is of creamy-yellow pongee. The back of the waist is extended onto the front at the shoulder, where it holds the box-pleated front. The lower section, or narrow underskirt, is of checkerboard design, blue and green blocks. The collar, cuffs and belt are also of this checked material. Could anything be more simple, or more attractive?

Overblouse Dress of Plain and Checked Pongee

About Fads and Fancies.

They are doing interesting things with ribbons this season. I saw one smart little dress in a smart little shop over on the avenue the other day, with a wide crush sash, brought well down below the knees, very much the effect of the old "hobble sash." Do you remember what I mean? Collars and cuffs and adorable little vests are being made of wondrous ribbon brocaded, embroidered, striped or plain. Narrow baby ribbons with long ends make bewitching little ties for collar and cuffs. Indeed, there seems to be no end to the uses of ribbon, for entire dresses are made of it with other material combined, of course. Of course, they are making beautiful underwear out of ribbon, and all kinds of caps and parasols.

Beautiful Things Worth While.

Bear bravely the burden which so many other shoulders have borne. Insist upon a little time daily for the contemplation of beauty. A walk through the clean air, the coming up of the sun and the long shadows and rich gold bars of the winter morning, a Japanese bulb in a porcelain jar, a load of straw caught by the sun on a hill, the cattle streaming about the stack, the woman above the cradle, the frost crystals on the pane, the poise of a cat, children at play, one or all these things arrest the beauty lover. Let there be moments when the hubbub is hushed and when beauty of color, sound or some peculiar and exquisite composition may sink into the waiting soul.—Buffalo Express.

To Win Success.

When you can put yourself into things you do they are bound to succeed. Most failures result from half-heartedness. Or it may be that the principle is wrong. Time has not been taken to make sure that you are right. When you can put your whole soul into things you are bound to carry conviction. To this you must add your toil. Half-hearted endeavor will not make even a good thing go. To get dividends out you must put energy and brain in. You must "know thyself" as Socrates said. You must know your job as A. T. Stewart did the mercantile business and then success will come.—Pennsylvania Grit.

IS EASILY SCARED

Man Apt to Be Frightened by Little Things.

Many Get Stage Fright When Called Upon for a Speech, But Would Battle a Lion.

"I went to see Jim Smilax get married," said Loper, according to the Chicago News, "and he was a pitiable spectacle. He was all wilted, and the sweat ran off him in streams. Had he been in the hands of the executioner he couldn't have been scared worse. It's a queer thing. Smilax has more cool courage than any man I know, and he'd face a polar bear without displaying cold feet, but a little thing like getting married was too much for him."

"It certainly is a queer thing," admitted Gamboge, "and doubtless we'd have to go back to the stone age to find an explanation.

"Man is afraid of many things which shouldn't scare him for a minute. People who know me well must admit that I am no poltroon. Produce your Hyrcan tiger, your sugged Russian bear, and my firm nerves will never tremble. I have officiated as judge at a baby show and had a dozen disappointed mothers seething around me reaching for handfuls of my whiskers, and I was as calm as I am at this hour of going to press. I don't know what fear is in the ordinary sense; yet I can't face an audience and make a speech to save myself.

"I'd give a farm if I could rise easily and gracefully and take a fall out of the welkin when I am called upon for a few timely remarks. But when I get to my feet and look around upon a sea of expectant faces, my insides seem to give way and I feel faint and sick, and the next thing I know somebody is stooping over me with a palm-leaf fan, and somebody else is pouring ice water on me.

"Why should a man be afraid to stand up before his fellow citizens and turn loose his sentiments? Probably some ancestor of mine, back in the interglacial times, was swatted over the head with a spiked club while discussing the living issues of the day at some crossroads schoolhouse, and the shock affected all succeeding generations.

"It is but a little while since dentistry was in the same class with blacksmithing. Men who are waxing old can remember when a visit to the dentist's office was something that appalled the stoutest heart. It was the last resort. A victim of toothache would suffer until the last limit was reached before he'd consent to have any dental work done, and no reasonable person can blame him.

"When I was young the village dentist manhandled me two or three times, extracting teeth with a hammer and cold chisel. My own boys have such a dread of the dentist that I have to get the police to help me when it is necessary to take them to his office. There is no apparent reason for it. The modern dentist makes tooth pulling a luxury. It is better than an outing in the woods.

"I suppose it will take several thousand years to educate the fear of dentistry out of the human race.

"About a million years ago a dog threw itself down in the grass and was bitten by a snake. Ever since then dogs have turned around several times before lying down. This fact may explain, in some measure, why Jim Smilax was scared at his wedding."

A Good Job.

A dashing lieutenant-colonel, ex-member of the General Staff, was approached by a recently drafted man.

"What might your name be? Do you belong to this bunch?"

"I'm the colonel in charge."

"Wal, I see the balance of 'em busy around here, and I don't see you doin' anything. How does a fellow go about gittin' your job?"

Colds Settled In The Kidneys

Lumbago, Backache and Rheumatism Was the Result—Now Enthusiastic Over Cure Obtained.

CHATTERTON, Ont., March 27. — The kidneys are extremely sensitive to sudden changes of temperature, and much pain and suffering is a frequent result, as all who have had attacks of lumbago and rheumatism know.

The writer of this letter was a great sufferer until she found that by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills she could regulate the action of the kidneys, and thereby remove the cause of lumbago and rheumatism.

Mrs. John Lancaster, farmer's wife, Chatterton, Ont., writes: "We would not want to do without Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills in the house, for we have proven their merits in so many cases. I have weak kidneys and whenever I catch cold it settles in the back and develops into lumbago. I used to suffer terribly from lumbago and rheumatism, but find that by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and applying Dr. Chase's Backache Plaster that I obtain the greatest relief, and am soon all right again. My daughter has also used the pills with splendid results, as has also a neighbour woman who suffered greatly from constipation."

MUMMIFIED SNAKE IN LOG

Reptile Hermetically Sealed in Heart of Walnut Timber Discovered at Sawmill.

Trapped in a chamber in the heart of a walnut tree, which had evedently been its winter home, a blacksnake was found mummified in the hermetically sealed tomb after a lapse of 20 or more years. The layers of new timber formation indicated the period of the reptile's imprisonment.

A handsome walnut log two and one-half feet in diameter, shipped to a mill at Johnson City, Tenn., from Wawnesville, N. C., held the imprisoned coil of the dead snake. To the eye the log was perfect. After the carriage had passed back and forth a time or two the saw uncapped a beautifully polished vacuum, with a dark coil lying within. Lifted out, the coil proved to be the preserved form of a snake. Exposure to air caused a sudden shrinkage.

"The snake had undoubtedly crawled into the tree through a hole made by a broken limb that had decayed at the base," said M. L. Seifers, a member of the company operating the mill. "The new layers of timber, which had enveloped the opening, were of a thickness to indicate a growth of probably 20 years since the snake entered the cavity to find the exit suddenly closed against its escape, probably due to the dropping of a small piece of bark which covered the opening."

ALCOHOL FROM BANANAS NOW

Culls of the Fruit to Be Distilled by Americans, Who Will Erect Plant at Honduras.

Bananas suitable for export must always be of a certain size or number of hands. The rejection of smaller bunches by the fruit companies has always been a source of complaint and also of loss to the planters. It is now proposed to use them in the manufacture of alcohol, says a report made by Consul E. M. Lawton at Tegucigalpa, Honduras.

By executive order, the president of Honduras, has signed a contract by which an American of long experience in the fruit business in the tropics, representing a company of American capitalists, is granted the right to erect a distillery at San Pedro Sula, Honduras. The concessionaire has deposited $25,000 with the government as an earnest of good faith, which is to be credited toward export duties on the alcohol at three cents gold per gallon.

The company proposes to supply planters with funds for planting sugar cane on the worn-out banana lands, and will also distill from the cane the bagasse of, which is to be used in the manufacture of paper. Experiments will be made in the manufacture of paper from banana waste

BATTLE FIELD DEATH TEST

Minimum Quantity of 33 Per Cent Solution of Dionin Recommended to Academy of Medicine.

Uncertainty as to whether a person be alive or dead is especially great on the battlefield, and prompt decision in such cases is far more important than in civil life, writes a correspondent at the front. Dr. A. Terson has just recommended to the French Academy of Medicine a new test, those already known having proved insufficient. The best of these latter has been the injection of fluorescein, as devised by Icard. But even this is uncertain, for in some cases men who are still alive do not show the green coloration of the whites of their eyes following injection, which the test is supposed to produce.

Dr. Terson recommends placing in the eye a minute quantity of a 33 per cent solution of dionin (ethyl-morphine), glycerine. If death has already taken place, nothing happens, but if the man has the slightest trace of life still in him the white of his eyes will immediately turn purplish-red and swell, but this inflammation will disappear rapidly and leave no ill effect.

WAS OFF WORK 4 OR 5 MONTHS A YEAR WITH CONSTIPATION

If the truth were only known you would find that over one-half of the ills of life are caused by allowing the bowels to get into a constipated condition.

When the bowels become constipated the stomach gets out of order, the liver does not work properly, and then follows the violent sick headaches, the sourness of the stomach, heartburn, water brash, etc.

Keep your bowels regular by using Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. They work on the bowels gently and naturally, and will cure the worst cases of constipation.

Mr. Sylvester Clements, Galt, Ont., writes: "I desire to express my heartfelt thanks for what Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills have done for me. I have been suffering from a bad stomach and constipation and would be off work 4 or 5 months a year. I was hardly able to be inside without getting a severe headache. I tried doctors' medicine and other remedies, but got no relief until a friend advised me to use Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. Now I can work inside without any headaches or pain. I would not be without your remedy for anything. I write this so that anyone suffering the same as I did may use them and be cured."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

ARGENTINA A STRONG ALLY

Regarded Far More Valuable Than Spain to United States and Other Nations Fighting Germany.

When the congress of Argentina voted to sever relations with Germany the people of the most powerful neutral left in the ranks of the pacifists showed their determination to join the allies. Argentina could work more good to the allies than could Spain. Her war potentiality is greater, for while her army is only 24,000 strong, compared to the 140,000 which Spain maintains, according to a publicist, her wealth far surpasses that of the older nation. Argentina is young, strong, clean-limbed. Spain is old, fuddled and doddering.

The South American republic was the last dangerous nation whose people turned against the kaiser. Its entrance into antagonism to Teutonism would mark the final and crowning blunder of German diplomacy.

None of the passive nations could give the allies so much in the way of vital help as could Argentina. After the United States, her sympathy and determined support are more to be valued by the democratic powers than any other unembroiled nation. Now she is girding her loins to follow her great Northern sister into the good work.

Argentina's population is only 8,000,000, in comparison to the 20,000,000 of Spain, but her manhood is developing while Spain's is anything but aggressive. Her character is made of cosmopolitan forces, the best and hardest of the adventurous races.

She Obeyed Orders.

Some time ago, before we all got so dreadfully economical, a mistress told her new Scandinavian kitchen girl never to leave in the refrigerator anything old or left over, but to keep it clean and fresh by throwing away the old things every morning.

On the day following, the mistress happened to look out of the window and she noticed something peculiar in the yard. Calling Hulda she asked: "What is that and how did it get there?"

"That's the old ice, ma'am, left over from yesterday," answered Hilda. "I threw it away lak you tol' me."—Boston Transcript.

Dyes and Worms.

In order to determine the action of dyes when taken into the system, N. A. Cobb of the United States department of agriculture, selected for experiments the tiny worms called nematodes. It is well known that certain of the aniline dyes have peculiar affinities for certain sorts of living cells, observes a chemist, so Mr. Cobb tried various dyes on these worms and watched their action under a microscope. He found that different organs received different dyes, so that he was able to tint the internal apparatus of the nematodes in several colors and thus watch them clearly under his microscope. And he discovered some strange facts, not the least of which is that the dyestuffs undergo a chemical action in the creature's body to such an extent that you can never tell what color your dye will produce until you have tried it. Another fact of great importance is that he has found that different granules of the same cell absorb different dyes and manifestly perform different roles.

Appendicitis Operations Not Always Necessary

Internal Bathing Relieves the Cause.

Your physician will tell you that Appendicitis is an inflamed condition of the little sack called the Appendix at the lower right-hand corner of the Colon or large intestine. By cleansing this Colon with purified warm water by the "J. B. L. Cascade" this sack is cleansed and the inflammation subsides. Hundreds of operations have been avoided by using the warm water cure for Appendicitis. Mr. Jas. McLaughlan, 91 Evanston street, Winnipeg, writes:—

"I had spent over fifty dollars with doctors trying to cure Appendicitis. Finally the doctor said I must go to the hospital at once for an operation. Your advertisement interested me. I bought a "J. B. L. Cascade," which relieved me at once, and am now completely cured. Never felt better in my life; all pain and soreness gone, and I eat and sleep like a boy. I am grateful to Dr. Tyrrell for this wonderful health-giving invention."

95 per cent. of all human ills are caused by accumulated waste in the Colon. Internal Bathing with the "J. B. L. Cascade" keeps this large intestine as free from all waste and as clean as nature demands it should be for perfect health. Ask Warne Drug Co., Peterboro, for booklet called "Why Man of To-day is Only 60 Per Cent. Efficient." It is free. They will also be pleased to show and explain the "J. B. L. Cascade" to you.

ENEMY ATTACKS SUCCESSFULLY BEATEN

Reinforcements Are Strengthening The British Lines

Very Severe Fighting In Progress At Several Points

BRITISH COUNTER ATTACKS DROVE ENEMY BACK WITH VERY HEAVY LOSSES

Severe Fighting Developed at Several Points During the Night---Not Much Change in the Situation---French Forces Resist Several Attacks and Regain Lost Ground---Situation is Still Regarded as Critical.

THE OFFICIAL WAR OFFICE REPORT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, April 13.—The British continue to hold Bailleul, it was learned here to-day. Reinforcements are strengthening their lines but the situation is still critical.

The Germans made an attack last night west of Merville on the northern battle front and were repulsed, the War Office announces.

The British advanced their line slightly in the neighbourhood of Festubert and took a few prisoners.. There was heavy fighting last evening near Neuve Eglise and Wulverghem, and the battle here was still in progress at a late hour last night.

THE OFFICIAL STATEMENT FOLLOWS:

Heavy fighting developed yesterday evening in the neighbourhood of Neuve Eglise and Wulverghem, and at a late hour last night was still continuing. We advanced our lines slightly in the neighbourhood of Festubert and secured a few prisoners. Early in the night a strong hostile attack preceded by heavy bombardment was launched against our positions east of Locon. The enemy succeeded in entering our lines at certain points but was driven out again by a counter attack, and a second attack attempted by the enemy later in the night in the same locality was successfully beaten off. During the early part of the night the enemy also attacked west of Merville and was repulsed.. On the remainder of the northern battle front the situation is unchanged.. Sharp local fighting took place yesterday south of the Somme, in the neighbourhood of Hangard.. All positions into which the enemy had forced his way were regained by counter attacks delivered by the British and French troops. North of the Somme the enemy's artillery has been more active.

ENEMY ENTERED BRITISH LINES.

Strong enemy forces launched an attack early last night east of Loon and succeeded in entering the British lines at certain points, but were ejected by counter attacks. A second attack attempted later in the night at the same place was beaten off. In the sector south of the Somme British and French troops by counter attacks drove out the Germans from Hangard which they penetrated yesterday.

THE FRENCH OFFICIAL COMMUNIQUE.

PARIS, April 13.—The Germans last night renewed their attacks upon the French positions in Brule Wood, in the Forest of Apremont. American troops in this sector in conjunction with the French, says to-day's official statement, have combatted with vigor and broken the majority of the enemy attacks. At one point where the enemy obtained a footing he was thrown out by a counter attack.. On the Somme battle front the entire village of Hangard and adjoining cemetery have been regained from the Germans.

To-Day's War Summary

NEW YORK, April 13.—The Associated Press war review says to-day: Indications that the German drive in the Armentieres region is losing some of its force are contained in to-day's official news from the battle lines.

The Germans apparently are making their strongest efforts in their drive for Bailleul, an important railway point northwest of Armentieres, feeding the Messines Ridge section.. This engagement was still in progress at a late hour last night.

Elsewhere the British successes were of a positive nature.. They stopped the attempts of the Germans to advance west of Merville where the railway base of Hazelbrouck is the objective, repulsing an enemy attack. Likewise they held up the enemy in his southwesterly push for Bethune.

Meanwhile the southerly anchorage of the British line was being strongly held just to the north of Givenchy where the British advanced their line slightly near Festubert, capturing an important enemy position. Allied successes were also scored on the Somme battle front.

Move On Your Clock To-night

The Daylight Saving measure will go into effect at 2 o'clock Sunday Morning. Move on your clocks one hour before you go to bed to-night.

Do not forget that all the services in the city churches to-morrow will be held one hour earlier to conform to the new standard time. If your clock is moved on one hour to-night all it will be necessary to do is to follow the clock.

The above does not apply to the Catholic churches of the city, which will follow the old order of time in the morning, owing to the many parishioners who reside out of the city and the difficulty of notifying them in time for to-morrow. The afternoon services will be according to the new time schedules.

ICE ON RICE LAKE.

Only Strip of Clear Water Around Shores, So Far.

Reports from Rice Lake state that the ice has not yet broken up. Around the shores there is a narrow strip of open water about ten feet wide, which has broken the winter routes across the lake, but the ice is still quite firm and has not shown signs of the final break up. From this prospect it is likely that the opening of navigation on Rice Lake will be later than usual, despite the disappearance of the snow and the promise of an early spring.

Poor Tea that can be sold at a low price is most extravagant in use. A little good tea, like Salada, makes many more cups; hence its real economy.

Most Trying Days Of The War Are Just Ahead Say Army Men

The Frank Situation on the Western Battle Front—A New Crisis Has Been Reached.

RESERVES ARE MOVING

(By Carl D. Groat.)
(United Press Service.)

WASHINGTON, April 13. — The most trying days of the war are just ahead.

Army men agree to-day that this is the frank situation of the western battle now, in the light of General Haig's and General Maurice's statements that a new crisis has been reached.

A Bright Ray.

It grows increasingly possible that Germany will gamble with her fleet ahead of any Allied sea offensive. The bright ray in the Haig statement as seen here was that "the French army is moving rapidly and in great force to our support."

In this reserve aid Americans quite likely are included. If they are not now, it is certain they will be on the line soon and in force.

THE MOTOR SHOW WILL BE GREAT

Will Be Ushered In By Big Motor Parade Tuesday Night—Many Attractions

The big Motor Show, three days and nights next week, is having the finishing touches put to the arrangements to-night. Already Mr. Reg. Turner has a gang of men busily engaged decorating the interior of the Armouries, and erecting a platform in the centre of the floor for the entertainers.

THE PARADE.

The Automobile Association has issued a call to all owners of motor driven vehicles in the city, to turn out and it is expected that they will all be on hand and make the biggest parade ever seen in the city. The Fire Department will be in the parade.

SPACE ALL TAKEN.

Every available bit of space has been taken by car and motor boat exhibitors, and some fine cars will be on exhibition

ENTERTAINING THE CROWD.

Special attention has been given this year to entertainment of the big crowd, while others are busy examining the different car models. A thirty-piece orchestra is giving its services each evening; a number of local soloists will appear, and special attractions, such as the Fashion Show, each evening, a dance on Thursday night only; a special tea room, drawings for an automobile, and automobile accessories, will be on the programme each night.

Don't miss the parade; then make straight for the Armouries, and enjoy yourself. Tickets are selling rapidly at five for a dollar, or 25c each; children 10c.

Frank Jenne Says:

No one disputes the quality or style or Tooke shirts. No one wants to. But perhaps you do not know as much as you should about the famous Tooke work shirts. There's the "Iron Frame" shirt, and it wears like iron. The "Jess Willard," as strong as its name indicates. These work shirts are well made and of good size. If you haven't been in the habit of buying "Tooke" work shirts, begin now. Prices 75c. and $1.00. "Come to me."

PROPOSAL TO OMIT CONSCRIPTION WAS DEFEATED

Clause Introducing Conscription in Ireland Will Remain in Man Power Bill—Asquith's Speech

MANY DID NOT VOTE

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, April 13.—A proposal by the Irish Nationalists to omit the conscription of Ireland clause from the government man power bill was rejected by a majority of 172 in the House of Commons last night. The total vote shows that a large section of the House abstained from voting. The debate in the House yesterday and last night was remarkable for the speech of Asquith, former Premier, who, while strongly objecting to the conscription of Ireland, frankly declined to take the responsibility at a moment when the nation is facing a grave military crisis of pushing that opposition to the extent of facing a change in the government. Henry E. Duke, Chief Secretary for Ireland, made a brave attempt to conciliate the Irish members.

BRITISH FRONT WAS WITHDRAWN WEST OF MERVILLE

Repeated Enemy Attacks Were Repulsed — The Germans Are Being Held at all Points

MASSED FORCES

(United Press Service.)
(By William Philip Simms.)

Two O'clock Despatch:

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, April 13.—The British front, after continuous fighting all day yesterday, between La Bassee and Messines Ridge (a fifteen miles front) was withdrawn west of Merville early this morning and rested along the eastern edge of Nieppe Forest.

Massed German divisions are exerting great pressure toward Bailleul from the south, determinedly attempting to make a wide breach in the British front in order to imperil the troops holding the Passchendaele sector (in which Ypres is located) and Messines Ridge.

REPEATED ATTACKS.

Repeated enemy attacks between Givenchy and Locon failed. The Germans gained a footing in Neuve Eglise but were held well everywhere south of La Bassee, while some enemy strong points were stormed near Givenchy.

Nieppe Forest is a large wooded area extending westward for six miles from the vicinity of Merville. Its eastern edge is about a mile west of Merville and runs from the Lys Canal northward to Vieux Derquin, a distance of seven miles.

PRICE WAS JUST HALF

Owing to a printer's error in the display advertisement of D. Zacks, the shoe man, opposite the Examiner Office, an item of ladies' shoes in colours, were quoted regularly at $8.00 to $10.00, and sale price $10.00, which should have been $5.00 or just half price.

Gunners Blazed Away Point Blank At Advancing Enemy

Desperate Fighting Continues on the Western Front—Open Fighting on the Flat Lands.

COUNTER ATTACKS

(United Press Service.)
(By William Philip Simms).

Ten O'Clock Despatch:

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, April 13.—From La Bassee to Hollebecke, near Ypres, Gen. Von Quast's army ,with the most desperate determination, did not cease its pressure for a single moment.

Field Marshal Hindenburg has given Von Quast abundant reinforcements, more than double the original ten divisions of 120,000 men with which the thrust began.

Hurled Into Action.

Fresh troops are being hurled into action from all directions. Under the glittering sunshine they marched to the line and struck in three places, toward Bailleul, toward Bethune, and toward Givenchy Hill. These were their immediate objectives but they have hope of ultimately turning Vimy, Arras and the mountain like ridge of Notre Dame De Lorette.

As this is cabled the battle's swirls reach from about Hollebeke, southwestward past Wytschaete and Neuve-Eglise, to near Bailluil, to the west of Merville, thence circling south-eastward to a few miles north of Bethune and toward La Bassee.

British Outnumbered.

Greatly outnumbered, the British with prodigious valour, fired their rifles until they were too hot to hold and operated their Lewis guns incessantly. Artillerymen, stripped to the waist, blazed away point blank at targets that could not be missed. It is believed the Somme front is becoming feverish. Further fighting there is likely. The heavy fighting in French Flanders is no guarantee against a recommencement of the battle for Amiens. German prisoners admit the German commanders do not want Amiens so much as what they hope lies beyond.

Open Fighting.

Afternoon and night the battle boiled around Vielle Chapelle, Estaires and Steenwerck, in the old-fashioned open fighting on the flat lands.

The British blazed away from behind the hedges and poured a machine gun fire into the advancing Germans from improvised positions in the ditches. In mutual counter attacks, the opposing forces clashed in open, cultivated fields.

HOME COOKING AT THE PETERBORO MOTOR SHOW

For the Home-Cooking Exhibit and Sale in connection with the Motor Show, the committee are anxious to have as varied an assortment as possible of the many war-time dishes. For this purpose, the ladies of Peterborough are asked to co-operate, and to send to the Armouries either Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday afternoons of next week, bread, biscuits, scones, cakes, cookies, etc., exploiting the use of any variety of war flour; also canned or preserved fruit or vegetables.

Further information in regard to this booth, and the needs, may be obtained by 'phoning 1449. 2d-87

BANDSMEN, ATTENTION

It has been decided to increase the present strength of the 57th Regt. Band from 30 men to 50, and with this object in view all bandsmen in the City are cordially invited to become members. Instruments provided and all the privileges of first-class quarters at the Armouries accorded new men as well as every assistance in securing positions. Rehearsals every Tuesday and Friday. Further particulars on application at the Conservatory of Music. m.th.s.-tf.

DAYLIGHT SAVING BILL

Act Will Become Effective Sunday Morning at Two O'clock--All Clocks Should Be Advanced One Hour

THE TOWN CLOCK

To-night at the hour of midnight, Mr. C. S. McClelland, the official guardian of the town clock, will move the clock forward one hour, in accordance with the order-in-council putting into force at two o'clock on Sunday morning the daylight saving measure. To-morrow the citizens will get up an hour earlier, if they follow the clock after putting it forward one hour to-night. All the churches in the city will conform to the new time. All clocks and watches should be advanced to-night so as to avoid confusion,

Ottawa, April 13.—The going into force of the daylight saving measure has been definitely fixed for two o'clock on Sunday morning, April 14th. It will remain in effect until 2 o'clock on the morning of Thursday, October 31st, 1918.

Yesterday afternoon Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, the Deputy Governor, attended in the Senate, and gave the Royal assent to the bill. Immediately an extra of the Canadian Gazette was issued containing the following proclamation:

"His Excellency the Governor-General-in-Council, on the recommendation of the Minister of Trade and Commerce is pleased to order, and it is hereby ordered, that the prescribed time during which the Daylight Saving Act, 1918, is to be in force during the present year, shall be from two o'clock on the morning of Sunday, the 14th day of April, 1918, until 2 o'clock on the morning of Thursday, the 31st day of October, 1918."

The Death Of Mrs. Wm. Galley

The Late Mrs. Galley Was Born in Peterborough.

It is with the deepest regret her many friends in the city will learn of the death of Sarah Coulton, widow of Wm. Galley, who passed away at the residence of her son, Garnet Galley, 75 Simpson Avenue, Toronto, on Friday, at 8 o'clock.

The late Mrs. Galley was born in Peterborough and had resided here all her life previous to leaving with her son, Mr. Garnet Galley, to reside in Toronto six months ago, in which city Mr. Galley is connected with the Y.M.C.A. During her residence in Peterborough, Mrs. Galley was a devoted church worker for the George Street Methodist Church, where she had been a member for 50 years. She leaves to mourn her death two sons, Garnet, of Toronto, and Howard, of Lindsay.

The funeral will take place on Monday afternoon at 2.30, from the residence of Mr. Ivey, 5 Wolsey Street, to the Little Lake Cemetery. Service at the house at 2 o'clock, conducted by Rev. Mr. Thomas.

Peter Robinson Chapter Meeting

At last night's meeting of the Peter Robinson Chapter, I. O. D. E. in the Public Library, definite arrangements were made for the fashion show at which mannequins picked from the prettiest girls in the city will display the spring clothes imported by Barries, Fairs and Richard Halls. The young ladies will add to the fashion show a novel feature, when dressed in overalls they will march through the crowd singing a greater production song.

Check Department.

Miss Maisie Armstrong and Miss Mabel Patterson will fill a long felt want by conducting a checking room at the Fair.

LAST NIGHT'S AIR RAID

One German Airship Reached the Midlands—Four Houses Demolished

THE CASUALTIES

(Canadian Press.)

LONDON, April 13. — In last night's air raid of England one German airship reached the Midlands, and another penetrated almost to the northwest coast, it was officially announced to-day.

The text of the announcement reads:

The raiders were travelling at a great height and showed no inclination to penetrate the defended areas. Most of the bombs were dropped in open country and apart from the demolition of four houses at one place, the damage so far reported is inconsiderable. Particulars of casualties will be published later.

A Later Despatch Says.

LONDON, April 13.— Five persons were killed and fifty others injured in the German air raid last night on England according to an official announcement made to-day.

An Air Raid on Paris.

(Canadian Press.)

PARIS, April 13.— Eleven persons were killed and fifty injured in last night's air raid on Paris, it was officially announced to-day. The raid began at 10.15 p.m. and lasted 45 minutes.

Twenty-four Killed.

PARIS, April 13.—(Official of raid:) —Twenty-four persons were killed and sixty-two others wounded as a result of the German air raid last night on Paris.

ENEMY LOSSES ARE ESTIMATED AT 300,000

Germans Have Over Two Million Men on the Western Front

(United Press Service).
(By Henry Wood.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, April 13.—Of a total of 200 German divisions (2,400,000 men) on the west front, 116 have already been engaged. Of these 75 have been withdrawn on account of losses, which according to Prussian methods, average about 2,500 to the division. Adding the estimates losses of divisions still engaged, makes the total minimum of enemy losses 300,000.

Dovercourt Songsters Are Vtsiting City

The visit of the Dovercourt Songsters from Toronto provides a big feature for the week-end services of the Salvation Army. The Songsters, forty in number, arrived at noon, and were met at the station by the Temple Band, which marched them up town. An automobile ride around the city was this afternoon's programme, and to-night there will be a big service at the Temple, at which Mayor Duncan will extend a civic welcome to the visitors. At the festival to-morrow afternoon Ald. Edgar will be in the chair.

OFFICIAL NOTICE TO THE CATHOLICS OF PETERBOROUGH

In order to avoid misunderstanding in regard to the hours of Catholic church services for the morning of Sunday, April 14th, Bishop O'Brien directs that the morning services to-morrow in the Catholic churches and chapels of the city shall be at the usual hours, just as though the daylight saving law had not come into effect.

The afternoon services and all services thereafter shall be according to the new time schedule.

HAIG'S MESSAGE.

The message of Field Marshal Haig o the British troops, while eloquent f the critical nature of the battle in Flanders, will send a thrill throughout the Empire. The Commander-in-Chief of the British Armies France as never been an alarmist, and his nstructions that positions must be efended to the last man, shows how erious is the situation. The world as learned to know that British soldiers will literally obey such orders, nd will fight until the last man falls. o Canadians the message will come e a warning, that before long it may e the turn of the Canadian army to face the onslaughts of Von Hindenburg's legions and to hold their position in the Lens sector at all costs.

INTERESTING REVELATIONS.

The probabilities are that when Mr. W. T. R. Preston, who was the overseas election agent for Sir Wilfrid Laurier in the recent campaign, returns to Canada there will be some interesting revelations as to the methods adopted on behalf of the Union Government in making sure of the soldier vote. A corner of the veil was lifted by some of the Original Firsts home on furlough, who told of the promise given them that if they voted for Union Government, the First Contingent would be sent home in the event of the Government being returned. It is expected that Mr. Preston will have many more incidents of this kind to relate, for he is bringing back information that he hesitated to trust to the cables or the mail. The serious charge has been made that any attempts made by him to send information to Sir Wilfrid were heavily censored. The matter will no doubt come up in the House before long, when the country will be able to get some idea of the tactics used in swinging the overseas vote into the Borden camp.

MEWBURN DISAPPOINTED.

The opinion among many people who supported Union Government, that the results so far obtained under the Military Service Act, have been disappointing, is evidently shared by General Mewburn, Minister of Militia, who took advantage of his maiden address in the House of Commons to make it clear to the members that the administration of the Act was not in his hands, but was in charge of the Department of Justice. General Mewburn, referring to the necessity of rushing reinforcements overseas, remarked that in the United States for every man sent over another took his place in a training camp. In Canada, unfortunately, the Minister of Militia admitted, this was not the case. General Mewburn is evidently far from satisfied and made no attempt to conceal his feelings in the matter, which he expressed as follows:

"In my opinion, there must be a decided speeding up of the Tribunals which are selecting the men for the fighting line. The Military Service Act has produced enough men to keep our four divisions in the field up to strength," he added, "but in order to maintain them it must produce more. We have got to get the men overseas. I have always felt and I still feel, that Quebec will do its duty. I believe that Quebec will yield her quota to keep up to strength the Quebec battalions now at the front. We must rush the men over to reinforce those now in the trenches."

"FORGET THE SIDELINES."

The opinion voiced by the Examiner several days ago that the time taken up in the House in discussing titles might have been more profitably spent in considering war measures is evidently shared by a number of members of Parliament, notably by Col. Evan Fraser, M.P. of Welland, who administered a timely rebuke in Parliament on Thursday when votes for women was the subject under discussion. Col. Fraser feels that the winning of the war should be the chief business before Parliament, and chided the Government for wasting time over other questions. The women of Welland, he remarked, were not worrying half so much about getting the franchise as they were about reinforcements being sent to their husbands and sons and brothers in France.

"We have wasted one day on titles," said Col. Fraser, "another day on daylight saving, and now we are wasting a third on votes for women. Instead of that, we should be engaged in sending help to the men on the firing line. We don't care about titles; our women don't want the vote. Let us forget those sidelines and concentrate on the main business in hand, the winning of the war."

Dissatisfaction at the Government's apparent lack of vigour in getting on with the war is growing daily. Even the chief Conservative organ in Ontario, the Mail and Empire, has begun to realize that the Government which sought and obtained a mandate from the people on their promises to vigorously carry on war measures is failing to deliver what it promised.

Says the Mail:

General Mewburn says we must rush men over to reinforce those now in the trenches. The Military Service Act has yielded enough men to keep our four divisions in the field up to strength, but it must produce more, and must produce them faster. The Minister says there must be a decided speeding up in the work of the tribunals. Quebec, he feels convinced, will do its duty. We hope so, but the time to do its duty is the immediate present. The Minister's words as to the necessity for speeding up the work of the tribunals lead us to expect the prompt amendment of the Military Service Act to expedite the bringing of the men into the ranks. The Government must give its full attention to the one grand business of the nation, that is, the carrying on of the war with all our might. In ordinary times the pressing on of any important public business has to be more or less governed by consideration for various other matters, but in war-time other matters must take their chances. A belligerent Government must not be afraid of offending this interest or that; it must not be restrained by too tender regard for susceptibilities or fear of difficulty. We are dealing with the demon of war, let loose by the Hohenzollern, and until the Hohenzollerns and their system have been smashed, we must not bother ourselves much about anything else—about the cost of the war, about the danger of domestic strife, or about red tape.

ACTION NEEDED.

The feeling that the government at Ottawa is failing to measure up to the request of Lloyd George for immediate reinforcements for Canada's forces overseas does not exist only among those newspapers who have been opposed to the government. On the contrary, influential journals who were ardent supporters of Union government in the recent campaign, have been frank in their criticism of the laxity of the government in this respect. Lloyd George's appeal was too urgent to be passed by lightly, and yet there has been no sign of any awakening activity on the part of the rulers at Ottawa. It is necessary to depend upon the Military Service Act for the reinforcements which the British Prime Minister says are needed immediately, and the Act, especially in the Province of Quebec, is failing to produce results. General Mewburn, Minister of Militia, says the appeal courts must be speeded up. That is self evident, but the country is waiting for some announcement from Ottawa that such a course is being carried out.

The Ottawa Journal, a friend of Union government strikingly points out the necessity for action as follows:

Canada is face to face with the same "overwhelming emergency." What are we going to do about it? Shall we commit suicide? Shall we continue to give consideration to the defence of individual liberty and "sacred rights" and regard as impossible measures that would upset pleasant things, as they are, with the possibility of individual liberty and "sacred rights" and existing social and business comfort being ruthlessly swept away through a Teuton victory? Everything that we hold dear in Canada will go by the board if Germany obtains that "military decision" for which it is aiming this year. The peril is now, not next year; the need for men is now, not months hence.

Lloyd George's grave warning in the British House of Commons follows startling appeals by cable to United States, to Canada, to Australia, and to South Africa, for more men—and immediately. What answer is Canada going to make? Are members of Canada's Parliament to sit tight and wait for somebody else to take action?

When the British and French armies were fighting desperately two weeks ago, thousands of young men were rushed across the English Channel to take the places of the fallen and help stem the Teuton tide. The reserve was depleted to that extent and the battle still goes on with terrific intensity. Wastage in men at the front must be made up; the depletion of the reserve must be made good. Shall Canada do nothing except jog along at an easy gait, without deep concern for what is happening?

* * * *

Canada must send more men, and at once. Canada must put itself in line with the new effort of the British Isles and come within measurable distance of the sacrifices that are being made in the Old Country. Considerations which have weighed with Canada in the past must be forgotten, and but one consideration substituted, namely, the imperative need for men. Canada's man power must be "combed out" too, and Canada's woman power must be called into service. Employment on the farm, and employment in essential industries must be the only employment permitted for all physically fit men in Canada. The age limit must be revised and the decisions of the exemption tribunals reviewed. And it must be done at great speed now. There is not a day to lose.

Is the Canadian Parliament going to give an illustration of Nero fiddling while Rome burned?

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

More Convenient.

(Toronto Globe.)

Canadian people will be asked to advance their watches and clocks an hour next Sunday night before retiring. This will be more convenient than doing it before waking up Monday morning.

It Looks Like That.

(Kansas City Star.)

Possibly Germany, after a little more experience with the Bolsheviki, may pass Russia back to the allies.

Jan Smuts for Chief of Staff.

(London Free Press.)

Should Jan Christian Smuts be appointed chief of staff to the commander-in-chief of the entente allies in France, there will be general satisfaction throughout the entente nations, and particularly within the British empire. Smuts is an answer to every challenge uttered against British fair play. Seventeen years ago a general leading armies against the British, he has been for four years a champion of Great Britain against the enemy.

Building Ships in Canada.

(Ottawa Journal.)

The war has taught Canadians many things they did not realize before. One of these is that Canadians can build ships. A few years ago a great many of us were inclined to think that it was not practicable for Canada to enter upon the construction of steel ships on a large scale. With a remarkable admixture of modesty and caution—or was it lack of confidence?—we were inclined to the view that we lacked the skill, experience and material necessary to build ships on an ambitious scale. The war has shown us that we were wrong.

Minimum Wage Too Small.

(Ottawa Journal-Press.)

A man cannot maintain a home on $73 a month with living costs what they are to-day. That is what the postal clerks are paid as a minimum in the west. Much less can a family live decently on $58 a month, the minimum in the east. The life of such a family, of wife and kiddies, must be one long-drawn-out succession of self-denial.

The Other Extreme.

(Kingston Whig.)

While titles in Canada, up to the present time, have been scattered with a lavish hand, the United States has gone to the other extreme. A few days ago King Albert of Belgium pinned a medal on the breast of General Pershing, but Congress will not permit him to wear it.

Permits No Rivals.

So long as Kaiserism retains its grip it is fruitless to attempt to differentiate between Germany and Austria-Hungary. Is it not just as fruitless to attempt a differentiation between the military leaders of Germany and the civilian leaders of Germany? Kaiserism admits of no civilian leaders—there or anywhere.

Judicial Sale of Property in the City of Peterborough

PURSUANT to order and judgment for sale made by the Supreme Court of Ontario, in the action of Ferguson vs. Ferguson, bearing date Monday, the 23rd day of April, A.D. 1917, there will be sold with the approbation of E. C. S. Huycke, Esquire, Master of this Court at Peterborough, by W. J. Hancock, Auctioneer, at the Munro Hotel, corner of Hunter and Water streets, in the City of Peterborough, at the hour of two o'clock, in the afternoon, on Saturday, the Fourth day of May, 1918 the following lands and premises in two parcels.

1. In the City of Peterborough, in the County of Peterborough and Province of Ontario, being composed of parts of Lots Numbers Five and Six, North of Edinburgh street and west of George street, in the said City: Commencing at the intersection of the Westerly limit of the land of the Grand Trunk Railway Company with the Northern limit of Edinburgh Street, thence North-easterly along the Western limit of the land of the Grand Trunk Railway Company to the Northern limit of said Lot Number Five, thence Westerly along the Northern limits of said Lots Numbers Five and Six to the Western limit of said Lot Number Six; thence Southerly along the Western limit of said Lot Number Six to the Southern limit thereof; thence Easterly along the Southern limit of said Lot Number Six to the place of beginning.

The said parcel has a frontage of Fifty-three feet, more or less, and there is said to be on the property a two-storied house, (metal covered), also concrete stable and driving shed. This parcel will be sold free of dower and encumberances.

2. All the right, title and interest of the above named defendant in that portion of Lots Numbers Six and Seven, in the said City of Peterborough, South of Brock street and west of George street, more particularly described as follows: Commencing at a point in the Northern limit of said Lot Number Seven, where an iron post has been planted, at a distance Easterly Ninety-seven feet more or less, from the North-west angle of said Lot Number Seven, thence Easterly along the Northern limits of said Lots Seven and Six, Forty-six feet, six inches; thence South parallel with Aylmer Street, one hundred feet; thence West parallel with Brock Street forty-six feet, six inches; thence North in a direct line to the place of beginning; together with a right of way on and over a strip of land five feet, in width, and lying along the Eastern side of the lands described and subject to the right of way over the Easterly five feet of the land described, the said two strips of land, each five feet in width, forming the land to be used in common by the owners for the time being of the adjoining lands. Upon the said Second Parcel of land there is said to be a red brick two-storied house or cottage and one rought cast cottage.

The interest of the Defendant in this parcel will be sold, subject to registered Mortgage Eliza J. Leavis to Noel H. Laplante, for $950.00 and assignments thereof, but free of dower.

Both parcels will be offered for sale, subject to reserved bid on each of the said parcels, which has been fixed by the said Master. Terms of sale: A deposit of $10.00 for every $100.00 of the purchase money, and the balance of purchase money into Court within thirty days from date of sale, without interest.

The vendor will only be required to furnish a Registrar's Abstract of Title and to produce such deeds, copies thereof, or evidences of title as are in her possession. In all other respects the terms and conditions of sale will be the standing conditions of the Supreme Court of Ontario. Further particulars can be had from the undersigned, or from E. C. S. Huycke, Esquire, Local Master at Peterborough.

DATED at Peterborough, this 8th day of April, A.D. 1918.

"THEY SHALL NOT WANT"

In a moment of inspiration an advertising man recently hit upon the above four words as epitomizing the desire and determination of the people of Canada that the Armies of the Allies and the suffering peoples of the Allied nations of Europe shall be supplied with all that Canada can possibly furnish of the food stuffs necessary for their support in the energetic and successful prosecution of their struggle for the defeat of tyrannical Prussian aspirations.

Compressed in this little sentence is more real throbbing meaning than most full pages of printed matter contain. In sixteen letters it expresses the determination of a people that a great cause must be sustained at no matter what personal sacrifice.

"They shall not want."

How aptly these words also express the attitude of the NORMAL, HEALTHY-MINDED MAN towards, those who under our social system, naturally look to him for support and protection. As he thinks of the wife who has entrusted her future to his care and of the children whom he has brought into the world, his thought and determination is "THEY SHALL NOT WANT."

This is always the attitude of the normal, healthy-minded man who is willing to sacrifice, if need be, to attain this noble end.

A policy in the Sun Life of Canada provides the safest and most economical means of fulfilling this noble desire and determination and incidentally, if fortunately in time this mode of protection is no longer necessary he may himself reap the benefits of his savings and thrift.

Thus virtue has its own reward.

Peterborough Man Killed In Action

PTE. FRED HOLDEN.

The sad news was received by Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Holden, 132 Hunter street east, last night, that their son, Pte. Fred Holden formerly of the 247th Peterborough Battalion, was killed in action in France on March 31st. Pte. Holden enlisted here in the latter part of 1916 with the second Peterborough County battalion, and when that battalion was absorbed by the 235th Battalion last spring, went overseas with the latter unit and was transferred to the 4th Canadian Battalion in France.

Pte. Holden was twenty-two years of age, and before enlisting was employed at the Peterborough Lock Manufacturing Company, where he was a favourite with everybody. He is survived by his parents, four sisters, Mrs. M. Jones in England, and Ellen Edith and Kathleen in Peterborough, and three brothers, Arthur and Alfred on active service in France, and Ernest in this city. Another brother lost his life in the Quaker Oats explosion.

When Long Breaths Hurt Your Side Rub Soreness Away With "Nerviline"

Prompt Action Often Prevents Pleurisy or Pneumonia

Prompt Action Often Prevents Pleurisy or Pneumonia.

Do long breaths hurt you? Try it, and see. If you notice a wheeze or a catch in your side, then be sure trouble exists.

Proper action consists in a vigorous rubbing of the back, chest and sore side with "Nerviline." This wonderful liniment sinks into the tissues where the pain is seated—gives instant relief. That catch disappears, all sense of soreness goes, and you then know that Nerviline has probably saved you from pleurisy.

Just try Nerviline for chest tightness, coughs, aches and soreness — it's a wonderful liniment, and when kept in the home saves the family from lots of ills and suffering. A large bottle on hand makes the doctor's bill mighty small, and can be depended on as a reliable and mighty prompt cure for rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, pleurisy, stiff neck, sore muscles and enlarged joints.

Get the large 25c family size bottle. Sold by dealers everywhere, or direct from the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

Machinery For The Making Of Ice Cream An Important Development Of De Laval Co.

The De Laval Company's pre-eminence in the manufacture of dairy supplies has tended to obscure its extensive and flourishing department devoted to ice cream making. A local example of this unacquaintance with the De Laval Company's special advantages to the ice cream trade was reported this week. Mr. N. Douros, of the Boston Cafe, who is converting the store, immediately south of his restaurant, into an ice cream parlour, discovered through a De Laval salesman that he could purchase his equipment from that company, and make an appreciable saving on the price he was prepared to pay elsewhere. He also learned that the De Laval Company supplied special machinery for the saving of time and labour, and also for the sanitary handling of ice cream. As a result of this discovery, Mr. Douros forthwith purchased a De Laval "Alpha" ice breaker. This is a compact, stout machine that receives a cake of ice into its hopper, and breaks it into fine pieces, about the size of filberts, that make ideal packing for the ice cream cans after they have been set in their wooden tubs. The breaking and crushing operation is performed by sharp spikes or teeth on a heavy cast-iron drum that revolves within the hopper, and also by the forcing of the broken ice through iron combs. The size of the small ice cubes can be readily regulated by the number of teeth used in the comb.

The "Alpha" ice breaker must commend itself to the trade. Its special advantage lies in the fact that it simplifies and facilitates the hitherto laborious task of ice breaking by hand. The machine Mr. Douros purchased will be driven by the same belt that operates his freezer. It therefore saves time and labour and breaks the ice into bits that are of uniform size. The picks or spikes are so placed upon the rotating drum that but one of them comes in contact with the ice block at a time.

Other Machines.

The De Laval Company also manufactures in this department motor and hand-driven ice cream mixers of various sizes, and another notable invention is the disc continuous ice cream freezer. The latter machine is especially designed for confectioners and creameries, whose output of frozen cream forms a considerable branch of their business. It should appeal particularly to wholesale manufacturers. The disc freezer differs from all other makes. Instead of freezing the cream in a vessel surrounded by brine or freezing mixtures, the process is reversed, the brine passing through a series of discs immersed in the cream. There is an obvious economy of refrigeration thus obtained. The freezing being from the centre outward, the brine extracts the heat from the cream and not from the atmosphere. The operation is exceedingly simple. The prepared cream is admitted at one end, and emerges from the other in a steady stream, frozen to the desired consistency and ready for the packing cans.

The disc freezer is made for batch freezing, and may be used continuously.

The De Laval freezers of the type generally recognized by the wooden tub and revolving cans in an ice pack present the newest improvement in this style.

Packing cans and tubs, ice cream cabinets, brick moulds, "dishes," the utensil that transfers the "nickle's" worth of cream to the consumer's dish, scrapers, soda glass holders, ice shredders, lemon squeezers, ice chippers, scoops, tongs and other tools of the trade are all supplied by the De Laval Company.

The Emulsor.

The De Laval centrifugal emulsor is a new machine with a big future.

The emulsor produces cream by the centrifugal re-emulsification of the component parts of milk as there may be occasion or demand for it, and the cream thus produced is simply normal cream, quite different in every essential respect from other so-called emulsified or homogenized cream products, which, whatever else may be said of them, are admittedly abnormal in character.

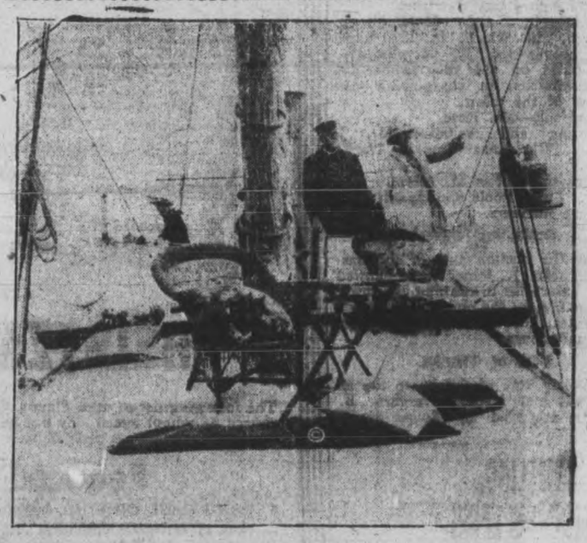
The emulsor produces normal cream from any desired emulsion of butter—sweet or salt—with whole milk, skim-milk, condensed milk or powdered milk, by simply reassembling the component parts of milk in their original natural state, with any desired proportion of butter-fat, the product being such that it possesses all the qualities, has the same food value, and may be used for any purpose the same as ordinary cream, while it has the advantage of keeping better by reason of having been pasteurized incidental to its emulsification.

Emulsified cream will whip and swell or increase in ice cream making under the same conditions and to the same extent as will ordinary cream, and by reason of its more uniform consistency it produces a smoother and more even texture of ice cream than can ordinarily be made from raw cream.

The emulsified cream may be ripened and churned into a good quality of butter, just as may natural cream, and, if desired, this butter may be held and again re-converted into cream.

The emulsor may also be used to make ordinary cream either lighter or heavier as regards its butter-fat richness, through the addition by emulsification either of further fat or a skim-milk equivalent, which there is frequently good business reason for doing because of the cream at hand not being suited to some desired use or market requirement, and the lighter or heavier cream thus produced is more uniform and superior in every way to what it could be were its bulk or proportion of fat content attempted to be changed in any other manner.

With an emulsor, cream can be obtained in places where the ordinary milk and cream supplies are inaccessible. Imagine any non-dairy district, a desert, mining camp, any big city, or, as an extreme case, on the high seas; it is in these places that the De Laval emulsor does its bit. It has less spectacular uses than these, however.



Scene from "20,000 LEAQUES UNDER THE SEA," the wonderful photo drama at The Grand Wdenesday and Thursday, next week.

Jules Verne's masterpiece of photography, "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," probably the greatest picture in Ocean scenes ever presented here for the first time at The Grand Opera House, Wednesday and Thursday, April 17 and 18, matinee daily. This remarkable achievement in Ocean drama besides holding the spectator fascinating by the beauty of the photography, tells a story that never fails to retain interest. Its appeal to all classes of theatre-goers, the young and old alike, is one that makes for the success of the picture. Recently it played its first engagement in Toronto, and so great was the demand for seats for all the regular performances that extra morning matinees had to be given. The children were also given special presentations and at every one the big auditorium at Massey Hall was taxed to capacity. By special arrangement with B. C. Whitney, of the New Princess Theatre, was secured for a return engagement, and even this commodious playhouse was hardly large enough to meet the public demand. "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," is a picture that stands in a class by itself. It cannot be compared with any other presented, and lovers of the artistic in motion protography should not miss seeing it when it comes to this city. Special children's matinee will be given on Wednesday afternoon at 4 p.m.

Why Potatoes are $1.90 a Bag in Ontario while they are Rotting in Prince Edward Island

(An Actual Conversation Between Neighbors)

Said a citizen recently, "I don't see why potatoes are $1.90 a bag in Ontario while they are rotting in Prince Edward Island."

His neighbor replied: "The reason is simple. There are no freight cars available to bring potatoes from that market to this. The only way to beat the price, is to grow your own, the same as my wife and I did.

"I don't want to rub it in," he continued, "or say I told you so, but you and I could have equal sized gardens (50 ft. deep by 40 ft. wide). They are right next to each other, so it is fair to assume the soil is equally workable.

"We both have a fair amount of spare time, yet I well recall that last spring you had a lot of quiet fun with me when I was plugging away in the garden getting the ground ready to put in vegetables.

"What has been the result?

"By a little study, and a little work, and a disposition to laugh at our mistakes and forget our disappointments, the wife and I took off that patch all the salad vegetables we needed during the summer, and we were able to put into the cellar enough potatoes, carrots, beets, onions and parsnips to last us until the end of March. Besides which, the wife made pickles and canned tomatoes and corn to last us even longer.

"We made mistakes of course, and we didn't get all we expected out of the ground, but we learned a whole lot, and we feel certain that this year we shall get better results.

"I admit that if you charged up the time we both spent on the job, you might argue that we didn't make a profit, but if we hadn't been working around the garden we should have been loafing anyhow; at any rate we have not yet had to pay $1.90 a bag for potatoes, or buy any other vegetables."

This conversation actually took place. One of the parties to it wrote this account of it. Not the man who did the cultivating, but the man who has been convinced by his neighbor that it will be well worth his while to grow vegetables in his garden this year.

The Organization of Resources Committee does not need to harp very much upon the necessity for every man and woman who can, to utilize every piece of ground available to them for growing vegetables.

The farmers of Ontario have been urged to grow more wheat, and to produce more abundantly of the farm products that can best be sent overseas. The people in villages, towns and cities, therefore, are asked to grow food to feed themselves as far as possible, so that overseas supplies may not be drawn on unless absolutely necessary.

We particularly urge you to grow beans, peas, onions, carrots, parsnips, beets, cabbages and potatoes if you have room. Never mind so much about radishes, lettuce, tomatoes and salad vegetables.

Write now for a free copy of the booklet entitled "A Vegetable Garden for Every Home," prepared by the Ontario Department of Agriculture. It is full of helpful practical suggestions, including plans for various sized gardens. You can get a copy by filling out and mailing the coupon below.

PROPHETIC CONFERENCE WILL BE HELD IN PETERBOROUGH

Four Day Conference Will Be Held in St. Paul's Church, Commencing April 28th—The Speakers

The great events that are taking place in the world such as the promised restoration of Palestine to the Jews the magnitude of the war and the many nations involved in it, the threatened world famine and other similar conditions have led many people to wonder if the prophecies in the Scriptures throw any light on their meaning. So much interest was taken in the prophetic conference held in St. Paul's Presbyterian church in 1915 and in the recent prophetic conference held in Knox Presbyterian church, Toronto, when hundreds of people were turned away and overflow meetings had to be held, that arrangements have been completed for a four days' conference to be held in St. Paul's Presbyterian church commencing April 28.

REV. L. S. CHAFER, who will be one of the speakers at the Prophetic Conference to be held in St. Paul's church, commencing April 28th.

The Speakers.

At the last conference some seven or eight speakers took part. On this occasion it has been found possible to secure the services of Rev. Lewis Sperry Chafer of East Orange, New Jersey, one of the most noted Bible teachers on the continent, it is proposed to hold afternoon and evening meetings at which Rev. Mr. Chafer will be the only speaker. This arrangement will enable Mr. Chafer to develop his themes from day to day, which, it is believed, will add to their interest and value. His afternoon theme will deal with the subject, "What is True Spirituality." At the evening meetings he will speak on the subject, "The King and His Kingdom." Rev. Mr. Chafer will be accompanied by Mrs. Chafer, who has been invited to spend several months singing to the soldiers and taking part in evangelistic work behind the lines in France. Rev. Mr. Chafer was the leading speaker at the recent Toronto conference.

The meetings will be open to the public. In view of the great interest taken in these subjects and the success of the last conference in Peterborough, these meetings should create great interest.

FOOD DEMONSTRATION

For the Food Demonstration, in connection with the Motor Show, the committee have been fortunate enough to secure Mrs. N. D. Senton, Graduate of Macdonald College, Guelph. These demonstrations should prove not only interesting but extremely profitable, as they are being conducted in accordance with the Food Controller's regulations, and will show how to use the different substitutes for wheat, flour, butter, sugar and meat.

The following demonstrations have been arranged for—

Tuesday afternoon, 3.30 o'clock:
Buckwheat muffins.
Oatmeal date cookies.
Gingerbread.
Wednesday Evening, 7.30 o'clock:
Rye bread.
Rolled oats bread.
Thursday afternoon, 3.30 o'clock.
Fish, baked, boned and jellied.
Recipes for the above dishes may be purchased at the booth.

WOODMEN HELD BASKET SOCIAL LAST EVENING

Interesting Programme Was Provided—Sale of Baskets

A dispute between an Englishman (Mr. J. John) and an American (Mr. Rathell), of the Leonard Construction Company, over the ownership of a basket cost Mr. Rathill $5.25 last night in the Woodmen of the World Hall. The basket in question was a gay and festive affair, auctioned by Mr. John at the basket social, and being decorated in Stars and Stripes and the Union Jack, each party thought he had a better right to ownership, hence the competition ran the price from 50 cents to the above price.

The Programme.

The programme which was included in the entertainment was most enthusiastically received, and the talent displayed a surprise to the large number who attended the social. Mr. Fred. Sutcliffe made an able chairman.

Vocal solo—Mrs. Wagstaffe.
Comic song—Charles Coleman.
Instrumental duet (guitar and mandolin)—J. W. and J. A. Parkins.
Vocal solo—Miss Harrison.
Address by Deputy Hubbard, of Toronto, in which, in his usual facetious manner, he complimented the artists on the programme and the committee in charge for the success of the affair.
Vocal solo—Mr. Rose.
Reading and recitation—Mr. J. John. "Christmas Day in Workhouse."
Vocal solo—Miss M. Allen.
Mrs. Thos. Poole accompanied the different numbers.

Social and Dance.

After the auction sale of the baskets by Mr. J. John, who showed great enterprise in running the prices up, a dance, to the music of Tucker's Orchestra, kept the night lively until the small hours.

Vote of Thanks.

A hearty vote of thanks to the artists was moved by Sovereign B. Moffatt, seconded by Sovereign H. Carr.

FRECKLE-FACE

Sun and Wind Bring Out Ugly Spots. How to Remove Easily.

Here's a chance, Miss Freckle-face, to try a remedy for freckles with the guarantee of a reliable dealer that it will not cost you a penny unless it removes the freckles; while it it does give you a clear complexion the expense is trifling.

Simply get an ounce of Othine — double strength—from any druggist and a few applications should show you how easy it is to rid yourself of the homely freckles and get a beautiful complexion. Rarely is more than one ounce needed for the worst case.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength Othine as this strength is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

PLEDGE RESISTANCE AGAINST TEUTONS.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Resistance against Germany and Austria until victory has been won by the entente, was urged by the congress of nationalities oppressed by Austria, in session in Rome this week.

THE ASHBURNHAM RED CROSS SOCIETY MADE ANNUAL COLLECTION.

The women of the Ashburnham Red Cross Society made their yearly collection of papers and magazines on Wednesday, and succeeded in getting a carload. They wish to thank the public generally for saving papers and magazines for them, and are especially grateful to the owners of motor cars and trucks placed at their disposal, to the women and men who drove them, to the Ashburnham merchants for delivery wagons, and last, but not least, to the men who packed the car.

To Absorb Freckles And Other Blemishes

Every spring numerous inquiries are made by girls seekoing some reliable recipe for removing freckles. Very favorable reports have been received from many who have used mercolized wax during the freckling season. The wax seems to possess unusual properties which completely absorb the freckles, with no harmful effect whatever. The complexion improves wonderfully, becoming as soft as a rose petal, and as delicately tinted. Get an ounce of ordinary mercolized wax at any druggist's, spread a thin layer of it over the entire face every night for a while, washing this off in the morning. For rough, spotty skin, sallowness, blackheads, pimples and all cutaneous blemishes, this treatment is superior to any other.

ANIMALS AND RAIDS

BY CANADIAN OVERSEAS

One curious thing is the behaviour of animals before and during air raids. Dogs for instance. A small nervous dog is usually an extremely good sentinel, and in the early days before proper warnings were given, they were of real service.

A dog hears the vibration of engines or of gunfire long before it becomes audible to the human ears. This was noticeable in Zeppelin raids. In September, 1916, one household was roused by a little terrier quite fifteen minutes before the sound of guns or bombs was heard. While on the other hand an older dog in the same house gave not the slightest sign of any disturbance and slept through the whole business with utter unconcern. Cats seem to dislike firing and during raids show an unwonted sociability.

Up the line this difference in the behaviour of animals has been observed. In a "subaltern's share in the war," there is an interesting passage, "I have forgotten to say before how the different animals take the fighting. Cows usually appear quite indifferent, and often you see them wandering about in between our trenches and the enemy's, quite unconcerned. One would persist in getting in front of my gun (an 18-pounder) so we had to drive it off by chucking empty cartridge cases and clods of earth at it. One dog there was in abject terror and tried to burrow its way into the ground in a barn.

Often, too in the sudden lull of a heavy bombardment, the melody of the larks can be heard high in the heavens as if trying to drown the roar of the guns.

Experience at the air station shows that birds as a rule are excellent sentinels till they become accustomed to the firing. Early in the war parrots were tested out at the Eiffel Tower in Paris with the result that at first they gave warning fully twenty minutes before the aeroplane or airship could be made out by the eye or heard by the human ear. Later, however, they became indifferent.

Pheasants have been found almost invariably to signal the approach of the aircraft at night by their chattering and screaming. When the pheasants begin to talk, the airman gets ready to fly and the anti-aircraft gunners turn out. The screaming of pheasants often precedes by fifteen minutes or half an hour the approach of Zeppelins or aeroplanes.

A good example of the pheasants' acute hearing was noticed during the Zeppelin raid of Jan., 1915, when thirty-five or forty miles from the area, over which the Zeppelin flew, the pheasants shrieked themselves hoarse. Reports from almost the whole north of England show in the same way that they heard the firing in the North Sea which accompanied the battle of the Dogger Bank that same January.

With habit however, they seem to lose this peculiar sensitiveness. Nearly all observers in France have noticed that birds after their first terror gradually become accustomed to heavy firing and treat it all with utter concern like the philosophic cow.

Periodically, hares, partridges and pheasants are seen near advance trenches competing with the rats for any provender that may be obtainable.

QUIT SNIFFLING, STOP SNEEZING, CURE YOUR COLD NOW!

THOUSANDS OF CASES PROVE THE QUICKEST CURE IS CATARRHOZONE.

When germs attack the lining of the nose, make you sneeze and gag — when later on they infest the bronchial tubes—how can you follow them with a cough syrup?

You can't do it—that's all. Cough syrups go to the stomach—that's why they fail.

But Catarrhozone goes everywhere —gets right after the germs—kills them—heals the soreness—cures the inflamatmion—mtkes the Catarrh disappear.

"Nothing I ever used gives the warm, soothing sensation of Catarrhozone," writes Isabel Fry of Seguin Falls, Ont. "I was in a frightful way with catarrh of the nose and throat —bad droppings, hard breathing, bad breath and indigestion. Catarrhozone relieved at once and cured me thoroughly. It is invaluable in colds, sore throat and bronchial troubles." Not difficult for Catarrhozone to cure, because it contains the essences of pine balsams and other antiseptics that simply mean death to catarrh. Large size costs $1.00, and contains two months' treatment; smaller size, 25c and 50c, all druggists and storekeepers, or the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Announcing the Arrival of Modish Tub Skirts

They are here. Our shipment of new fashionable tub skirts has just arrived and there is a wide choice in styles of the cleverest designing. Many are superlatively well adapted to outing occasions, others will fulfill all one might ask of a utility skirt for general wear. Included are skirts of white corded weaves, wash serge, flannel, gabardines satinette, satin and taffeta. All are destined to great popularity this season. In the distinctive models we have only one of a kind so we advise early selection

Skirts of Satinette

Satinette is a perfect washing material. No matter how often you tub it it will retain its satin finish and the skirts will always hang well.

One particular model of this beautiful cloth is sure to appeal to the lady of refined taste. It is made with seven rows of shirring just below the belt, has a slip pocket with button and button-hole finish. A charming model of straight, simple lines. It is priced at $12.75

Poiret Twill Skirt

Characterizing the new narrow silhouette this skirt of poiret twill is ultra fashionable. A guaranteed tub skirt that will give excellent wearing satisfaction. Buttoned down front with large pearl buttons, and it has jutted pockets finished with crow-tax. The price is $9.50

Serge Skirts are Most Fashionable

One of the most elegant models that you will ever see is this pleated skirt of cream French Botany serge. It is pleated with shallow pleats to give a narrow effect, lock stitched a few inches down from the belt which is wide and fastened with white bone buttons. It is simple and attractively charming in every line. The price is $20.00

Skirts of Gabardine

Gabardine makes such good looking, good wearing skirts, and it washes splendidly with very little trouble.

One style has a gathered back, roll pleated in front and has saddle pockets with lock stitch trim on pockets and belt. It is priced at $o.50

Another pretty gabardine skirt is sold at $4.75. It has a double strap belt in front forming a broad belt at the back. Novelty slide pockets give a very smart appearance.

Special Leader White Wash Skirt, $2.98

This white cotton corduroy skirt is excellent value. A well finished smartly tailored skirt at a very moderate price. Made with a slightly gathered back, plain front with new style pointed pockets with flap. This skirt fits well, looks well, and wears well. Specially priced at $2.98

PATRICIA COLLINGE SAYS SHE IS NOT A SINN FEINER

Leading Lady of Pollyanna Company Likes the Canadians — Was Interviewed This Morning

FAVORS CONSCRIPTION

"I am Irish to the backbone, but not a Sinn Feiner, please remember to say that and say it distinctly, and I don't want Home Rule," said charming little Patricia Collinge, of the Pollyanna company when interviewed at the Empress this morning.

Miss Collinge dainty petite and very Irish was delightfully entertaining, telling her life and experience with that unreserved frankness which is so characteristic of her race. Just a little simple, very pretty girl, dressed in a quiet travelling coat of grey tweed, and wearing a small and most becoming street hat of purple straw, she finished her cup of coffee, and although desperately tired from a very bad journey from Kingston, which city she left in a terrible blizzard, she was most hospitable in her interview. Born in Ireland 26 years ago, she came to New York 10 years ago with her family.

"All my life I pictured myself on the stage, and longed to go, so directly I arrived in New York I joined up. From then I have constantly toured the United States and visited Canada with the New Theatre Company six years ago.

Likes the Canadians.

"All my experiences with Canadians have been most happy. I find them so charming and so glad to see me. Peterborough to me, as far as I have seen it, makes me home-sick for Dublin. The market place is exactly like my home town, only the buildings are bigger.

Favours Conscription.

"Conscription? I'm so glad it has passed. Why shouldn't it? Ireland is not the down-trodden, brow-beaten country the United States fosters her people to believe it is—that's where you Canadian are so nice—you have so much better an idea of the country and are not bitter like the Americans are taught to be.

Military Family.

"My only near relative eligible for military service is right in the thick of it—Pte. Norman Collinge, of the 21st American Engineers, and I'm so proud of him. My only other brother is 15 years of age, but he's going too when he can. Of the caste with me only one man is eligible, Glen Hunter, who takes the part of Jimmy Bern; and he has been refused three times, but hopes to make the next draft. The rest are married men and are over age. I'm not married myself!"

MUSKOKA LAKES.

The Grand Trunk Railway have just issued a very handsome and interesting publication on the Muskoka Lakes. The descriptive matter is concise and to the point and is enhanced with illustrations made from direct photographs. There is also a very complete and intelligible map inserted in the publication, together with information as to how to reach Muskoka, and a list of hotels, with their rates, for the season of 1918.

A copy may be had on application to Mr. C. E. Horning, Union Station, Toronto.

GEORGE STREET METHODIST CHURCH.

The pastor will preach at both services to-morrow in the George street Methodist church. The morning subject will be "A Question of Spiritual Mathematics." The evening service will open with ten minutes of song. "The Greatest Question of the Ages," will be the theme of the sermon and there will be appropriate music by the choir and the Misses Hartshorn, who have been engaged in special services during the winter. All the services will be held on the new time. Clocks and watches should be put ahead one hour.

There was a very large attendance at the services at the George street Methodist church last night.

Rev. W. Higgs, of Millbrook, preached a powerful and thoughtful sermon on the subject, "The New Birth." It was a time of deep heart searching and earnest prayer. The meetings will be continued next week.

Sunday Gardening Under Discussion

Resources Committee Has Not Yet Been Asked to Make a Ruling

(Special to The Examiner.)

TORONTO, April 13.— "The people will not be a potato ahead or an onion ahead by gardening on Sunday," is the opinion of Mr. D. W. Snider, the Ontario Secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance.

The question of the extent to which gardening may or may not be allowed on Sunday is causing a lot of discussion at the present time in circles where increased production for war purposes is being urged.

Mr. Snider said there had been considerable agitation for Sunday gardening in Ontario last year, but so far there had not been time for any agitation to develop this year.

"We haven't been called upon to make any ruling in the matter as yet," stated Dr. A. H. Abbott, secretary of the Organization of Resources committee when asked to define the status of Sunday gardening.

CITIZENS REQUESTED TO GUARD CORNERS.

A Precaution to Prevent Collisions When Fire Apparatus Is Out.

Mayor Duncan has requested citizens to stop traffic at street corners when the Fire Department is in full flight. There is always the possibility of collisions, especially if drivers of vehicles approaching on the intersecting streets should not hear the siren and gongs. The Mayor pointed out that citizens can do a public service in this way, and promote the practice of safety first.

MY SON WAS AFFLICTED WITH ECZEMA

The following letter is a testimonial to the power of Swaizema. This case was the son of a wealthy family who had spared no expense.

My son was afflicted with eczema on face and body for three and a half years, during which time I had him constantly under treatment, having had him to specialists in United States and Canada, also to noted mineral springs, none of which effected a cure. Was advised to try Swaizema, one bottle of which cured him. I can heartily recommend this medicine to sufferers of the disease.

Employees Have Signed Agreement

Shipbuilders Will Receive An Increase in Wages.

(Special to The Examiner.)

TORONTO, April 13.—The Polson Iron Works, and the Dominion Shipbuilding Company, have signed agreements with the International Brotherhood of Boiler-makers and Iron Ship Builders in Toronto, whereby over 1,000 men in the two ship yards receive 25 to 30 per cent. increase in wages, an agreement for one year, dated April 15th, and recognition of the International Union.

The total increase in the wage roll of the two companies will amount to over $300,000 a year, but it is likely that this will be exceeded as other men will be covered indirectly by the new schedule.

MEAT INJURIOUS TO THE KIDNEYS

Take a Tablespoonful of Salts if Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take one tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.

Pure block sugar or maple sugar is a more wholesome form of sweets than candy.

Voice of The People

The Peterborough Examiner:
Peterborough, Ontario:

Dear Sirs,—I have your favour of April 4th, enclosing a cheque for $17.50 to cover the several contributions towards the Blind Endowment Fund of Halifax sent to the Peterborough Examiner.

The doners have my sincere thanks for their timely and welcome help, and I am likewise grateful to the Examiner for assisting in raising our fund. I am enclosing a leaflet showing the objects of the fund and the regulations governing the same.

Eight of those who lost their sight in the awful disaster in Halifax are now in the school. Three are little girls under nine years of age, four girls between sixteen and nineteen years of age, and one man. All of these are making practical progress, and with the training they recive will be able to take up life anew and live happy and useful lives.

Again thanking you, I remain,
Gratefully yours,
C. F. FRASER, Supt.

REGINA, Sask., April 13.—That the members of the R.N.W.M.P. will be given opportunity to volunteer for overseas, is the information reaching Regina from Ottawa. Headquarters of the force declined to discuss the matter, but it is an open secret among the members of the force, who have all been given the opportunity to enlist and who to a man have offered their services.

Mr. Kendry's New Limousine At The Motor Show

The Banks Garage has just delivered to Mr. Jas. Kendry a Willys-Knight Limousine, which is by far the most beautiful motor car that has been delivered in Peterborough. This car is equipped with the renowned Knight sleeve valve motor—the same as is used in the British tanks in Flanders, on account of its remarkable exemption from motor troubles and because of its dependability. This motor has only twenty-eight parts and is the quietest running gas engine in the world. It produces more power for the piston displacement than any other motor made.

Many of the best machines are no longer available. Almost every repair department has given up its best for the government service; consequently it is wisdom to get a car that does not require frequent service attention. Repairmen at quick call have not been essential to satisfactory Willys-Knight performances. Let your choice of a car be one of these and thus be independent of trying conditions.

This splendid Limousine will be one of the leading attractions at the Motor Show. Those contemplating the purchase of a high-grade auto should make it a point to inspect and learn the merits of this motor. 2d-86

Route For The Automobile Procession

The automobile procession which will be held on Tuesday, April 16th, will start at 7.50 p.m. The cars will line up along Simcoe street, down Water street to the Market Place, and to te corner of Charlotte and George streets. The course of the procession will be from the corner of Charlotte and George streets west on Charlotte to Park, north on Park to Hunter, east on Hunter to George, north on George to Antrim, east on Antrim to Water, north on Water to Smith, west on Smith to George, south on George to London, west on London to Aylmer, and south on Aylmer to McDonnel street. Here the procession will divide. The first part will proceed east on McDonnel to George, south on George to Murray, east on Murray to the Armouries. The second half will proceed south from McDonnel and Aylmer to Murray, east on Murray to George, where the cars will remain on the south side of Murray street, opposite the Armouries, for the formal opening of the Motor Show.

If you can decorate your car, and if not, come along and make this the largest and grandest parade ever seen in Peterboro, remembering that your efforts are all for Red Cross Work.

All cars should be lined up on Water street or Simcoe street not later than 7.50 that evening.

DOMINION POLICEMAN SHOT BY A GANG

George McLeod May Be Fatally Injured—Was Rounding Up Man Under M. S. A.

SUDBURY, April 13.—Dominion policeman, George McLeod was shot in the body and legs and probably fatally hurt at one a.m. this morning when he attempted to round up a French-Canadian named Whissel under the Military Service Act, in a French community about three miles from Espanola. It is stated that an organized gang, including women, made an attack on McLeod. Inspector Storey and a large detachment of police have left for the scene.

Examiner's Jitney Broke Speed Limit

The Examiner found itself in court this morning in the person of its chauffeur, Mr. Walter Irwin, who was fined $7.60 for exceeding the speed limit. The "jitney" has managed to keep within the law, although traffic officers have on occasion warned the drivers that it was taking long chances with the speed laws. However, the traffic squad should be wary of the "jitney." Any day now it might get the blind staggers, or some sort of astigmatism when it sees a blue coat, and the chief may be forced into the market for more policemen.

Ladies! Salute Him!

Discovers drug that loosens sore, touchy corns so they lift out

A noted Cincinnati chemist discovered a new ether compound and called it freezone and little quarter ounce bottles can now be obtained from any drug tore for a few cents.

You simply apply several drops of freezone upon a tender corn or painful callus and instantly the soreness disappears, then shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you can just lift it off with the fingers.

No pain, not a bit of soreness, either when applying freezone or afterwards, and it does not even irritate the skin.

Hard corns, soft corns, or corns between the toes, also toughened calluses, just shrivel up and lift off so easily. It is wonderful! Seems magical. It works like a charm. Millions of women will hereafter keep a little bottle of the wonderful freezone handy and never let a corn ache twice.

Claims Hydro Electric Commission Of Ontario Employs German Methods

"Financial Times" Makes Scathing Denunciation of Sir Adam Beck and the Hydro Electric Group.

CAPITAL OBLIGATION

(Special to The Examiner.)

Montreal, April 13.—It is not a coincidence, writes T. Kelly Dickinson in The Financial Times, that the Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario, has only one law, that of might. It is cause and effect. Sir Adam Beck cannot get away from the whip and spur policy. If anything is in the way, run over it, crush it under foot, and then set it ablaze—if there is anything left to burn. That is the Kaiser's policy; it is the policy of those in humbler walks in life. In fact it is German, with a capital germ. It is not Canadian policy. Five hundred thousand Canadians are fighting that very policy in France to-day; fifty thousand Canadians have either died or been blinded or crippled in an endeavour to crush the pretension that might is right.

Sir Adam has given the individual householder cheaper electric light than was given by the private owner corporations, but he has made collective householders pay through their teeth and has piled up an enormous obligation for Ontario, and is still going strong.

HAD TO BORROW.

This, the fourth year of the war, when the Finance Minister has vetoed new capital outlay except with his special permission, when every man in Canada is entreated to save his pence to win the war; when we are compelled to go to Washington to borrow an occasional fifty million dollars in order to pay our way; when all these claims and others, such as income and business taxes, pensions for soldiers, hospitals and patriotic funds, are confronting us, Sir Adam is granted $9,000,000 to $10,000,000 (Government funds, for one year's expenditure of capital account) which expenditure of government funds is directed towards the destruction of companies that had developed industrial Ontario many years before.

It is distasteful to deal in personalities but the entire ramifications of the Hydro-Electric group are peculiarly personal.

The head of that concern has resorted to trickery and generally to methods not tolerated in established relationship between men. In a word, he has not played the game. "The end," in his doctrine, "has justified the means."

NEW PRICES ON GROCERY LINES

Demand For Sugar Still Exceeds the Supply

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs appeared in the Canadian Grocer this week.

Advances in three brands of sugar have been made during the week, two of 40c. and one of 15c. per 100 pounds. One refiner has established a new list of differentials which shows considerably higher levels. Shipments continue to show slight improvement but the demand still exceeds the supply.

New prices established on rice range from 1-2c. to 1c. per pound higher, every line being affected by this latest revision. The uncertainty still existing, with reference to further shipments of Eastern rices has firmed the markets at the new quotations and the future, in the case of the rumoured embargo by the Japanese Government against shipments becoming effective, does not look encouraging. Stocks at present in the country are in fair shape.

Import Stopped.

Importation of all goods which come by water is becoming increasingly difficult with the possible exception of sugar. It is rumoured that all imports of grapefruit and citrus fruits via New York from West India ports will be stopped after April 15, the tonnage to be used in transporting sugar. Indications point to European dried fruits and nuts, after all the formalities of having shipments released have been gone through, coming by schooner instead of steamer. With the increased insurance and freight rates this would entail it looks as though further supplies will not be made to this country.

Fruits and vegetables from the South are coming through in fairly liberal quantities. Strawebrries have shown a tendency to stiffen in price and latest crop reports may further accentuate this situation. Tomatoes coming through are very good quality and considerably easier in tone. A car of new Bermuda potatoes has been received during the week.

No change in the flour situation is evident although mills are enabled to operate more nearly to capacity. Mill feeds continue in heavy demand. Further shipments of corn reaching the market will improve the output of mills for the various products. Business, though not heavy, is in fair volume.

HORSE'S KICK DISASTROUS.

BROCKVILLE, April 12. — Last night fire destroyed the barn and contents belonging to G. W. Burgess, grocer, Dundas street, and also a horse. Mr. Burgess was in the barn and a horse kicked a lantern, setting fire to the straw.

CITY OF RHEIMS IN FLAMES

Special to the Examiner:

PARIS, April 13.—(Official.) — The city of Rheims is in flames. The French are attempting to limit the burning area, working under heavy bombardment.

Rheims, the city of the famous cathedral which, since early in the war, has been the frequent target of German heavy guns, and now is a shell torn ruins, has been the special object of German artillery fire at frequent intervals for several weeks past. The city had more than 100,000 inhabitants before the war, but has been very largely depopulated by reason of its close proximity to the battle line and frequent German shelling. Besides its beautiful 13th century cathedral, its architectural treasures include the Arch Episcopal Palace near by dating from the 15th century, 11th century Abbey Church of St. Remy, its splendid Hotel De Ville, or City Hall ,and the Roman Triumphal Arch for one of its gateways.

British Casualties

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, April 13.—Further attacks on the British right wing between Givenchy and Robecq, on the La Bassee Canal yesterday, wholly failed. Two attacks made late in the afternoon to capture Locona were repulsed. The British counter-attacked around Givenchy and took an important German position.

British Casualties.

LONDON, April 13.—British casualties reported in the course of the week ending to-day totalled 8,149 officers and men, divided as follows: Killed or died of wounds—Officers 372, men 1,151; wounded or missing—officers 1,888, men 4,768.

Rumour Was Officially Denied

Special to The Examiner:

MONTREAL, April 13. — At the headquarters of the Grand Trunk railway system here to-day it was officially denied that any plot had been discovered to blow up the St. Clair tunnel.

C. G. E. WIN TWO FROM BOSTON CAFE

The Canadian General Electric team won two of the three games from the Boston Cafe five, in a Ten-pin League match at the Water Street Alleys last night.

The total pinnage was: Boston Cafe, 2,445; Can. Gen. Elec., 2,427.

The Boston Cafe five rolled up the nice total of 891 for their third game; while the C.G.E.'s best game was an 848 count.

For the C. G. E. Jackson and Fielder were the top-notchers with 548 and 512 for respective totals.

The leaders for the Boston Cafe were: Dawson, 538; Thompson, 523; Yates, 501.

Following were the scores:

PETERBOROUGH BOWLERS FOR TORONTO.

This morning a five-man team from the Water Street Alleys left for Toronto, where they will participate in Orr Bros.' five-pin tournament, which has been in progress during the past week. They will also take part in the singles and doubles.

GLAD PLAY AT GRAND TO-DAY

One of the real novelties of the season will be "Pollyanna," the Glad play which Klaw & Erlanger and George C. Tyler bring to the Grand this afternoon and to-night. It should simply be a question of how many people the theatre can accommodate. The most depressive moods cannot withstand the genial glow and sunny influence of "Pollyanna." The Glad Girl moves by merriment and appeals to the tender emotions. She is aglow with youth, vitality, charm and the joy of living and she sends everybody out of the theatre with a new and improved viewpoint of life, and a realization that it is not mere dull dratness, but full of sunshine if we seek it and very much worth the living. There is no questioning the wide and universal appeal of this most unusual play. The whole community will see it, at least it will be seen by so many as the practical enough to make timely seat reservations. In the cast are Patricia Colling, Oswald Yorke, Beatrice Morgan, Joseph Jefferson, Mattie Ferguson, Helen Weathersby, Maud Hosford, Stephen Davis, Glenn Hunter, Mary Barfoot and Selma Hall.

Houses Are Very Scarce In The City

"There's not a house in town," is the aggrieved slogan of scores of house-hunters about the city, "and there's not a house to let," the exasperated real estate agent answers. Three of the leading real estate firms of the city reported the identical conditions related above, and all three admitted that from ten to twenty applicants are turned away daily. The lack of building in the city since the outbreak of the war is accountable to a great extent for the acute condition.

One Householder.

One householder, giving one of his houses a spring coat of paint, turned away twenty eager seekers in succession, who thought that painting meant a new tenant wanted.

Small Houses Wanted.

As a general rule, the smaller houses of a rental of $12 to $15 per month are in greater demand, but several larger ones are called for.

Selling Active.

The transfer in real estate is fairly active this spring. Several large and small properties changed hands this week.

PLAYS PIANO WITH GRAFTED "THUMB"

READING, April 11.—During their visit to Reading this week, King George and Queen Mary, while visiting one of the hospitals were much interested in the case of one of the soldiers. He had lost a thumb, and, being an enthusiastic pianist, felt the loss keenly. A young surgeon amputated the third finger of the left hand and grafted it on in the place of the missing thumb. The man can no use his "thumb" quite comfortably in playing the piano.

BUTTER DOWN THIS MORNING

Maple Syrup Was Plentiful at $2.40 a Gallon.

Two forty a gallon was the average price of maple syrup this morning on the market, and there was plenty to choose amongst ten different purveyors being on the Square at the same time.

Butter came down slightly, selling at 48c and 50c per pound.

Eggs sold at 35c and 38c per dozen.

Chicken was out of reach, selling at 30c-33c per pound; $2.80 to $3.00 per pair.

Potatoes brought $1.75 to $1.80 per bag.

Police Get First Aid Summons To-day

Chief Thompson's suggestion that citizens might avail themselves of the first aid services of the policemen, was accepted this morning. A little girl named Lemon, living on Brown street, near Auburn, was run over by a waggon. Her mother immediately called the police station. Sergt. Reid didn't waste a moment getting into action. He started up town, commandeered a friend's automobile, and at Hunter street met Dr. Morgan who was motoring towards Ashburnham. Sergt. Reid hailed him, explained his mission, which the Doctor immediately accepted and started for Auburn. The little girl sustained a number of bruises, but her injuries were not serious. The incident, however, indicated the possibilities of this voluntary service on the part of Chief Thompson and and his staff.

City Advised To Keep Record Of Sales Of Coal

While in Toronto yesterday Mayor Duncan visited the office of the Provincial Fuel Administrator, and discussed with Mr. Harrington, the deputy-administrator, Peterborough's fuel problems. He was strongly advised to go into the coal market as soon as possible. Mr. Harrington commended the city's plan of buying a reserve of 2,000 tons of coal, but expressed the belief that there might be some trouble and delay in getting it. The regular line companies are ignoring municipalities, and are said to have all the business they can handle from their retail customers. The independents are also reported to have stacks of orders. Mr. Harrington suggested to the Mayor that the city should immediately endeavour to have its orders placed, and the local Fuel Committee, composed of His Worship, Ald. Dobbin and Ald. Taylor will visit the Buffalo dealers, and may go as far as the mines.

Mr. Harrington emphasized the advisability of keeping a record of the sales of the local dealers. The Council toyed with this question a few nights ago, and tacitly agreed to defer action indefinitely. In London, Ont., citizens allege that many persons have already violated the Fuel Controller's order permitting them to store only seventy per cent. of their normal requirements for next winter's use. The City's Fuel Inspector is being sent to Ottawa to examine the books of the London dealers, and to ascertain whether the regulations are being adhered to.

To avoid rumours and recriminations here, the Council has been urged to arrange for keeping an exact record of the fuel dealers' daily sales. It is not too late for the Council to reconsider this question, which is surely not so expensive as some of the aldermen estimate.

MISJUDGED.

(Rochester Times-Union)

Don't judge the Germans too harshly on account of the use they're making of that big gun. Maybe they didn't intend to blow up that Paris Church on Good Friday. Maybe they were only aiming at a hospital.

NO DRAFTEES ON WELLER ST., YOUNG MEN VOLUNTEERED

There have been no draftees from Weller street, and it is stated that none will report for service, for the simple reason that all the eligible men had enlisted. They answered the call when service was voluntary, and the drag net of the draft found no slackers on Weller street.

This is no boast, although it might be a justifiable one, but the residents are proud in a quiet way of the showing that their young men made. It is true that some streets probably provided more fighting men than did Weller, in proportion to the number of homes there, but the salient feature remains in the fact that every young man who was fit to go had responded before conscription came into force.

A man in order to be great must be good, says an exchange. Great criminals and great rascals and William Hohenzollern please note.

Belief that there are as good fish in the sea, as ever were caught is poor consolation when we've lost our bait.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of Thomas Coones, of Apsley, who was killed at Vimy Ridge, on April 9th, 1917.

Asleep in Jesus! blessed sleep!
From which none ever wakes to weep;
A calm and undisturbed repose,
Unbroken by the last of foes.
Gone but not forgotten, in foreign fields,
In a far and silent graveyard,
Where the trees their branches wave,
Lies a loving son and brother
In his cold and silent grave.
We think of him in silence
And his name we oft recall,
But there's nothing left to answer
But the photo on the wall,
Yet again we hope to meet him
When the day of life hath fled,
And with joy to greet thee
Where no farewell tears are shed.

Did It Ever Occur to You?

That the FORD is the only car now selling for less money than before the war?

Have you considered that perhaps RIGHT NOW you can buy a Ford car for less money than you will be able to for some years to come?

If you contemplate buying a car THIS YEAR, you would be well advised to do so without delay.

Even if you do not want a Car until next year, it might pay you to buy RIGHT NOW.

The prohibition of Foreign cars to Canada will undoubtedly cause an unprecedented shortage and increase in price.

In addition, there is daily expected an Excise Tax of 10 p. c. on all unsold cars.

Buy your Ford car or Truck RIGHT NOW if you would save delay and money, yes, and probable disappointment.

German Gunfire Scores Direct Hit On Amiens Cathedral

Rheims Has Been Bombarded Continuously and Partly Set on Fire

Special to the Examiner:

PARIS, April 13.—German gunfire has scored a direct hit on Amiens Cathedral. Rheims has been bombarded continuously, and partly set on fire.

The Amiens Cathedral is one of the largest and most beautiful in Europe. It was started in 1220, and was many years in building. It is 470 feet long, and has a transept 123 feet across. Among other notable buildings in Amiens are the Hotel de Ville, the Palis de Justice and the Hotel Deu. Amiens has been under bombardment for several days, and a large part of its civilian population has evacuated the city.

FUNERAL OF PTE. VAN NORMAN

Returned Soldiers Pay Last Respect to Dead Comrade

The funeral of Pte. George Van Norman took place this afternoon to Little Lake Cemetery, the services being conducted by Rev. Robert Pogue. A large representation of the Great War Veterans' Association marched in the funeral procession, which was headed by the Temple Band. The pall-bearers were all former members of the Canadian Expeditionary Force who had seen service in France.

Social and Personal

Mr. T. F. Matthews returned last night from Toronto.

Mrs. Craven and little daughter, Joan were in the city to-day to complete arrangements to return to New Port. Mrs. Craven has just received word that Captain Craven had a narrow escape from death in Paris this month when a bomb dropped from a German plane which came, contrary to the usual Hun custom from the south and surprised the city, falling within a few feet of him.

Major and Mrs. Medd returned last night from Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Lundy spent a few days in Toronto this week.

Mr. H. P. Kennedy returned to the city last night from Toronto.

Mr. Holly Hill is the week-end guest of friends in Orillia.

Mr. R. J. Soden was in Toronto yesterday on business.

Mr. Fred Calvert of the London Life staff leaves on Monday for Guelph to take charge of that district. Mr. Calvert during his connection with the Peterborough staff, has put up a splendid record and well deserves this promotion. His friends wish him the best of success in his new field.

Miss Katie Kennedy of Stirling returned to Peterborough on Monday to resume her studies in the Peterborough Normal School.

Miss Della Deymare of Fenelon Falls, has accepted a position in the city.

Miss Marjorie Demill and Miss Mildred Powles of Fenelon Falls have returned to Peterborough to resume their studies at the Normal School.

Mrs. George H. King has returned home after spending a few days in Orillia.

Mr. Geo. Laing of 489 Cedar street, is improving after an accident recently in the Canadian General Electric.

Mrs. J. C. Roper, wife of His Lordship Bishop Roper of Ottawa, was at the Empress to-day en route for Lakefield, where she will spend the week end with Rev. A. W. MacKenzie.

Mrs. B. Q. Dench and Misses Barbara and Alice, Lakefield, were in the city to-day.

A pleasing feature of last night's Y.M.C.A. circus was the presentation to Miss Gladman of a box of chocolates from the boys in recognition of her kindness in playing the accompaniment to the clown dance.

Mr. W. G. Scollard, Lindsay, was in the city to-day.

Mrs. G. Trotter was in Lindsay this week visiting friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sheehy and family are now occupying the residence lately occupied by Mrs. J. R. Stratton.

OBITUARY

WILLIAM BULLEN.

With all the members of his family at his beside, Mr. William Bullen died at ten o'clock last night, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. H. J. McCannan, 612 Walkerville avenue, in his 70th year. Mr. Bullen had been in poor health for the greater part of the past winter and a week ago he was forced to take to his bed. His strength gradually waned until the end last night. Mr. Bullen was born in Cavanville and came to Peterborough 27 years ago. His wife died 12 years ago this month.

Two sisters are Mrs. Belle Thompson, of Winnipeg, and Miss Matilda Bullen of this city. His daughters are Mrs. George Valway, Toronto, Mrs. H. J. McCannan, Mrs. C. E. Curtis, and Misses Eva and Pearl Bullen of this city. Mr. Robert Bullen of Campbellford is a son.

The funeral on Monday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock will be private. Interment at Little Lake cemetery.

WILLIAM IRVINE VILNEFF.

William Irvine Vilneff, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Vilneff, 230 George Street, died early this morning, after a long illness from heart trouble, aged 12 years and 2 months. He was born in Cordova, and came to the city two years ago with his parents.

Funeral on Monday at 3.30. Service at the house at 3.15, conducted by Rev. Mr. Greatrix, before leaving for the Little Lake Cemetery.

WEDDING BELLS

YORK—CROUTER.

On Wednesday evening last the marriage took place of Miss Pearl Crouter to Mr. Alonza York. The ceremony was performed by Adjutant McElhiney at the home of the bride's uncle, Mr. Sidney Crouter, 281 Townsend street. The bride, who is a daughter of Mr. George Crouter, was dressed in grey silk and carried a bouquet of carnations. The couple were unattended.

BRANTON—BLODGETT.

A very pretty wedding took place in Peterborough on April 10th, 1918, the bride being Miss Helen Mayerene Blodgett of Smith Township, to Frederick H. Branton of Oshawa.

The bride was becomingly attired in corn blue silk poplin, while the bridesmaid, Miss Margaret, twin sister of the bride, wore grey silk poplin. The groom was supported by Mr. W. Cockerill of Oshawa.

The bride was the recipient of many costly presents, showing the high esteem in which she was held. The presents included a silver sugar bowl and a dozen spoons from the drawing room of the Bonner-Worth. The groom received a handsome cut glass salad bowl from the Williams' Piano Co., with whom he is employed.

In the evening about one hundred friends and neighbours gathered to say good-bye and wish them a happy wedded life. The evening was spent in games and dancing. The happy couple left for a short honeymoon to Toronto. On their return they will reside in Oshawa.

New Heintzman Hall Representative

Mr. Herbert Heintzman, of Toronto, has accepted a position with Heintzman Hall, Peterboro, and will join the sales staff for this district, under Mr. B. H. Britton's successful management. Mr. Heintzman could not be otherwise than an experienced piano man, as the name stands for all that, and more, as his work in Toronto for a number of years, has testified.

Recruits For The Railway Construction Unit

A party of four men enlisted by Sergt. Stanley for the Railway Construction Battalion, left this morning for Hamilton where the depot of this unit is situated. The recruits to go to-day were P. Lavery, Angus McDonald, Wm. Edwards and Thos. A. Simpson.

VICTORY LOAN COST 1¼ PER CENT. TO FLOAT.

Hon. Mr. Maclean Promises to Show What Was Paid to Each Newspaper.

OTTAWA, April 12.—Hon. A. K. Maclean, acting Minister of Finance, submitted a statement in the Commons to-day showing the cost of floating the last Victory Loan. He gave the expenses as follows:

Organization expenses	$ 376,000
Publicity campaign paid to Dominion Publicity Committee	163,000
Canadian Press Ass'n.	207,000
Remuneration to brokers ..	750,000
Commissions to canvassers.	1,140,000
Remuneration to bankers ..	984,395
Total	$3,620,395

These expenses, Mr. Maclean added, did not include printing and other expenditure, which would probably bring the total to approximately $5,000,000, or about 1¼ per cent. of the allotment.

PLOWING UP FALL WHEAT.

Stratford, April 13.—Two tractors to aid in the spring plowing have been shipped to Dublin vicinity from Toronto. Reports gathered from Perth County indicate that in many parts of the county, the fall wheat crop is more or less of a failure, and in some cases is being plowed up. Spring wheat will be sown to some extent all over the country.

BOY MISSING.

From His Home on Orpington Road Since Since April 12th.

Missing from his home on Orpington Road, Peterborough, since 7 a.m. on Friday the 12th inst. George Thorpe, 14 years of age, medium height and build, fair complexion.

Dressed in brown boots which have been blackened black stockings, blue pants, grey sweater, with red stripe throughout, light grey jacket, and peaked cap.

This boy worked with a farmer, named David Vatier, at Cavan, last summer 1917, and was also at that farmer's place yesterday. He has since left that farm and no trace of him can be found.

Mrs. Thorpe, the boy's mother, has no objection to her boy working on any farm, but before any farmer employs this boy she would like the farmer to call and see her or telephone 552 so as she will know where the boy is, and her mind set at ease.

Any person having information of this boy's whereabouts is requested to notify Chief Thompson.

BRITISH TO CONSTRUCT GUN TO THROW SHELL 80 MILES.

London, April 12.—In the House of Commons to-day J. I. MacPherson, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of the War Office, informed a questioner that steps had been taken to construct a British gun capable of throwing a shell more than 80 miles.

HOUSE PARTLY DESTROYED BY FIRE.

A house at the corner of Dalhousie and Bethune streets, occupied by Mr. Payne, was partly destroyed by fire this afternoon. The fire was attributed to a grass fire which crep under the building, which was of frame and plaster construction. The damage will be about two hundred dollars. The house is owned by the Chamberlain estate and is insured.

Could Not Use Guns Because Of Women

But Quebec's Chief Ordered the Constables to Hold Back Crowd

QUEBEC, April 15.—Chief Trudel, of the Quebec Municipal Police Force, took the stand Saturday at the coroner's inquest into the death of the civilians killed in the recent rioting here. He read the official and written report he had submitted to the Mayor. It relates to the precautions the police took and also an admission that the police force is too small to cope with events like those which broke the peace here last week.

Speaking of the precautions taken on Friday night when the Registrar's Office was stormed and set on fire, the chief said he had posted twenty-eight men in front of the Auditorium Annex, and he had prepared to station more men inside the narrow stairway leading to the Registrar's offices, but that his men could not get into the stairway, as the keys to the doors were unavailable. He said that the constables had been ordered to hold back the crowd, but that it was difficult for them to shoot among a crowd where there were women and children.
and children.

"If my men could have gained an entrance to hide in the Registrar's stairway they would have used their guns, for then they would have been sure of hitting only disturbers, and there would have been arrests and the trouble would have then and there been quelled," said the chief.

CHIEF CROSS-EXAMINED.

Major Barclay, the local representative of the Militia Department, questioned the chief on what precautions he took to quell the riot. The chief explained that on the night when No. 3 police station was attacked he did all he could to keep the crowd from storming the station, and getting the Federal detectives. He said his men protected the Federal detectives, who escaped through the police station cellar. Chief Trudel swore that none of the Federal detectives wounded on that night were hurt while in the action. They were led to the open by the municipal police and wounded later when the mob got at them in the streets, away from the station. Belanger was assaulted on a street car he had boarded on Crown street.

The French And British Reinforcements Are Arriving On The Flanders Front

British Army Now Holds Strong Positions Although Situation is Still Regarded as Critical by the Military Experts—Dominion Government Will Speed Up Recruiting

THE WEEK-END BULLETINS

Monday Morning Bulletins,

WASHINGTON, April 15. — Both French and British reinforcements are reaching Haig's army in Flanders, which is now in strong positions.

OFFENSIVE STOPPED.

LONDON, April 15. —The German offensive has made no progress since Friday.

SPEED UP RECRUITING.

OTTAWA, April 15.— The Government will speed up recruiting, and is expected to get fifty thousand more men in khaki at once.

ARE STILL HOLDING.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, April 15.—The British lines are still holding fast and are intact.

Sunday Evening Bulletins—
MORE MEN NEEDED.

OTTAWA, April 14.—It is rumoured here that the abolition under Class One of the Military Service Act, with the exception of men physically unfit, will be resorted to by the government to secure men immediately needed.

GERMANS DRIVEN OUT.

LONDON, April 14.— The Germans were driven out of Neuve Eglise by the British. Four attacks against the British positions south-east of Bailloul were also beaten off.

ATTACKS REPULSED.

PARIS, April 14.—The French, in an attack south-west of Ervilles Serel made an advance of several hundred meters along a front about two thirds of a mile. A German attack in the Noyon sector was repulsed with heavy losses to the enemy.

Sunday Afternoon Bulletins—

BRITISH LINE INTACT.

LONDON, April 14.—Last night, after fighting all day, the British line along all parts of the Lys battle front (where German thrust is to the west and south-west), is reported intact. Heavy fighting still continues on the Neuve Eglise front.

NIGHT BOMBARDMENT.

PARIS, April 14.—Paris was subjected to a night bombardment for the first time since the long range shelling began. No casualties reported up to noon to-day.

COMPARATIVELY QUIET.

PARIS, April 14.— Lively artillery activity during last night on the front between Montididier and Noyon. Otherwise the front was comparatively quiet.

Sunday Noon Bulletins—

AERIAL FIGHTING.

LONDON, April 14.—Friday our airplanes dropped thirty-six tons of bombs, and fired one hundred and ten thousand rounds of ammunition. Sixty-two enemy planes brought down, and twelve of ours missing.

OSTEND BOMBARDED.

BERLIN, April 14.—Via London. — British bombarded Ostend with heavy calibre guns, and the aircraft bombarded Zeebrugge on Thursday night. We set fire to a British gunboat which was abandoned by its crew.

BRITISH REPORT.

LONDON, April 14.— In the bombardment of the Flanders coast on Thursday night the only British vessel missing is a small motor boat.

TORPEDO BOAT LOST.

LONDON, April 14. — A despatch from the Hague says a German torpedo boat struck a mine off Zeebrugge Friday and sank.

TWENTY-SIX KILLED.

PARIS, April 14.—It is officially announced that twenty persons were killed and two injured in Friday night's air raid.

GERMAN ATTACKS REPULSED.

LONDON, April 14.—The War Office says the British line from Meteren to Wulverghem on the northern side of the battle front near the Franco-Belgian border was maintained against a strong German attack last night. Germans were also beaten off in an attempt against the British defences near Festubert.

Saturday Evening Bulletins—

SITUATION IS CRITICAL.

LONDON, April 13.—All the evening papers agree that the next three days will be the most critical of the war. While the position of the northern line on the British front is little less alarming to-day, military authorities still take a grave view of the situation.

CORONER'S REPORT.

QUEBEC, April 13.—Coroner's jury in the riot cases blames the troubles on the tactless and grossly unwise fashion in which the Federal police acted towards absentees under the Military Service Act.

AMERICANS ENGAGED.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, April 13. — Northwest of Toul, the Americans repulsed two German attacks delivered in force, and took thirty-six prisoners.

HUNS WANT INDEMNITY OF ONE HUNDRED BILLION MARKS

Clerical Member of Reichstag Talks Big—Saxon Minister Wants No "Understanding" to End the War

MIGHT STANDS AGAINST MIGHT

STOCKHOLM, April 15.—Further defections among erstwhile supporters of the German Reichstag resolution of July 19 continue to be reported. The latest is that of a clerical member, Herr Emminger, who addressing a meeting, said:

"An indemnity of a hundred billion marks, or more, must be exacted, of which France would be permitted to pay a part in colonies, and England a part in raw material."

The Minister of Finance of Saxony, addressing a meeting of an association of Saxon industrialists, declared that the war must not end with any sort of a friendly understanding, but must be fought to a victorious end. Continuing, the speaker declared "Germany's enemies, who are responsible for lengthening the war, must be compelled to pay cash for it. We have no occasion to worry our heads about how they will raise the money to pay an indemnity."

Even Vorwaerts appears to have surrendered hope that the Government can be brought back to its former position. In a succession of editorials it recently has been lamenting the altered state of affairs. It declares, however, that after having done all in their power to prevent the Empire from taking what they consider a false course, they must accept the consequences of this new course, and "where might stands against might the Socialists must stand on the side of their own people."

SUNDAY BALL DIES IN N. Y.

Assembly Rules Committee Blocks Lawson Bill

ALBANY, N.Y., April 13.—Without taking a formal vote, the Assembly Rules Committee yesterday decided not to report the Lawson bill, which would permit professional baseball games on Sunday afternoons. This action virtually means the death of the measure, which previously had passed the Senate.

United States Spring Crop Is The Greatest Since 1911

And 1911 Was the Best Spring Wheat Year in History of the Country--Ohio, Without Spring Wheat in 40 Years, Has 5,000 Acres This Year—Food For the Allies.

WASHINGTON, April 15.— America's 1918 spring crop promises to be the greatest since 1911, the best spring wheat year in the history of the country.

Although spring wheat sowing is still a week or so away in most sections, reports from every state in the union compiled here to-day show American farmers will respond to the world's cry for food by sowing one million acres more to spring wheat this year than last.

Last year's acreage was slightly more than 18,000,000, and the record acreage of 1911 was 20,000,000.

Department of Agriculture crop experts say the extra million acres sown this year should yield an average of fourteen bushels to the acre, adding 14,000,000 bushels of wheat to feed the United States and the allies.

Ohio Does Its Bit.

Ohio, a state which has not grown any spring wheat for more than 40 years, will have about five thousand acres this year as a result of the campaign for spring wheat sowing carried on by the State and Federal Agricultural Departments.

New York and Illinois are also sowing spring wheat for the first time in years.

The bulk of the increased acreage, however, is found in the Pacific North-West, especially in Washington, where last year's planting was held up by adverse weather condition.

Turning to Rye.

Many farmers also are turning to rye as one of the most profitable crops of the year. The 1918 yield will practically double that of two years ago, according to Department of Agriculture estimates.

An overwhelming demand for rye as a wheat substitute is largely responsible for the spurt in the rye acreage, it is believed.

Rye is selling around $2.75, and will grow in regions too cold for wheat and on soil too poor for other grains.

Rye yield this year will be 86,000,000 bushels, the Department of Agriculture estimates, against 60,145,000 bushels last year, and 48,862,000 in 1916.

ORDER FOR CLASS "B" MEN

Those Raised to Category A to Be Retained on Depot Battalion.

The Militia Department has issued an order affecting Category B men, and telling what the procedure will be after they are taken on active service. The order reads:

"Men so ordered to report for duty will be taken on the strength of the depot battalion as heretofore and be immediately examined by the medical officer.

"If it appears to him that they should be recategorized, they will be examined by a medical board at the earliest opportunity.

"Those who can be raised to category A will be retained on the strength of the depot battalion. Those found to be improperly placed in category B, and those lowered to category C, will be dealt with in accordance with the following order:

"All soldiers of category B or category C, who are not required for depots or units providing drafts for overseas service, will be transferred to special service companies."

All previous orders at variance with the foregoing orders are temporarily suspended.

Men placed in category D or E will be dealt with this way:

"D men will be retained on the strength of their unit for treatment, otherwise they will be granted leave of absence without pay until men in category D are ordered to report for re-examination.

"Men in category E will be ordered struck off the strength."

It is pointed out that one of the most important features of the new rulings is that B and C men will be kept separate from A men. Equally important is the announcement that after being once called to the colours B men, whenever possible, will be raised to A. It is also the intention to raise all those possible to A of both the B and C men already with the colours.

A little sugar added to the cornmeal when mixing it for hot cakes is a desirable addition.

Well-planned meals are a fuel saver, as more than one thing can be cooked over the same fire.

Oysters overcooked will be tasteless. Never allow them to cook after they have curled at the edges.

REMOVE U. S. GENERAL FOR PRO-GERMAN TALK

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 13. — Discharge from the Federal service of Brigadier-General Frederick S. Resche, of Minnesota, a National Guard officer, born in Germany, and charged with unpatriotic expressions and sentiments, was announced by the War Department.

The discharge was ordered by President Wilson after an investigation of the charges. Gen. Resche has been serving with the 34th National Guard Division, composed of troops from Minnesota, Iowa, Nebraska, and North Dakota, now training at Camp Cody, New Mexico.

NINE BOILS

Kept Coming On Neck One After the Other

Anyone who has ever suffered from boils, knows how sick and miserable they make you feel.

When you think you are about cured of one, another seems ready to take its place and prolong your wretchedness. All the poulticing and lancing you may do will not cure them and stop more coming.

Boils are simply bad blood bursting out, and the bad blood has be made pure before the boils disappear.

Burdock Blood Bitters is the greatest blood purifier known. It cleanses the system and removes every particle of foul material from the blood, then never another boil comes and the cure is permanent.

Mr. Geo. Ayers, 302 Gloucester St., Ottawa, Ont., writes: "I wish to tell you what I know about your wonderful Burdock Blood Bitters. In the spring I suppose my system needed cleaning out, for I had nine boils come on my ne[illegible] after the other. I quickly got a bottle of B.B.B., and before it was half finished I felt a great change, and it certainly put an end to my boils, otherwise I might have had a lot more. I recommend B.B.B. to all I can, for I know it to be a great remedy."

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

Mrs. Sexton Is Amazed At The Artist's Offer

CHAPTER XLI.

The next morning at breakfast, I spoke of Merton Gray's call.

"I knew you felt ill, so I didn't ask you to come down," I said to Mrs. Sexton. She must think it queer that I had not.

"Thank you for being so considerate." Then, "Did you have a pleasant evening? I thought I heard the piano."

"Yes. I played for nearly an hour. I happened to speak of my dinner—that I was going to give one — and what do you think! When I told him we were planning a costume dinner, he said if we would decide the period he would paint the place cards for me."

"He, Merton Gray, offered to paint your place cards! I am amazed! His prices are absolutely prohibitive, save for the very wealthy, and I never knew he condescended to paint favours or cards."

"He never does! That is just for me, my—our dinner."

I had been very careful to say, "we" or "our" whenever I spoke of the dinner. It was only fair to Mrs. Sexton, she was being so decent about it.

"He must admire you very much, to make such an offer," and I imagined Mrs. Sexton looked at me with an interest I never before had noticed.

"Oh, we are real good friends!" I explained, "I like him so much. He took me in at Mrs. Loring's dinner. I should have died if he hadn't! I didn't know anyone, and they put the whole table between George and me. Then he took me in, also, at Evelyn's dinner. You know he was the means of my knowing her. He brought her to call on me.

An Added Interest.

"Tha was kind of him. You seem very fond of her."

"I am! She's a dear, and so is her husband. Mr. Gray is quite a friend of his."

"Well, now that you are to have a famous artist do your cards, we must be more particular what costume period we select. The cards will be well worth saving. I can imagine the astonishment of some people I know, when they hear that your party was favoured."

"Yes, we must have the very prettiest dresses and bonnets for the women, and the men must all be in knickerbockers and ruffles. Then—but he, Mr. Gray said he would bring us some books in a day or two. Let's not decide anything until then.

"That will be the best plan. You will have to give him plenty of time. Also your guests will want good notice —to prepare their costumes."

I scarcely heard what she said. I was thinking how well Merton Gray would look in costume.

"Will Mr. Howard be willing to dress?"

I stared guiltily. I never had given George a thought. Would he spoil it all by refusing to appear in costume like the rest? He thought so many things "childish," beneath his dignity.

A Plea For Help.

"Oh I hope he will! If he doesn't what shall I do? I am so afraid he will refuse." I was on the verge of tears at the thought.

"Don't worry. We must think of some way to make him."

I could have hugged her for that speech.

"How how? You know I don't want him to have the slightest idea that I had any help with the dinner. And if you do anything, he surely will. He hasn't much faith in my ability." I spoke bitterly.

"He will have, as soon as you prove it to him. Men like Mr. Howard have to be shown. Let me think. How would it do for me to come in after he gets back. And you speak of Mr. Gray's offer. Then leave the room to get either the book with the costume picture, or the picture itself, and while you are gone I will say something that will make him consent to dress like the rest. But don't ask him until we try our little ruse. If he refused you, I am afraid I could not persuade him to change his mind."

"That would do nicely! I believe he'd do anything you told him. He thinks so much of your ability," again I spoke bitterly. In spite of any longing to have George appear to advantage before my young friends, it nettled me that another woman should be able to get him to do something he would not do for me.

"That's settled then. Now suppose we vary the day by lunching at the Elite. It is your husband's favourite restaurant."

"I should love it," how much she knew about George.

"Very well, we'll go on one condition," her voice took on the cold, formal tone I so hated, "and that is that you order the luncheon with no help from me. And that you order it briskly."

"What do you mean by briskly?"

"Not mooning over the menu, or asking if I would like this or that. I am your guest. Treat me as such."

To-morrow—Self Reliance.

NAT. GOODWIN SEEKS DIVORCE FROM FIFTH

He and Margaret Moreland, His Fifth Wife, Have Agreed to Divorce.

NEW YORK, April 14. — Nat. C. Goodwin formally admitted that he had been sued for divorce by his fifth wife, Mrs. Margaret Moreland Goodwin, and also settled another point which has been vexing his friends by announcing that he would not fight the suit. The discovery was made several days ago that Mrs. Goodwin had filed papers in New City, Rockland County, but until last night Mr. Goodwin refused to admit it.

"I may as well admit that Mrs. Goodwin and I have agreed to disagree," he said, "but the disagreement is as amicable as any dispute between husband and wife can well be. We understand each other perfectly, and please don't get the idea that we are not friends. As a matter of fact, we are on the most friendly terms, and it is not my idea to oppose Mrs. Goodwin's wishes in this matter at all."

Mr. Goodwin declared that the case case will be heard before a Referee.

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

You Can Bring Back Color and Lustre With Sage Tea and Sulphur.

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. At little cost, you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound and look years younger. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite and not a medicine. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

17 RACERS PERISH IN FIRE AT BOWIE.

And Financial Loss is Said to Total $50,000—Lamp Explodes.

BALTIMORE, M.D., April 13.—Seventeen race horses, valued at $50,000 in all, perished in a fire which destroyed a large stable at Bowie race track early yesterday. An exploding lamp caused the blaze, it was stated. G. C. Winfrey lost Woodward, Jem, and Eagle, Fragonard, Vallory Club, and a pony owned by Walter House; Russeau, belonging to M. Foulk; Jocular, owned by J. Johnson, and Eye Glass, Ernest Hall, owner, also were lost.

Telephone Economy

Co-operation

EVERY Canadian is alive to the necessity for unselfish service of some sort, looking towards war-time economy and efficiency.

¶ Where once a few men co-operated in the running of a machine or a business, whole communities are now working together for the welfare of all.

¶ Each telephone call is a temporary partnership between the caller, the operator and the person called.

¶ To get the best out of the telephone so that its task of effecting economies and promoting efficiency may be well done, there must be co-operation.

¶ The person calling must

Make sure of the number by first consulting the directory.
Speak distinctly, directly into the mouthpiece.

¶ The operator must

Repeat distinctly the number asked for, and make quick and accurate connection.

¶ The person called must

Der German Cobbler

He Makes His Shop an Up to Date One

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1915, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

One evening as I vhas at work at my shop Mr. Sprickman comes in und begins to sniff und smell und make up some faces.

"Do you smell some new mince pies?" I asked him, und he answers:

"Der law ought to complain for you. Dot old lamp of yours alone gifs out a smell like some horse dead for two weeks. Hans, you vhas a back number. You vhas forty miles into der woods, vhile all der peoples around you vhas up to date. If a man comes along here in der evenings und likes a cement patch on his shoe he looks into der window und sees dat old lamp. The place vhas gloomy und dark. Dat man says to himself dat your leather vhas mouldy, your shoe pegs rotten und dat you can't get good work done. So he goes along to some cobbler shop mit enterprise. Dat old lamp has cost you a good many million dollars in loss of trade."

"Maype it vhas so, but I don't say nothing."

"If you have four gas burners in here," he goes on, "all vhas different. Your shop vhas so light dot you can see vhen you drop a two dollar bill from your pocket. People who go by stop und say to themselves dat you are up to date, und dey vhill rush in here in such crowds dat it takes four policemens to rap der heads. A great fortune is yours, Hans, und are you going to grab on to it?"

"But I have no gas," I says.

"But you must have gas. Dot's vhat we are talking about. You vhas an old friend of mine. I have some spare time on my hands just now, und I vhill put in dot gas und see all about it. Vhen it vhas in, I tell my clerk to give you the werry best gas und not mix any molasses with it."

"If you do dot, Mr. Sprickman, dot's more dan a brother would do. It vhill show me dot you vhas der biggest hearted man in der world. I never haf sooch kindness offered me before, und it makes some tears come into my eyes."

In two days Mr. Sprickman gets a man, und dey dig a ditch und put in a iron pipe and run der pipe into my shop. Den Mr. Sprickman gets some gas fixtures. Dere vhas four lights. Und my wife she claps her hands und says we vhas rich. In three or four days a man comes in mit a big iron box on his back and says to me:

"Hello, Dutchy—here vhas your gas meter."

In five days more Mr. Sprickman comes in again. He looks around mit joy on his face. It vhas delightful to see him. We shake hands und hug each other, und he asks:

"Hans, didn't I tell you so?"

"You did," I says. "I vhas a rich man now, und you vhas all to blame for it. I can do twice as much work as before, und I don't smell one single smell, except dot of roses. Oh, Mr. Sprickman, it vhas so good to meet a man like you."

"But what about this little bill, Hans? We might as well settle up tonight."

"Bill? Bill? Vhas dere some bill?"

"It's only a little one. I shall ask you to pay me $47.50 for my work. Dot vhas way cheap. If I had done dat work for Mr. Wanderbilt it would have been $400, but you und me vhas just like brothers, you know. Come down mit der long green, Hans."

I don't come down mit der long green—not just den. I come down on der floor in a faint, und Mr. Sprickman haf to hit me five times with his hammer before I vhas all right again. But I can't talk to him. My throat was all swelled up. He says he vhill see me some odder time, und he goes avhay.

Den comes a man from der gas office. He valks in mit a vhistle und opens der closet door to look at dat meter. His hair rose up und lifted his hat, und his eyes were like two teacups.

"Vhas it all right?" I asks.

"It vhas more dan all right, Hans," he replied. "You have burned about 3,000,000 feet of gas in der last twenty-eight days! You keep right on, und der gas company vhill haf porterhouse steak three times a day. Vhill you give me a check?"

"How mooch?"

"I vhill take $100,000 und come back again tomorrow with der wagon to take der rest."

I belief he goes out, but I dunno. I faints away again. Und vhen I come to I vhas in my bed upstairs und my wife und children vhas crying out dot I vhas dead. Der doctor vhas dere, und he says:

"No; he isn't dead. He vhas just ripe enough for der idiot asylum, und dat's where I vhill send him."

But I promised to be good, und he don't send me. In three or four nights more Mr. Sprickman calls, und he shakes me by der hand until I vhas tired. Den he lets go und says:

"Hans, I vhant to congratulate you."

"About vhat?"

"Vhy, about being up to date."

"Vhat you mean?"

"Vhy, you vhas in debt about $1,000,000."

"Und I can never pay."

"But you don't haf to. Der idea vhas to get in debt as much as you can und to keep piling it up. Dot makes you a business man und up to date. You don't worry about your debts. Let the odder fellow do all the worrying. Good night, brother Hans; good night."

Und I burn all the gas I can, und I buy all the leather on trust I can, und I vhas a pretty happy old man for a cobbler.

When a man does something mean to you that you had thought of doing to him it wraps the golden rule.

If money talks it is probably a paying teller.

New Bankruptcy Act Will Probably Cause Much Discussion, Ottawa Committee Decides.

OTTAWA, April 13.—At the inaugural meeting of the special committee of the House appointed to consider the new Bankruptcy Act introduced by S. W. Jacobs, George-Etienne Cartier division, it was decided, in view of the discussion the bill would in all probability cause throughout the country, to notify the various business interests. Those to be notified include the Provincial Governments, Bar Associations, Boards of Trade, Retail and Manufacturers' Association, and sthe agricultural interests.

H. B. Grundy, of Winnpieg, who drafted the new Act, said it had been his object to draw up a commonsense business man's Act, and not one that creditors would seek to evade. It was based mainly on the English Bankruptcy Act. He stated that he had gone thoroughly into the Act with the retail interests of the country, and it had received endorsation with the exception of the section representing the appointment of trustees.

Hon. Hugh Guthrie was elected chairman of the committee.

My Second Medical Examination

By ALAN HINSDALE

(Copyright, 1917, Western Newspaper Union.)

I received my degree of M. D. on the 25th of June and on the 26th started for a town in the West, intending before getting down to practice to put in a couple of months' recreation. I fell in with a party of tourists, one of them being Miss Julia McGregor. When she discovered that I was a sawbones, there arose a bond of sympathy between us, for she was a daughter of one of the most eminent surgeons in America and a lecturer in a medical college.

Preferring the company of these people, especially Miss McGregor, to traveling alone, I clung to them. Where they went I went. We visited the Yellowstone park and other regions of interest and when my outing was ended I pronounced it the most delightful I had ever experienced.

And well I might, for I had been falling in love with Miss McGregor, and she had reciprocated.

It was the middle of September when, having been referred by her to her father, I went to ask him for the hand of his daughter. She rounded up her outing by a visit to friends in Chicago, but had written her father that I would call upon him at the family home, which was in a suburban town near the city of Philadelphia.

Having boarded the train that was to take me to my destination, the car being nearly filled, I took a seat by an elderly gentleman who was reading his evening newspaper. But he laid it on his lap soon after the train started and gazed out of the window. I addressed him, asking him how far my station was from the city. He informed me very courteously, and told me he lived there. Then I told him I was going to call upon Doctor MacGregor, and asked him how I could find the doctor's residence. He told me he knew Doctor MacGregor very well and gave me the necessary directions.

While conversing with the gentleman I told him that I was a newly made M. D. I said I thought that I had an advantage over older doctors in that I had learned the latest discoveries in medicine.

My auditor listened to me attentively, occasionally asking me my opinion as to the merits of antitoxins for various diseases that were well known to the laity and I answered him in such language as would be understood by a layman, carefully avoiding medical terms. Whenever I was obliged to use scientific nomenclature he did not ask me to define the word used, nor did he at any time show a want of comprehension.

Before our journey was half ended he had asked me a number of these questions that I could not answer, and finally said that he did not see from my replies that the doctors just graduated knew any more than those who had been long in practice, and he did not think that doctors knew much, anyway, whether young or old. I was angered at this, and retorted that whether or no doctors were ignorant of their profession, they knew more than the laity. "Do you look upon your fellow citizen, Doctor MacGregor, as an ignoramus?" I added.

"What he knows," was the reply, "is as a grain of sand to a whole seacoast to what he doesn't know."

At this point the trainman called our station and we left the car together. The gentleman cooled my wrath by inviting me to ride with him in his motorcar to the home of my father-in-law in prospect, and I accepted his invitation. We entered a beautiful car which was in waiting, and were driven away by a uniformed chauffeur. My companion telling him to stop at a certain house by the way. On reaching this house, the former pointed to a handsome place not far distant as Doctor MacGregor's, saying the doctor usually came up on the train we had traveled on and if he was not at home he would be very soon.

The maid who answered my summons at Doctor MacGregor's said that she expected the doctor very soon and I sat down to wait for him. In a few minutes who should enter the room but my companion on my trip from the city.

I was staggered. Why should he be there? He approached me with an amused but kindly smile, saying:

"Well, my boy, I'm sorry to have angered you, but it is the only revenge I could inflict upon a man who is about to rob me of the greatest treasure I possess."

"You—you are Doctor MacGregor?" I gasped.

"I am. I took occasion, incognito, to draw you out on various subjects. Now you may put your best foot forward, and make yourself appear the marvel my daughter has described you."

"Heavens!" I exclaimed. "I thought I had passed my medical examination last June. I didn't know that I was under the rack when you were questioning me."

"You doubtless acquitted yourself better this afternoon than on graduating, not knowing you were being examined."

The doctor and I dined together, and when I departed I had his consent to an engagement with his daughter. Since then I have become convinced that what doctors know is "as a grain of sand to a whole seacoast" to what they don't know.

But this is so in every department of science.

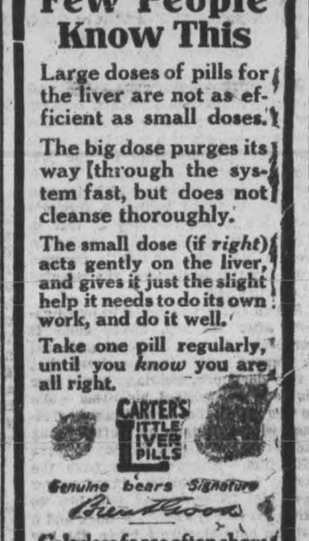
DOCTOR COULD NOT HELP HER

But Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Saved Her from a Serious Operation.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—"I suffered something dreadful from a displacement and two very bad attacks of inflammation. My doctor said he could do nothing more for me and I would have to go to the hospital for an operation, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash have entirely cured me of my troubles and I am now in good health. I am willing you should use my testimonial and hope to benefit other suffering women by so doing."—Mrs. F. PLATT, 9 Woodbine St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Operations upon women in our hospitals are constantly on the increase, but before submitting to an operation for ailments peculiar to their sex every woman owes it to herself to give that famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial.

If complications exist write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for advice.



Few People Know This

Large doses of pills for the liver are not as efficient as small doses.

The big dose purges its way through the system fast, but does not cleanse thoroughly.

The small dose (if right) acts gently on the liver, and gives it just the slight help it needs to do its own work, and do it well.

Take one pill regularly, until you know you are all right.

How a Holiday Was Made Interesting

By ALAN HINSDALE

It was a dismal afternoon in November, one of those cheerless, cloudy days when the sun does not shine, the wind is chilly and a few dead leaves still hang to the trees. I had nothing to do since it was a holiday. About three o'clock I telephoned Mildred to ask if I might come over and get away with the rest of the day until dinner time. She said I might, so I accepted my own invitation.

I found Mildred in the library. The contrast within and without rendered the former especially cheery. There was a fire of logs on the hearth, there were plants in pots and a canary bird.

"Drat these holidays," I said; "they're hard to get through with, except in the summer, when I wish it was all holiday."

"I'll try to make the rest of this one bearable for you," said Mildred.

So we chinned for half an hour, when Mildred took up a pack of cards and shuffled them.

"Shall I tell your fortune?" she asked.

"If you like."

She drew a card table before the fire, taking a seat on one side, while I did the same on the other.

Mildred turned a card.

"The queen of spades. There is a dark lady—a brunette—who is pining for you."

"Blondes are my favorites," I said. Mildred is a blonde.

Then followed the knave of diamonds.

"This is your rival. The color being red, he is fairly well-to-do."

"All right," I said, "let him spend all the money he wants on the brunette; I don't want her."

The next card was the queen of hearts.

"Aha! There comes my girl!" I exclaimed.

"Yes, but you don't know that she loves you."

"Are you sure she doesn't?"

"Well, she might a little bit. She respects you."

"Come, come; I don't want any of this sister business."

"But you must take what the cards say."

"Proceed."

Presently the king of diamonds was turned up.

"A very rich man loves the queen of hearts, an oldish man. She is not dazzled by his wealth, but his position is excellent."

"I think I know the gentleman," I said, frowning.

"You don't, either; I know who you think he is, but—"

"Is the first letter of his name R?"

She did not reply to my question, but went on turning the cards. Ace, two, three came up.

"You are going to propose to the queen of hearts three times."

"You bet I don't. If she doesn't accept me the first time I ask her, I don't want her."

Then the knave of clubs came up.

"Another rival," she said.

"For the queen of spades or the queen of hearts?"

"I don't know," she said listlessly.

"I do; he is the fellow who sports himself on the gridiron. He made that big run and scored a touch-down the other day."

"I don't know who you mean," she said.

"Oh, yes, you do; he is the chap who danced three times in succession with the queen of hearts at a certain ball the other night."

"And who sat out three dances with—with the queen of spades?"

"Didn't he have provocation when the queen of hearts acted so?"

"Who began it?"

"You did."

She looked up at me with another of those smiles on her lips, and this time a dimple in each cheek.

"I thought this was fortune-telling," she said, and went on turning the cards. I put my hand on hers to stop her.

"Mildred," I said, "it's time to stop this nonsense of using kings and queens for real persons."

She stopped turning the cards, but I didn't take my hand from hers. It was very soft and warm.

No one wishes to propose in a noise, and the bird sang so loud that I was upset by it. I paused, and Mildred rose from her chair, went to the bird and began to chirp to it. The spell was broken. I looked at my watch.

"It's near dinner time," I said; "I must be going."

"Tata."

"Tata."

I went home and wrote a letter to Mildred. All there was in it was: "I love you; will you be my wife?"

The reply was even more laconic. It was simply:

"Yes."

Automatic Electro Plating.

A machine that automatically electroplates 100,000 doorknobs or other metal parts a day is described by the Scientific American. It consists of a series of tanks arranged in an oval 50 feet long, over which passes an endless chain from which rods carrying racks are suspended. The racks are filled with the objects to be plated, and these are dipped successively into the tanks containing the solutions to be used. The average time required for the complete process is one hour.

GREAT CANAL IS PLANNED

Forth and Clyde Waterway Has Been Under Consideration by British for Several Years.

There has been vaguely before the public for some years a great scheme—the Forth and Clyde canal—writes a correspondent of the London Times. Germany did not declare war until the Kiel canal was completed. There can be no question that if—during these last three years—we had been able to move ships quickly and safely from one side of Scotland to the other it would have been to our benefit. That benefit will always obtain, but I am not now talking of mere transit, but of new town planning possibilities—a calculated incentive to expansion for those who wish to live under the most modern conditions, unhampered by what we now consider the mistakes of the past.

Seven years ago the government was given powers to make a road where it pleased and acquire the land on either side of it for development. Let them now consider taking their courage in both hands and themselves driving across Scotland a canal for ocean-going ships. Along its banks there would arise during its construction roads and rails and power stations, together with the houses of the men making all these. Later would follow the factories, and we should eventually have a lineal state garden city, seaport, manufacturing, residential, up-to-date and uncongestible. It would be a governmental experiment in spreading the people for their advantage.

NO MORE ASTHMA
A CURE DISCOVERED THAT REALLY DOES CURE

Thousands Testify to the Lasting Benefit Derived by This Marvelous Preparation.

The country is simply wild over the wonderful cures of chronic asthma that are being made every day by Catarrhozone. It is a scientific surprise, a perfect marvel the way it brings old chronics back to health. You will say so yourself after you have used it once, say so after the very first time. Ever since people first began to have asthma, Catarrhozone is certainly the best remedy discovered.

Creighton E., Thompson, well known in Calgary, writes:—"Nothing too strong can be said for Catarrhozone. I suffered four years from asthma in a way that would beggar description. I went through everything that man could suffer. I was told of Catarrhozone by a clerk in Findlay's drug store and purchased a dollar package. It was worth hundreds to me in a week, and I place a priceless value on the benefit I have since derived. I strongly urge every sufferer to use Catarrhozone for Asthma, Bronchitis and Catarrh.

The one-dollar package last two months; small size, 50c.; sample size, 25c.; all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Russian Prisoner's Escape.

The record of escapes from war captivity has been claimed for a Russian prisoner who recently crossed the Dutch frontier in his twelfth attempt to escape. Three times he fled in the direction of Luxemburg, twice he made for Switzerland, on several occasions he took the road to Poland and again to Denmark, but in every case without success. This was the first time he had tried his luck in the direction of the Netherlands frontier, and after being two months and twenty days on the road success crowned his perseverance.

Acquiring Happiness.

Happiness is something that is not to be acquired in the way that we acquire other things. It is not something entirely separate from ourselves and our work, as so many other things are, but is woven into our daily living, and if we are patient and look for it, we shall find it hidden in many places, and a part of many things that at first we did not recognize as akin to it, in any way. Look about you, and see if you are not missing much of happiness that might be yours, if only you would recognize it when it crosses your pathway.—Exchange.

AWFUL ATTACKS OF HEART TROUBLE

EASED BY SECOND DOSE OF Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills

One of the first danger signals announcing something wrong with the heart is the irregular, beat or violent throb. Often there is only a fluttering sensation, or an "all-gone" sinking feeling, or, again you may experience a smothering sensation, gasp for breath and feel as though about to die.

In such cases the action of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills in quieting the heart, restoring its normal beat and imparting tone to the nerve centres, is, beyond question, marvellous.

Mrs. Frank Arseneau, Newcastle, N.B., writes: "I have awful attacks of heart trouble for the past five or six years, and as I had tried many kinds of medicine without getting any better, I decided to give Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills a trial, and to my surprise I found ease from the second dose. I continued taking them until I had used six boxes, and now I feel as well as can be.

"At present my sister is taking them for nervousness, and finds great comfort by their use."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

THE TWO BRASSEYS.

Curious Parallels In Careers of Famous Men.

The death of Lord Brassey recalls a curious parallelism between the careers respectively of the two Brasseys and the two Stephensons, who were their forerunners. Born in 1781, George Stephenson had by 1830 solved the problem of the correlated railway track and locomotive steam engine by the construction and practical operation of the Liverpool & Manchester Railway. His son Robert Stephenson, born in 1803, became his father's effective assistant in the working out of this difficult undertaking, and between 1830 and 1859, the year of his death, he was by far the most noted railway engineer of his day, his activities having extended over most of the civilized countries of the world.

Thomas Brassey, Lord Brassey's father, born in 1805, received from George Stephenson in 1834 a contract for the construction of an important railway viaduct, and, taking full advantage of the new railway promotion activity, he was ceaselessly engaged, till his untimely passing in 1870, in the work of railway construction. Like Robert Stephenson he carried out successfully many undertakings abroad as well as at home, one of them being the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada, for which Robert Stephenson projected the tubular bridge across the St. Lawrence at Montreal.

Lord Brassey was born in 1836 and he became, in spite of an exceptionally strenuous life, an octogenarian. His inclination, however, was toward political life and naval administration. Entering the House of Commons, by way of Devonport, in 1865, he passed to the House of Lords in 1886, and he was able throughout his long public career to render valuable service to the nation in the promotion of naval efficiency. He was a persistent voyager, and during his active career he sailed in his celebrated yacht, "Sunbeam," a total of more than four hundred thousand miles.

Handwriting.

Prof. Saintsbury adds to his literary reputation the less creditable one of possessing a handwriting which nobody can read. He admits himself quite contritely, that "no man or woman alive" can decipher his hieroglyphics. Whether he can decipher them himself is a question which might be put to him. Well-nigh who shares with Lecky the reputation of being the most illegible great man that ever existed, could not read his own letters. They sometimes used to be sent back to him, and, if he could not remember the subject of them, he simply had to let the matter drop. Lecky was the despair of the compositors to whom fell the duty of setting up his "History of Morals." The men were allowed to take some of the folios home, to meditate at leisure the meaning of the scrawls. Bad writing is apt to ruffle tempers and it certainly wastes time. "Imitation is the sincerest flattery," but great men's kinks and crotchets are bad, and imitations are far worse.

FOR BABY'S TENDER SKIN.

A child's skin is tender as well as beautiful and eczema may be caused by chafing of clothing, the use of poor soap, exposure to cold or sudden change of temperature. Probably no treatment for eczema has ever proven so successful as Dr. Chase's Ointment, and this applies particularly to baby eczema. This ointment is delightfully soothing, stops the itching and consequently prevents scratching. Gradually the sores are healed up, and the skin is left soft and velvety.

A BLESSING IN DISGUISE.

(Burlington Hawk-Eye.)

If later on we can get all our people to work so devotedly, to give so liberally, for great works of peace as they are now working and voting for the war—then shall the war indeed have been a blessing in disguise for our country. For many needed some powerful shock to arouse them and to work with the others for the common good.

This Letter From Newcastle

IS A MESSAGE OF GOOD CHEER TO PEOPLE SUFFERING FROM NERVOUS AND KIDNEY TROUBLES.

Newcastle, Ont., March 25.—Mr. Wilmot had been treated in hospital and at medical springs but found that cure only came when he used Dr. Chase's medicines.

His kidneys were deranged, circulation was bad, so that he suffered from cramps and the nerves were upset. By the combined use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills he was enabled to entirely restore the system to health, and thereby get rid of the many annoying symptoms.

Mr. B. W. Wilmot, Newcastle, Ont. writes:

"For the last eighteen months I have suffered from nerve and kidney troubles. My hand would cramp up and also my side, and at times my hands were utterly useless. My kidneys pained and my liver was also deranged. I took doctor's medicine, was in a hospital, and even went to medical springs, but I must say that nothing has done me so much good in so short a time as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and Kidney Liver Pills. Since using this combined treatment my cramps have completely stopped and I feel a great deal better. I may also say that the word constipation need never be mentioned since the goodness of Dr. Chase's medicines has been found out by the public. You may use my letter and my name if it will aid others to profit by my experience."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50c a box, a full treatment of six boxes for $2.75, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates and Co. Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

Tells How To Stop Annoying Knocks

Many Different Kinds and Each Presents Its Peculiar Problem —Pre-Ignition a Frequent Source of Trouble

(By William H. Stewart, Jr.)
President Stewart Automobile School

Were you ever troubled by a persistent motor knock that came suddenly and went as quickly — not a knock from a loose part, but one that comes and goes as the spark is advanced or retarded, or as the throttle is opened and closed? Such a knock is due to a pre-ignition. Do not confuse the knock with that of a loose bearing, although it is sometimes difficult to distinguish between them.

Pre-ignition means ignition of the compressed charge of gas in the cylinder before the dead centre is reached. This has the effect of making pressure in the opposite direction, which results in a distinct knock. Ignition should occur in a manner to push the piston downward on the power stroke; that is, the pressure from the burning and expanding gas should not be fully exerted on the piston until dead centre has been passed. So long as this is properly regulated no pre-ignition knock can occur. The common causes are: Spark too far advanced, glowing carbrings the spark into the compression stroke, several degrees before dead centre. This will stop the piston in its upward movement, or even cause a knock, because the piston has time to reach dead centre before the full pressure of the explosion is developed. But if the car is on a hill, making the engine pull more slowly, the case is different. The piston does not have time to reach dead centre before a good part of the explosion pressure is developed and so the downward pressure causes a knock. To stop this is merely necessary to retard the spark lever.

Another cause of pre-ignition and knocking is glowing carbon in the head of the engine. This may be caused by using too much gasoline or too much oil, sometimes from overheating or from using a poor grade of oil. Carburetor troubles which would cause it are leaky float valve, heavy float, spray nozzle adjustment too wide open, air valve stuck or too tightly adjusted, or choke valve not opening properly. Excess of gasoline is shown by back smoke, whereas a bluish-white smoke indicates oil.

The action here is due to the fact that gas becomes heated when compressed. If we do this in the presence of glowing carbon or red-hot metal the gas is ignited at a certain point of compression. This will not ignite the incoming gas on the suction stroke, but requires a pressure greater than atmospheric before ignition can take place. If we feed in a large supply of gas by means of the trottle, the compression pressure is raised and ignition comes before dead-centre — pre-ignition — and we hear a knock. If we open the switch the engine will probably continue running—it is firing itself.

An overheated engine may result from failure of the cooling system, running on low gear, racing the engine, or lack of oil. With overheating may be classed a glowing snag of metal left in the cylinder head by the machinist working on the casting. The red-hot metal sets fire to the mixture at a certain point of compression and a knock results. If the switch is opened, the engine runs merrily on. In such a case the engine must be stopped immediately, so as to prevent any harm to pistons, cylinders, or bearings. Throw out the clutch, put gears in high speed, close throttle to weaken the explosions, apply foot brake gently, and let in clutch suddenly. This throws the whole weight of the car on the engine, which stalls.

It is not particularly difficult to distinguish the various kinds of knocks, the principal difficulty being to locate and remove them. To identify a spark knock retard the spark slightly and the knock will stop. A carbon knock will not disappear even with spark retarded. Also, by removing valve caps or spark plugs you can note to what extent the cylinders are carbonized. Other knocks, such as those caused by a glowing metal snag, etc., can only be located by close inspection on the part of an experienced mechanic.

De-Sulphating the Plates in Storage Batteries.

One of the chief causes of loss of efficiency in lead accumulator cells is sulphation. While sulphate of lead usually forms on the active material and at a point where it is least wanted—at the junction of the metal supports and the paroxide. The formation of this sulphate is due either to the impurities in the oxide employed, foreign substances in the lead or lead alloy, or chemical impurities in the sulphuric acid or water.

USING DIRTY WASTE OIL FROM AUTOMOBILE CRANKCASES

Old, dirty and worn out oil, drawn from automobile crankcases, drip-pans and other sources need not be thrown away. It can be mixed with coal dust and screenings and used for fuel. Use a pint or more with each hod of screenings mixing well, so as to make a dry pasty mass that will barely hang together. In this way two otherwise useless products may be satisfactorily employed as a fuel.

Greasy water should never be put into the kitchen sink, but if it is, the grease that collects on the surface of the sink can be wiped up with paper.

PATRIOTISM OF THE STOMACH

Neither Fried Chicken Nor Biscuits Found by Hungry Hunters on Farmer's Table.

There are all kinds and varieties of patriotism—almost as many as there are pickles of a certain variety. There is the patriotism of speech, the patriotism of arms, or money, of service and so on. But of them all the hardest for the average individual is the patriotism of the stomach. So thought a bunch of Indianapolis men who invaded Brown county for a day of hunting, says the Indianapolis News.

After a day of hiking and tramping over the hills, in which a nice string of rabbits was the prize, these "tired business men" adjourned to the farmer's house where they had planned on a big "feed." You can imagine their surprise and disgruntled feelings when on seating themselves at the table they found neither meat nor bread. The expected fried chicken and hot biscuits were missing. Of course, no one said anything, but a good many thoughts made the air quiet.

That evening as they were leaving for the train the old farmer friend pointed to a small placard in the window, and said: "Well, boys, the next time you come down we'll have that fried chicken and biscuits. Mary said we was a member of the United States food administration now, and what was the use of havin' a pledge card if you didn't keep the pledge."

They had chosen the wrong day. Besides bringing home a lesson to some of the party it served to call their attention to the fact that almost every home down there, no matter how humble and how far back in the hill, had a food administration pledge card in the window.

BANANA FLOUR AND BREAD

Green Fruit, Full Grown, Is Peeled, Sliced and Dried, Then Ground in Ordinary Corn Mill.

At a meeting of the Horticultural club of Trinidad, samples of banana flour and bread were exhibited and the method of preparation described. It was explained that the bananas from which the flour and bread were made had been taken from trees only five days previously, the 'silk fig' small variety of bananas producing the best results, reports Henry D. Baker, American consul at Trinidad:

The process was described as follows: "Full-grown green bananas should be selected. Peel, slice and dry quickly, preferably on a galvanized sheet, then grind in ordinary corn mill. From 63 pounds of green bananas 16½ pounds of flour had been obtained in the specimens shown. The bread, which was very palatable, had been made from two parts of banana flour and one part of wheat flour. The banana flour could also be used as a substitute for oatmeal porridge and also for making puddings.

THE BRITISH PALACES.

The Homes of the Royal Families of England.

Some misapprehension exists concerning the offer by his Majesty of certain royal palaces to the nation for war purposes. There has not been a new or recent offer, but his Majesty long ago declared his willingness to place certain royal residences at the disposal of the nation. The following statement on the subject is authorized:

"In August, 1914, Kensington Palace and St. James' Palace were offered by the King to the Red Cross, but both these buildings were found to be unsuitable for the purpose of a hospital for several reasons, notably the absence of an efficient drainage system. In 1916 Balmoral was offered, first of all as a hospital, and secondly as a convalescent home, but the fact that it could only be used for eight months in the year, and the great distance from London, proved insuperable objections to his Majesty's offer being accepted.

"At the beginning of 1916 the question whether the state rooms at Buckingham Palace could not be used in any way by the Red Cross was seriously discussed, but the same difficulty with regard to the drains occurred. To make the palace suitable for this purpose it would have been necessary to build a separate entrance, so that the weekly investitures should not be interfered with, the only entrance into the state rooms being the grand entrance, and if this was utilized for hospital purposes his Majesty would have been obliged to discontinue the investitures. It having been reported to his Majesty that there was no existing further demand for beds for the wounded in London the King came to the conclusion that the expense of creating an efficient drainage system, erecting lifts, and building a separate entrance could hardly be justified, and that it would be wiser for him to give a large subscription to the Central Committee of the Red Cross and Order of St. John of Jerusalem than to spend money on these alterations. His Majesty accordingly gave the sum of £10,000 last year.

"The King has, however, made it clear to the Red Cross that in the event of there being any dearth of beds for the wounded in London he will be pleased to consider whether the state rooms at Buckingham Palace could not even now be converted into a hospital.

"While no use has been found for Balmoral, St. James' Palace is occupied by Queen Mary's Needlework Guild, and also the North of Ireland Association for supplying comforts to Irish regiments. Kensington Palace has been handed over to Lady Macdonnell for the Irish Regiments' Comforts Fund.

"The question as to whether any of the apartments at present occupied by organizations supplying comforts to the troops, or even the State Apartments at Buckingham Palace, could be profitably used for Government purposes, is still under consideration by his Majesty's First Commissioner of Works and there the matter stands for the present.

"The King's sole anxiety in reference to these questions is and has all along been to do his best for the nation and for the men of his fighting forces, and no considerations of personal convenience have been or will be entertained by his Majesty."

Contract Marriages?

While the controversy still rages in France around the problem of providing husbands for the young women of the republic after the war, French psychologists and economists have indignantly rejected any suggestion of the adoption of the "ersatz," or substitute marriages, as put forth by Germany. An extensive campaign is being carried on by Dr. Robert de Simone, a noted physician, for the legalizing of "contract marriages" for a period of three years. His plan is for the contracting parties to be at liberty to dissolve their union at the end of the three years. Any issue of the marriage is to be cared for by the state in the event of the father and mother being unwilling to assume responsibility, the parents to devote a percentage of their earnings to the education and maintenance of the children. — Capper's Weekly.

Ancient Heligoland.

Centuries ago Heligoland, the present great German naval base in the North Sea, was at least five times its present size and a place of no little importance. Like so many islands, it had a peculiar attraction for the peoples of the surrounding mainlands. They stood in awe of it, and mythology claimed it for its own. It was here that Forseti, the god of justice, had a temple, as had also, according to another tradition, the goddess Hetha, a special object of veneration among the Angles of the mainland. Later on it was the realm of the Pagan and Radbod.

Ages of Common Birds.

An English investigator says the average ages to which some of the more familiar birds live are as follows: Crow, eagle, raven and swan, each 100 years; heron, 69; parrot, 69; goose and pelican, each 50; sparrowhawk, 40; skylark, 30; canary, crane and peacock, each, 24; pigeon, 20; nightingale, 18; goldfinch, pheasant and partridge, each, 15; lark, 13; robin and blackbird, each 12; thrush and common fowl, each 10; wren, 2.

BOY ROBBER LOST HIS NERVE

Youth Reported Alleged Visit of Bandit, But Later Was Induced to Produce Stolen Jewelry.

A thrilling story of guns, masks and robbery, which had stirred a country neighborhood by its recital, melted into the make-believe of a yello-back novel, once investigators were on the job, says the Indianapolis News. A talk between two persons, which is said to have occurred behind a farmer's barn, led to the recovery of loot in the form of jewelry and a confession from a boy, who reluctantly dragged from his trousers pocket the remains of a dollar bill.

Sheriff Coffin was called in by neighbors after the boy, whose name is purposely withheld, had communicated to persons with whom he lived that a very dark man, wearing a mask over his face, had visited his home while he was alone; that he had been threatened with a shotgun and, after rifling the house, had forced the boy to leave with him. About a mile from the house, the boy related, the stranger gave him 25 cents and told him to "keep his mouth shut." A duck and a Belgian hare also were taken, the boy declared.

When the sheriff arrived there was a consultation behind the barn, and when it had been concluded the boy dug the jewelry out of the ground, told his friends that he had sold the duck at a nearby grocery for some money; that the Belgian hare escaped while he was on his way to the grocery, and that the masked man was the creation of his own imagination.

"Give him another chance," the sheriff told the guardians of the wayward boy. "He won't do it again."

The boy nodded confirmation.

Lantern on Broadway.

The dimming of the white lights in New York has brought the jokers to the fore. Recently after the current had been turned off a man walked up the big street with a lighted lantern. He wended his way across Broadway, and after swinging the lantern about his head much after the fashion of trainmen signaling, he continued up the street. He had sown seeds that began to sprout in many directions and a few minutes later rival humorists appeared with lanterns, electric flashlights, and one optimist tried to keep a candle going as he walked down toward Times Square.

Boche Had Sense of Humor.

Rain had fallen steadily for three days and nights and the trenches were in frightful condition. The German trenches, a few yards distant, were in an even worse state. Suddenly a plaintive voice cried out:

"Are you dere, Jock? Haf you whisky? We haf plenty water!"

Not bad for a boche, the platoon decided.—From "All in It," by Ian Hay.

GRAY-DORT

OWN A GRAY DORT YOU WILL LIKE IT

Well Done—

WE wanted the Gray-Dort car well done beyond comparison. In striving to have it well done, we found the accepted formulæ of motor car building wholly inadequate.

We found for example, that we wanted a better, simpler, sturdier motor than was being used in cars of the Gray-Dort class. So we called in Etienne Planche, perfecter of the Peugot motor, and had him build the splendid power-plant that goes in every Gray-Dort.

We were not satisfied with the comfort of other light cars. So we designed a special body of unusual roominess, with extra good cushions, and 50 inch full cantilever springs in the rear.

We found that many owners of cars at all prices had trouble with the starting and lighting system. For the Gray-Dort we secured the Westinghouse.

Throughout the entire car it is the same. Fine materials, painstaking workmanship, correct design have made this a fine car, yet a less costly car than many that lack its quality.

The new Gray-Dort embodies all the good features that won instant success for former models. The 4-cylinder motor is a triumph of smooth, economical speed and power. The chassis is sturdy and quiet. The springs are long. The upholstery is deep. The equipment is absolutely complete from electric starting and lighting to the tools. New lines of beauty have been given this model. The five-passenger touring car is $1,125; the three-passenger fleur-de-lys roadster is $995; the Gray-Dort special, beautifully finished and with extra details of equipment is $125 above the list. All prices are f.o.b. Chatham.

British Detective Was Guard of Many Monarchs And Terror of Criminals

ONE of the most famous of British detectives, and a man who probably knew more about the international political underground world of London than any other man of his time, died recently, in the person of William Melville.

An Irishman from Kerry, he joined the force as an ordinary police constable, and in his progress to the chief superintendentship of the "special" or political branch of the Criminal Investigation Department, at New Scotland Yard, he had to deal with dynamite and anarchist plotters through very troubled times.

A type of the straight, up-to-date detective, employing modern methods, he was never afraid to adopt any new idea that would help him in the successful carrying out of his work. He always recognized the power and usefulness of the press in criminal investigations, and he was never "given away" by any journalist.

One of his invariable duties was that of acting as cicerone to traveling royalties. When the ex-Czar of Russia visited Britain, a few weeks before his marriage, under the able guidance of Melville, he was made acquainted with every phase of the criminal life of the worst areas of London, both East and West. Night after night, in company with his expert guide, the ex-Czar threaded his way in and out of the unsavory haunts of the criminal fraternity, particularly the political criminals of the anarchist type, and never once did he suffer any bodily harm.

Whenever Queen Victoria and Edward VII. visited the continent, despite what their mission may have been, the famous detective accompanied them, wherever they went. And there is a story that he discovered and circumvented at the last moment an anarchist plot to kill the Kaiser during his progress through London.

Naturally such clientele were not slow to show their appreciation. The Shah of Persia astonished him by casually presenting him with one of the largest turquoises in existence. Membership of the Victorian Order was conferred on him in 1903, and only a month before he died he was created a member of the Order of the British Empire, while France, Denmark, Portugal, Italy, Spain and other countries bestowed decorations on him.

Melville's department in the early days dwelt almost exclusively with the Irish-American political offenders, and subsequently with the anarchists. His great proficiency as a linguist, an attainment he had acquired abroad while "keeping an eye" on the ports, was of the utmost service to him in London when he was called upon to watch the doings of a horde of foreign criminals who arrived after being driven out of their own countries.

In the course of these duties he suffered a number of narrow escapes from death or injury at the hands of the desperate criminals he was successful in arresting. Probably one of his narrowest "shaves" was when he captured Meunier, who had killed several people at the Cafe Very in Paris with a bomb. Melville recognized him at Victoria Station, and, although unarmed, he at once seized the armed criminal.

Melville held the greatest contempt for such fantastic creations as Sherlock Holmes, and so-called detective authors. "Put a man like that down to a job," he was wont to remark, "and you will find him as useless as a child. Those high brow theories won't work, at least not in practice." Gentlemen detectives shared alike in this contempt. And he was fond of recounting the occasion when Scotland Yard, as an experiment, decided to appoint educated men direct into the detective force without having first to serve their time as police constables. "There are four of them," he remarked. "Two were afterward sentenced for accepting bribes; another was dismissed as inefficient, and the fourth disappeared."

When Melville retired from the "Yard" his services to the state did not cease — for some time he was engaged on the Dutch mail service lines, experiencing many exciting adventures with German secret service agents and being instrumental in the execution of not a few.

A Submarine Lily.

The great water-lily in the Royal Botanic Gardens, London, finished its longest season in January and has disappeared beneath the water of its tank. Uusually the lily ends its career about the middle of Ooctober, but this year its life has been prolonged by the greater amount of autumn sunshine.

How the lily vanishes and is reproduced is explained by Mr. North, the curator. The thick root-stock gradually rots away, and the fruits, which are about the size of a cricket ball remain at the bottom of the tank.

They are fished up in the spring and the seeds are extracted. A single seed, though no larger than a pea, will in four months produce a plant that will cover an area of 1,000 feet.

In its native district, the Amazons, the Victoria Regia is largely used by the natives as food. It grows on the lagoons and is perennial.—Tit-Bits.

Iceberg In Lake Erie.

A berg was seen by the U. S. Lighthouse Tender Aspen, which was out on Lake Erie in search of gas buoys set adrift by ice. It is described as fully 200 feet in length and about 25 feet in height, and was drifting with the wind towards the mouth of the Detroit river. This is the first ever recorded on this body of water.

Hoover in Australia As He Impressed Men Who Met Him While There

AUSTRALIA has discovered Herbert Clarke Hoover, the United States Food Administrator. It remembers that Mr. Hoover began his career in Australia as far as high finance and big business are concerned. Men who worked with him in the Commonwealth many years ago recall with pleasure to-day the keen, reliant, youthful American who saw vast potentialities in the tailings dumps of Broken Hill. Among these friends is Mr. W. L. Baillieu, M.L.C., one of Australia's foremost mining and commercial leaders.

From different sources an interesting story has been gathered of Mr. Hoover's early days. His ability was noticed in 1898 by Mr. C. A. Moreing, of the firm of Bewick, Moreing & Co. Mr. Moreing brought Mr. Hoover to Australia and gave him the management of Hannan's Brown Hill at Kalgoorlie, West Australia.

In 1901 he left Australia for China still under the direction of the same firm, obtained valuable mineral concessions and qualified for the partnership which the firm granted to him in 1908. It was while paying a special visit to Australia as a partner in the firm of Bewick, Moreing & Co. that he became aware of the possibilities of the flotation process for making valuable the unused zinc tailings dumps at Broken Hill. He secured options over the great accumulations of zinciferous ore and tailings available. His firm in conjunction with other firms formed the Zinc Corporation Ltd., which to-day is said to have an ore reserve of 1,700,000 tons.

A personal description of Mr. Hoover is given by Mr. W. L. Baillieu, who says:

"I first met Mr. Hoover about 12 years ago, and regarding him from a business standpoint, he was one of the most capable men I have ever encountered. His business and economical sense was of the highest order, and he always got right to the heart of the matter under consideration by the shortest route. Having heard his views, which were almost always convincing, one felt that the ground had been covered completely, and that there was little else to be said concerning it.

"The business under consideration having been concluded, it was Mr. Hoover's habit to call in his typist and dictate while walking restlessly up and down the room. Then he would have the typed script read over, and, turning to his business associates, would ask if there was anything to add to it. From that moment the business in hand, however important, was fixed and put behind him, and his mind became centered on the next problem to be dealt with.

"I often felt in talking with Mr. Hoover that it would have been a good thing for the business world if a gramophone with a receptive record could have been on hand to register some of the many excellent and original business axioms he so frequently voiced. He was eminently logical, and his ability for lucid expression was complete.

"I cannot claim a personal friendship with Mr. Hoover for the reason only that he did not make intimate friendships. We were associated in business dealings essentially; otherwise he was a man apart. But one could not help feeling interested in the man; there was so much that was original in him. His outlook on life was so thoroughly sane, and his manner of going through it at times amusingly quaint.

"His hobby was motoring, and if anything went wrong he attended to it himself, for in addition to being theoretical, he was also a practical engineer—practicality in everything was his strong point. Dressed in correct attire, he would get out and get under; and reappear from beneath the chassis covered with grease and dust, with a spanner in his hand, and grinning with the pleasure of having conquered a difficulty. Just as likely as not he would not bother to remove from himself the traces of his honorable toil. Some called him morose, but he had a keen sense of humor, and when it bubbled up he got it off as soon as possible, and never let it interfere with the serious business of life.

"When calling on a man to do business, he would walk in with his hands deep in his pockets, regard the person with a direct and earnest look, put his questions, receive his answers, and walk out.

"In business he was cold, keen, alert, and I know of no one who understood better the basic fact that people can better themselves only by the production of labor properly and economically applied.

"I think it adds to the wonderful acumen and foresight displayed by President Wilson that he should have picked out from a hundred million people the man who is so eminently fitted successfully to carry out the great work with which he has been intrusted. His career is an exemplary one for boys to consider."

How He Slept at the Fort.

Ed Jackson, secretary of state, who is one of the students at the United States army officers' reserve training camp at Ft. Benjamin Harrison, had to spend one of the cool nights in the trenches, as that is a part of the training given to the embryo officers, notes the Indianapolis News. As he emerged from his "bunk" the next morning he was met by one of his fellow students.

"Well, how did you sleep last night?" inquired Jackson's friend.

"In sections," gruffly replied the state official.

"How's that?"

"Well, first my right foot was asleep and then my left one; then one arm and then another and so on. But I guess if I added them all up I got in a pretty good night's rest."

Song Writer Killed by Raiders

THE death of Mrs. Lena Guilbert Ford, the American woman who wrote "Keep the Home Fires Burning," one of the most popular marching songs of the British army, and her crippled son, Walter, was a pathetic incident of a recent German air raid on London. They died under the wreckage of their home.

An English maid, Annie Coxall, by a remarkable display of courage, saved the life of Mrs. Ford's mother, Mrs. Brown, 86 years of age, though the latter was quite seriously injured, and the King and Queen sought her out at the scene of the explosion and expressed their warm admiration for her heroic behaviour.

Mrs. Ford and her son were in bed at the time of the raid in adjoining rooms on the second floor of a four-storey house in a long block of substantial brick structure. A bomb appears to have hit the roof close to the partition wall dividing the Ford house from the adjoining building. It shattered the roof and upper floors which gradually collapsed, with part of the wall. The heavy beams and brick wall fell through the building, enveloping the chambers occupied by Mrs. Ford and her son. They were thus imprisoned for several minutes before the second floor collapsed under the weight of the wreckage, carrying them to the first floor, and then, after another pause, to the basement. They died probably from suffocation, and are the first Americans to lose their lives in an air raid on London.

The two upper floors of the house were occupied by another family, all of whom were killed. Mrs. Ford's mother, Mrs. Brown, occupied a room on the first floor, directly under Mrs. Ford's chamber, while beneath her, in a small basement bedroom was Mrs. Ford's maid, Annie Coxall.

The maid, who is a strong English country girl of twenty-two, amid the sound of splintering timbers and crashing brick work, ran up the narrow basement stairs, her first thought being for the safety of the aged Mrs. Brown, to whom she was deeply attached. She found the old lady half out of bed, bewildered, in the midst of a cloud of falling plaster, and dragged her through the collapsing walls down the stone stairs and into the basement bedroom.

It was evident that the whole weight of the walls and upper floors would soon crash into the cellar, and the maid, with nimble wit, half carried her charge and laid her on the floor close to the wall, pulling the narrow cot bed over her as a protection and placing upon this two heavy oak doors in a slanting position, which she hoped would deflect the falling debris.

Failing to reach the upper part of the house again in answer to the cries of Mrs. Ford and her son, which she heard again and again, she had barely time to crawl under the bed beside Mrs. Brown when the final collapse came. The little iron bed and the oak doors served their purpose. The aged woman and the maid were almost suffocated, but two hours later they were rescued by constables and members of the Red Cross.

Mrs. Brown suffered severely from shock; Annie Coxall was uninjured but badly dazed. She tried to re-enter the ruins in a frantic effort to find the Fords, but was finally persuaded to leave the scene and go back to a little flat a few blocks away, which she had rented a short time before in preparation for her marriage to a British soldier, of the Royal Engineers. Annie Coxall does not think she has done anything heroic. She bewails her inability to rescue Mrs. Ford and her son, and regrets the loss of her entire trousseau, which she had been preparing for nearly a year. Nobody could have been more surprised than she when King George and Queen Mary called upon her personally and told her how greatly they admired deeds such as she had performed.

Mrs. Ford and her son had lived in England for more than 20 years. The words of many of the most successful English popular songs in recessful English popular songs in recent years are from her pen. Shortly before her death she wrote what she called an Anglo-American song, "We Are Coming, Mother England," which has been adapted to the tune of "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp, the Boys Are Marching," and the son with fine voice sang this to his mother's accompaniment just before they retired on the night of the raid.

During the past three years Mrs. Ford had taken a large part in several war charities. Her home was the scene of weekly teas, receptions and musicales for wounded soldiers and officers from a nearby hospital. In the summer rarely an afternoon passed without a party of wounded soldiers finding entertainment on the ample lawns behind the house.

The son, who had been crippled by an accident in childhood, was engaged to be married in September to Miss Effie Clark, the daughter of a neighbor and a lifelong friend of the Fords.

The Same Species.

A pretty nurse who officiates in the linen closet of one of London's big military hospitals tells this enlivening tale. A few days ago fresh raiment was served out to a number of newly arrived Tommies who were in need of it. Suddenly one of the men said: "I say, nurse, what do they call cats that haven't any tails?" "Why, those are Manx cats," replied the unsuspecting nurse. "Well, then," said the Tommy, "you've given me a Manx shirt."

Revival of The Bicycle

e bicycle is not "coming back!" back.
is getting a new lease of life ver the world!
ycle manufacturers report in- ing orders and an unusually spread demand this spring.
alers are selling bicycles not to young men, but also to middle- and elderly men, and boys and as well.
ey are asking — everybody is g—what is the reason for this? would be hard to tell exactly, but ubtedly the two big factors in revival of an old pastime, es- lly in the cities, are the economy ansportation and its health-giv- impetus.
e average man can effect a sav- of at least $1 a week in street ares by riding a bicycle, and, as neral rule, it will get him to his nation quicker, because he can short cuts. It gives him new h, too, and makes him better inted with his city. In a car he too frequently breathes re air, and during the rush will be fortunate if he does ave to hang on to a strap. The le gets him direct to where he oing, wherever it may be, whe- on a main street, or a side , or up some alleyway or lane: n ride right to the door, whereas street car may take him only of the way. So in the matter ficiency the bicycle will beat he street car nine times in ten.
regards health, one has only to at the khaki-clad soldiers, as swing jauntily by, to see what exercise has on the average.
Notice the bright eye, the ant step, the clear complexion, ovial spirits, the bubbling over od health, and you may realize what exercise means to the n body.
wadays the scheme of things to spare men and women, boys girls, from all kinds of physical , to make life easy, as it were, which unquestionably has a de- ous effect on the constitution. A ears ago society women of Lon- and Paris, realizing that they going back physically because e luxuries, the motors and cabs, and undergrounds, of modern took up horseback exercise to eract the baneful influence.
rseback riding is far too expen- for the average person, how- ever, and so the bicycle is "coming back." It fits in exactly to a modern need. It provides exercise of just the sort needed and in the matter in which it can be of most benefit. The whole body is exercised, and the changing scenes, the pure air, the alert mind combine to make the exercise inspiring, pleasant, and attractive. Men and women are finding out that a certain amount of vigorous exercise every day is absolutely necessary to the maintenance of good health, and when business and economy can be combined with exercise, the result is most desirable. Hence it is that for these and other reasons bicycle-riding is being taken up by ever-increasing numbers and bids fair to become a craze.

Boys and girls aged from ten to eighteen who ride the bicycle systematically will find that they are laying up health and strength for themselves for life's later years. Hundreds of hard-worked business men of to-day built themselves up physically in the 'eighties when they were members of bicycle clubs and spent their holidays and Saturday afternoons in long rides out through the country. That is the sort of building up that sticks.

Making A Trolley Car Of Motor Truck

Why can't motor trucks and other commercial vehicles obtain their power from overhead trolley wires? So they can, if reports from Bradford, England, are true.

In Bradford a motor truck with a trolley pole attached to its cab takes power from overhead street car wires. The truck runs along on the street car tracks, contact with the rails being made by means of a cast-iron block to the steering gear.

This block also steers the vehicle. When the truck reaches the end of the street car tracks, the rail contractor is lifted, the trolley pole pulled down, and the storage battery is brought into action. Thus self-contained the truck continues on its way. The motors are of twenty horse power. The battery may be charged from street car current.

BRINGING THE STEERING WHEEL BACK TO POSITION AUTOMATICALLY

A Stabilizer has been patented by means of which the steering wheel of an automobile can be automatically brought back to its normal position after having been turned. The result is that the steering gear directs the vehicle in a straight line even though the wheel is not gripped.

High Explosive Caused Air Shelter Disaster During Raid on London

MOST of the casualties in a recent London raid were caused by a bomb which fell on an air-raid shelter. The bomb, evidently of a high explosive nature, reached the basement, which was crowded with women and children. Many of them were badly injured, and the screams of these, added to the cries of the terrified children, made a scene that lacked no touch of perfectly devilish horror. Fire only was needed to complete the catastrophe, and it came in a few minutes. Within five minutes the whole basement was a raging furnace, with the red flames roaring up to the skies through the shaft. Quickly the works fire brigade set at the double task of fighting the flames and rescuing those pinned down and imprisoned in the basement, and quickly they were reinforced by the arrival of the L.C.C. brigades, and the great majority of the refugees were enabled to escape. Meanwhile the flames had steadily gained hold of the main fabric of the building, and before they were got under control by the firemen practically all the roof and top floor were gone, while right along the lower floors the fire had wrought havoc.

Through the gaping shaft pierced by the bomb one could see the bare skeleton of the building, the fantastically twisted stee girders and charred beams of wood. About a hundred people, all men, were at work on the night shift when the warning was given, and these were promptly ordered to the basement, where they helped to shepherd the women and children who soon began to swarm in. One of the firm's employes, named Alfred Kibble, who had his left arm swathed in bandages, his hand having been seriously torn in the explosion, said: We had scarcely got the last of the people in when the bomb fell. All the people had been as calm and cheerful as you could wish up to then. The children particularly were fine. One of the boys had a mouth organ, and with this as the music they had an impromptu concert. They were singing "The Bull-Dog Breed" and "Way Down in Tennessee," and the kids started up that song they are always sing, "The Moon Shines To-night on Charlie Chaplin," and they were yelling it out until most of them tumbled off to sleep in their mothers' arms. Then came the explosion. There was a short, sharp hissing sound, which I suppose the bomb made in its descent, which even in the basement we could hear quite distinctly, and then came the crash, worse than anything I have ever heard. Our firemen were at work as quickly as possible, but in a few minutes the whole place was like a furnace. The bomb had fallen and exploded, yet not more than ten feet away I came across two little children standing absolutely untouched. They were crying with fright, and I got hold of them and managed to get them out. That was about the last I remember of it, for almost immediately I fainted—I suppose with the pain of my hand and arm, of which only then did I seem conscious. One great mass of concrete, weighing, I should think, about half a ton, had fallen down right on a little group of four women. Three of them were killed outright, I think, but the fourth was only pinned down and was screaming out to be released. Four of us tried to get her out, but we couldn't make the stonework budge an inch, although we tried to lever it up with all kinds of things. All the time the flames were getting fiercer and fiercer and coming nearer and nearer, and at length one great burst of flame and smoke drove us right away, setting light to our clothes, and we could not get near the woman again.

The Ruse.

"Carl Liebknecht, the German socialist," said a socialist at Cooper Union, "had, before the war begun, many wily ways of bamboozling the German government, but, of course, after the war started, a man of his liberal views couldn't possibly keep out of jail.

"I once heard Liebknecht make a fiery speech against the kaiser in Berlin. A police official, seated on the platform, rose in the middle of the speech, and whispered in the orator's ear. Liebknecht turned to the audience and said:

"'The police official on the platform commands me to retract the words I have just spoken. True words should never be retracted. Let us, however, make a concession. Let us retract the word, but keep the idea.'"

More Voters.

England's new Electoral Reform Act not only gives the ballot to wo men, but also to a large number o additional male voters. It is the most sweeping measure of enfranchisement in British history. The number of voters will be at least double, increasing from 8,000,000 to 16,000,000, and the latter figure is probably an underestimate.

The men voters will still be in a substantial majority for several reasons. The first is that the qualifying age for men is 21, or, if serving in the army or navy, 19, while no woman under 30 is admitted on any ground. In the second place there will still be plural voting, and although both men and women are restricted to not more than two votes each there will be far more men than women to qualify as twice-voters.

A woman may have two votes only if she is a university graduate, in which case she has a vote in her home district and also a vote for her university candidate. A man may have two votes under the same conditions, but he may also have two votes if he is a business property-owner in another district than his home.

As an illustration, take a family consisting of husband and wife and two sons, one, aged 19, in the army; the other 23, and a university graduate. The family lives in a London suburb, and the father is in business in London. He has a vote in his home district, and also one in the district where his business is located. The wife, not being a university graduate, has but one vote. The two sons will each have a vote as residents, and the elder will have an additional vote in the university constituency, and one or both may have a second or alternative vote on account of the occupation of business premises outside his residence district.

The wives of twice-voters will be potent factors of uncertainty on election day, for they are permitted to select which of their husband's constituencies they will vote in, and they need not announce this selection beforehand.

The old-fashioned British methods of electioneering are scarcely touched by the new law, except that the system is adopted of having all elections throughout the country on the same day. Proxy voting is allowed in the case of persons necessarily absent from their constituency on election day. It is noticeable that while a woman must be thirty to vote herself, a girl of 21 may be a proxy-voter for an absent male voter of nineteen.

As a check on bogus and freak candidates, every candidate must deposit $750, which is forfeited to the Government if he does not receive an eighth of the votes polled.

A Preparedness Course.

They were questioning the suburbanite home from the trenches. "And weren't you terrified that night among the barbed wire entanglements?"

"No," he replied. "I have come home late when the wife has left the croquet set out on the lawn."

INFLATE YOUR TIRES TO FULL PRESSURE, EVEN IN HOTTEST WEATHER

"Look out! Don't inflate that tire to full pressure on a hot day like this," is the costliest warning ever hurled at motorists. Instead of saving tires and money it has cost automobile owners millions of dollars. True, a tire does expand in hot weather, but so slightly as to be negligible in its effect. It never expands to the danger point. Furthermore, internal heat does not result from the temperature of the outside air, but from the constant bending of the tire as it travels along. Consequently when you run your tires under-inated in hot weather to combat air expansion, you cause increased bending of your tires, and thus create more heat—which is just the condition to avoid. The thing to guard against is under-inflation.

The under-inflation also makes a way for the load to flatten the tire and cause rim cuts, bruises and the like. It is true that tires should be kept from the heat as much as possible and the car should never be left standing for a great length of time where the excessive heat from the sun strikes it squarely.

SHEET METAL AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR A SMALL NUT

The loss of a small slotted nut on light machinery, such as that of a motor-cycle, automobile or motorboat means a stop until a duplicate may be had. Parts of this nature are not easily found, but a substitute may be formed of sheet metal or a piece of tin, which may be obtained from a tobacco or a fruit can. A piece of the metal is folded over back and forth five or six times, then the folds are punctured with a nail or punch. Each separate layer is worked over the thread as shown. When this substitute is turned up tight, it will not work loose like the ordinary nut.

EIGHT-CLUB LEAGUE, TORONTO IS IN IT

Reorganized International may Frame a 140-Game Schedule.

NEW YORK, April 13.—The club-owners of the reorganized new International League, in session here today devoted much of their time to a consideration of the playing schedule for the coming season.

When they adjourned for luncheon it was stated that in all probability a 140-game schedule would be adopted, although no definite decision on this question had been reached.

The circuit, it was stated, would consist of the original cities named at the time of the reorganization: Baltimore, Syracuse, Rochester, Jersey City, Buffalo, Newark, Toronto, and Binghampton. There may be one or more changes in the personnel of the stockholders however, in some of these cities. A delegation of business men from the Bronx will be received to-night to present an application for a franchise in the league. The meeting is expected to continue throughout Saturday.

It's the girl who can't sing that seems anxious that every one should know it.

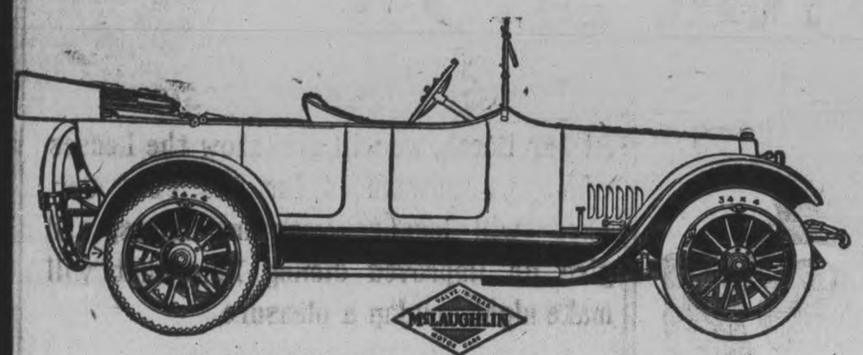
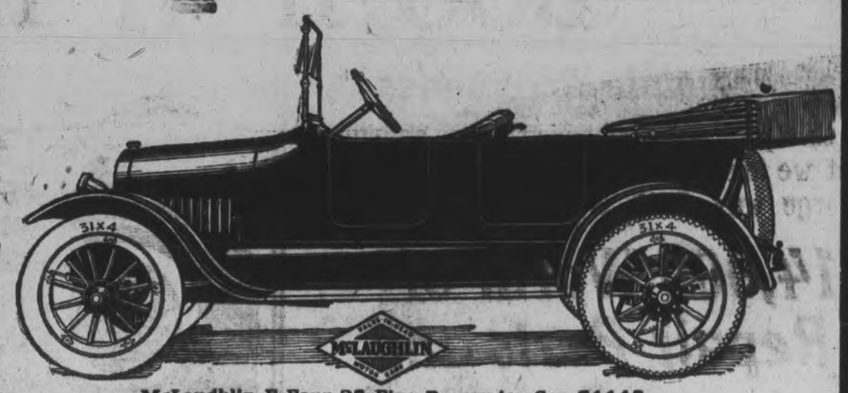
VALVE-IN-HEAD MOTOR CARS



McLaughlin E-Six-45 Special Five Passenger Car $1795

The McLaughlin "Valve-in-Head" Motor conserves and uses a larger percentage of the power contained in Gasoline than any other Motor.



McLaughlin E-Four-35 Five Passenger Car $1145

The McLaughlin Value-in-Head Five Passenger Touring Car possesses beautiful streamlines which sweep from the honeycomb radiator gracefully along the body sides, merging into pleasing contours at the rear. The Value-in-Head Motor differs from the other types of motors in both appearance and action. It is different in appearance because the valves through which gas enters and leaves the cylinders are in the tops or heads, of the cylinders, whereas in other types of motors these valves are placed in sockets at the side of the cylinder

Because of this different method of placing the valves in the McLaughlin cylinder, the McLaughlin motor, in action, has two great fundamental advantages over all other types of motors. This method of locating the valves makes the McLaughlin motor absolutely different from and superior to any other type of motor.

The New McLaughlin Valve-in-Head Four Cylinder Touring Model has rightly been called the Challenge in Canadian motor values. Designed and built to meet the requirements of the motorists who desire a car with Power and Sturdiness. It is equipped with the famous valve-in-head motor. While this car is moderate in price, it is really a big car and very similar in appearance to the other McLaughlin models. It has a style and finish that immediately puts it in a class with the automobiles one is proud to own. So sturdy and well built is this new McLaughlin "Four" that it will travel anywhere the wheel can find hold.

No car on the city boulevard or the country highway has such an enviable reputation for beauty, symmetry, grace and performance as the McLaughlin. In body appointments and refinements it meets the demands of the most fastidious.

BUREAU OF STANDARDS MAKES GLASS TESTS

"Non-Shatterability" Shown in Types Used For Goggles, Masks and Shields

Director S. W. Stratton of the Bureau of Standards Department of Commerce has filed a report of tests, recently completed of non-shatterable glasses such as are used by aviators and autoists in goggles, face masks and wind shields. The tests were made at the request of the National Adivsoory Committee for Aeronautics, and covered two types of protective glass—type A, in which one side of the glass is covered with a layer of celluloid and type B, in which a layer of celluloid is sandwiched or welded between two layers of glass, the object being to prevent the glass from splintering and injuring the eyes when broken.

Tests were first made by dropping a four-ounce steel ball on sample glasses from increasing heights, until the glas was broken, and then delivering additional bolws until the glass was broken and then delivering additional blows until the glass was powdered. The type A glass lost no spliniters from the protected surface, the report states, and the B type lost no spliners from the rear surface until the front surface as completely shattered and the steel ball struck the intervening layer of celluloid.

Another test was made by firing bullets into the glasses from a distance of twenty-five yards. Type A glasses received a ragged hole and were badly shattered, although the celluloid film continued to hold most of the pieces of glass together. Bullets passing through type B glasses made a clean cut hole and produced cracks in each of the discs separated by the celluloid, the cracks being confined to a circular area of about two inches. All the glass except a small area around the bullet hole was firmly held by the celluloid. Ordinary plate glass when struck by a bullet flew into pieces.

Director Stratton's report states as a conclusion that A type glasses protect the eye from splinters unless the celluloid coating is ruptured, but he says the samples he examined were not evenly coated and distorted the vision. He objects to the celluloid coating also because it is easily scratched and will not stand exposure to weather and sterilizing. Of type B glasses he concludes that when made with good glass they produce little distortion. The transparencies on samples actually measured, he says, were found to be "only fair." He found that from 80 to 86 per cent of the total incident light was transmitted. Of the use of celluloid as an interlayer, Director Stratton reports that while the glass on either side of the celluloid protects it from the weather and from scratching, the celluloid is apt to be discolored when the glasses are immersed in a sterilizing bath unless the edges of the glasses are permanently sealed.

The relatively increased non-shatterability of laminated glass (type B)," the report concludes, "and its comparatively good transparency and rigidity even after puncture, give it great importance in devices for protecting the eyes and face."

Submarine's Lifeboat.

For a long time attempts have been made to evolve some sensible scheme for permitting a crew to escape when a submarine sinks, gets ensnared in a net, or for some reason becomes unmanageable while under water. An invention that has lately been protected by patents is described in Popular Mechanics. It is a lifeboat and, in reality, a small auxiliary submarine that normally is held in a concave seat constructed in the top part of the large craft. Water-tight hatchways are provided in each of the vessels, so that access from one to the other of them is possible. It is intended to offer a safe retreat for some thirty persons. Electric and gasoline motors would propel it and give it a radius of action estimated at about 500 miles. In the event of accident, members of the crew would enter the lifeboat, close the hatchways, free the small craft by unscrewing two large bolts that anchor it to the larger one, and rise to the surface.

A Natural Mistake.

Answering the question: "What do you know about Marseilles?" an English schoolboy wrote, as reported in the London Morning Post: "It is the place where pianos stop." The instructor had informed the class that Marseilles was the stopping-place of the Peninsular & Oriental Steamship Line, commonly known as the "P. and O."

Irishmen at the Front.

The first American officer to be killed in France was Lieutenant Fitzsimmons of Kansas City, who lost his life when German airmen bombed hospitals in the rear of the British line where he was stationed as a medical officer in charge of wounded. The first American noncommissioned officer to lose his life in the overseas expedition was Sergt. Patrick Cassidy of Syracuse, N. Y. The first American private soldier to give up his life for his country in France was Private James Tracy of Philadelphia. The first American soldier to win the French war cross with palms, awarded for conspicuous gallantry, was Private John McClain of Peekskill, N. Y. All these young men, as their names indicate, were Americans of Irish descent which is a fair enough record, says the San Antonio Light, for the descendants of the Emerald Isle. All of them are said to have been native-born Americans, too.

Verdi Instead of Joseph.

Some years ago one of the members of the Trieste council was informed by a secret agent that, within a few hours' the city would be faced by a demand on the part of Austria for the erection of a statue of Emperor Francis Joseph in its principal square. A meeting of the city council was immediately called. It sat during the night hours, and passed a resolution affirming the intention of the city to put up a statue to Verdi on the very spot chosen by the hereditary enemy. On the following morning the demand of Austria was received, but the council replied that their decision was already taken, and that it could not be revoked. The people of Trieste see in the statue of the great Italian composer, observes a correspondent, a symbol of Irredentism, not only because of Verdi's nationality, but because the five letters of the name Verdi stand for "Viva el Re d' Italia."

STRUCK A WIRELESS MAST.

Aviator Jammed 400 Feet in Air—King Rewards Rescuers.

It is announced in the London Gazette that the King has awarded the Albert Medal in gold to Nicholas Rath, seaman, R.N.R., and the Albert Medal to Richard Knoulton, ordinary seaman, R.N., and George Faucett Pitts Abbott, deckhand, R.N.R. (trawler section), in recognition of their gallantry in saving life in the following circumstances:

On Sept. 14th, 1917, a seaplane collided with a Poulsen mast and remained wedged in it, the pilot (Acting Flight Commander E. A. de Ville) being rendered unconscious and thrown out of his seat on to one of the wings.

The three men above mentioned at once climbed up the mast for 100 feet, when Rath, making use of the boatswain's chair, which moves on the inside of the mast, was hoisted up by men at the foot of the mast to the place, over 300 feet from the ground, where the seaplane was fixed. He then climbed out on the plane, and held the pilot until the arrival of Knoulton and Abbott, who passed the masthead gantline out to him.

Having secured the pilot with the gantline, Rath, with the assistance of Knoulton and Abbott, lifted him from the plane to the inside of the mast and lowered him to the ground.

The three men were very well aware of the damaged and insecure condition of the mast, which was bent to an angle where the seaplane had become wedged. One of the three supports of the mast was fractured, and, so far as the men knew, the mast or seaplane might at any time have collapsed.

Americans Train in Italy.

Near a small town in Italy a handful of Americans are training for aviation service.

The Giornale d'Italia says they already have acquired a practical knowledge of piloting and that they have given proof of their perfect discipline and seriousness of purpose. Their instructors have expressed the greatest satisfaction with their work.

The inhabitants of the town came out in crowds on their arrival to welcome the allies who had crossed the ocean from the country to which so many Italians had emigrated. They displayed the greatest curiosity in watching the Americans in their leisure hours playing tennis and baseball, which are unknown in that part of Italy.

GOT RID OF BRONCHITIS.

Mr. W. H. Walker, Calmar, Alta., writes: "I am pleased to say that Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has done much good to myself, wife and children. My eldest girl, seven years old, had bronchitis and the doctor who attended her did not seem to do much good. We got Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine for her and she soon got well. We always keep this medicine in the house now ready for use and find that it soon cures coughs and colds."

NO GASOLINE SHORTAGE.

Country Has Ample Supply—Problem Lies in Transportation.

Mark L. Requa, director of the oil division of the United States Fuel Administration, made the encouraging statement last week that no shortage exists in the petroleum supply for the immediate needs of the country.

"There has been considerable discussion as to cutting off the supply of gasoline to passenger vehicles, following the precedent set in England," said Mr. Requa, "but the conditions are entirely dissimilar, for the reason that England produces no oil and has to rely entirely upon exports overseas. The United States not only produces the oil for its own consumption, but large surplus quantities for export.

"It has been demonstrated recently that it is impossible to take oil for any specific purpose without exerting a detrimental influence on some other branch of the industry. The problem of what is least essential is an extremely difficult one to determine, and I am somewhat of the opinion that the non-essential industry does not exist.

"It is quite obvious that the oil facilities of the United States must be used in such a way as to produce the maximum benefit, viewed from a national standpoint, to meet the existing crisis. The priority list was established for the reason that it is impossible, because of transportation shortage, to supply all consumers.

"Total stocks in the United States approximate 160,000,000 barrels, as of Jan. 1. Last year's production approximated 320,000,000 barrels, and there was a draft on stock of about 20,000,000 barrels."

Nicky Is Unsociable.

Imprisonment has affected greatly the mental capacities of the former Emperor Nicholas II., according to a letter from the former Empress Alexandra Alix, written from Tobolsk to one of her former maids of honor in Petrograd, which has been intercepted. In it the former Empress gives a detailed account of the royal family's life in Tobolsk.

The former Emperor, she writes, seems to have grown dull and very unsociable. He does not evince the slightest interest in current events, has ceased to think about the crown, and only wants to allowed to live in his own way. His only regret is that he cannot live in his old palace at Livadia, in the Crimea. Nicholas dresses in civilian clothes and spends much of his time with his son, Alexis. He corresponds only with his mother.

The Trimmings.

A peroxide-wigged manicure turned her "Anna Held" eyes on the patron before her and asked: "Shall I trim you close?"

He smiled back and said: "Well, you might leave me enough for carfare home."

WAR PROFITEERS.

British People Angered By Recent Revelations.

The exposure of enormous profits made by British munition firms has created a deep impression in England. The evidence indicates the grossest incompetency and inefficiency in awarding contracts and fixing prices. Canadian munition makers, in their most profitable contracts, never benefited by such generous assistance nor were rewarded by such enormous profits. The British press is unanimous in condemnation and demands more technical knowledge and strict accounting in future business. One firm's profit was five times its capital, and others almost as great.

Even after special war taxation, the firms earned twice the standard profit, in addition to retaining huge sums for depreciation. "The report of the Committee on National Expenditure is not pleasant reading. It is an appalling exposure of shameless profiteering on one hand, and of absurdly incompetent red tape wielders on the other. Between the two the nation has been fleeced for vast sums." This is the typical press comment.

Almost concurrent with the exposure of waste came another depressing admission, that the shipbuilding effort had failed to produce the expected results. On the rapid production of ships depends victory and the Empire's existence. Labor troubles, lack of discrimination in enlistment, and again the failure to place direction of the policy under practical men, combined to lower the standard of production.

Drastic steps are being taken to remedy this condition. A new shipbuilding board of practical men has been appointed and the army is being combed for efficient artisans.

Canada and the United States are expected to force a greater production. The one essential to victory is ships and more ships. These failures and the ever-present Irish problem, accentuated by the death of John Redmond, is the dark side of the picture. Irish conditions show little improvement, and John Dillon lacks the personality of his predecessor. It is feared he cannot hold in check his more aggressive followers with the success of the late leader.

Even with these discouraging conditions there is no weakening among the people nor the slightest pessimism for the ultimate result of the war. All are awaiting America's efforts and hoping it will not be long delayed. British people have accepted a real war basis conditions without protest, and are willing to submit to any deprivations that will make for victory. No objection to the drastic food regulations nor restrictions has been heard.

Peas, beans and lentils are the most nutritious of all vegetable substances.

Lubricating Spring Shackles and Hangers

Spring shackles or hangers are good examples of automobile parts that are obscured by other parts so that they are sometimes overlooked or forgotten when oiling time comes. These joints form the connecting links between the springs and the frame and they must support the weight of the frame, motor, body and passengers. The length of the spring varies with the degree of deflection, so that the spring shackles swing back and forth, developing friction at all joints. To prevent wear on these bearings it is necessary to provide an ample supply of lubricant. These joints are partly, if not wholly, covered by the front and rear fenders, and failure to care for them properly is often the cause of annoying squeaks and rattles.

A simple method of lubricating them employs the grease cup. A small hole is drilled in the bolt connecting the grease cup with the centre of the bearing surface. The grease is forced through this hole to the bearing surfaces when the cup top is screwed down. The cups should be filled with a good cup-grease and then turned down until the lubricant is forced out to the bearing. This should be done after every 500 miles, or, better still, on a certain set day each week. At least once a season the spring bolts should be removed and thoroughly cleaned. The hole through which the grease is fed should be cleaned out with a wire and flushed with gasoline.

HE CURED CHRONIC COLD WITH VINOL

Mr. Bagley's Letter Printed Here as Proof

Dunn, N. C.—"I suffered with a chronic cold for four months, coughed day and night. Had to keep on working when I was not able to. I saw Vinol advertised and tried it, and I want to tell you it just cured that cold in a short time."—J. C. Bagley, Dunn, N. C.

That's because Vinol is a constitutional cod liver and iron remedy which aids digestion, enriches the blood and creates strength. Then chronic coughs and colds naturally disappear. Your money will be returned if it does not help you.

Trucks Are Being Well Advertised

Wide Attention to Their Efficiency is Attracted by the Numerous Drive-Aways From Factories to the Seaboard

Developments in the motor truck field throughout America are coming so fast that they are almost beyond belief. One of the factors which has accomplished more for the motor truck industry than has any other feature of this development has been the drive-away. The delivery of motor trucks by the highways has reached a point where a truck train travelling through the country causes comparatively little comment. The real effect of this driving of trucks over the American roads in all directions is with the residents of the country, and more especially with the farming population. As a demonstration, the driving of trucks under load, and even without load, is unsurpassed as an advertisement for the industry, and this advertising is being assisted very materially by the ever-increasing number of army trucks bound to the seaboard from every manufacturing district. The farmers and the business men see these trucks under successful operation, travelling at good speed, and bound overland for constantly increasing distances, and decide in their own minds that the motor truck has finally arrived at a find point of reliability. They immediately become interested and become purchasers, for the motor truck is indispensable to the farmer and to the business man who is only beginning to find this out at the present time.

The United States Army has purchased to date approximately 20,000 motor trucks, and its requirements are going to be for from 10,000 to 15,000 in addition. All of these trucks are manufactured at points which will average perhaps 500 miles from the seaboard, and these trucks for war by thousands are going over the roads to shipping points along the Atlantic Coast. Railroad transportation is not being figured upon, and when the war has ended the delivery of trucks by road will have become an established custom. As an advertising feature this class of delivery is unexcelled. It should be continued for the general good which it does in demonstrating the reliability of trucks, and incidentally a correcting any evils in construction which will be certain to develop under hard drives, thus improving the product of the makers.

BRINGS THE FARMER NEARER THE CITY

Automotive Devices, Headed by the Passenger Car, Have Brought Him in Closer Touch With Big Centres

Automobiles, motor trucks, tractors and the gasoline-driven engine in its multiplicity of uses bring to the farmer of to-day comfort and leisure and really make farming worth while. The farmer of yesterday and the farmer of to-day are two different individuals in more ways than one. The automotive industries of America have been the making of the farmer. Their best markets are in the farming districts. But it is not only the passenger car that is a quick seller there. Motor trucks are now essential to the farmer. Ultimately it may be the airplane also, for farmers will take to anything automotive as a matter of course, and the airplane will provide them with even quicker means than the motor car to reach the city. Gasoline has certainly been a boon to the farmer. To-day and yesterday with our farmers represent startling changes. Now the mail comes to the door and the R. F. D. uses a motor car. The farmer will soon place his produce on his loading platforms and trucks will stop and take the products away to the market. The farmer and his family no longer dread the country, for they are able to enter their cars and reach the city twenty-five, fifty or even one hundred miles away in a comparatively short time, and to make distances never thought best with the use of horses and far too costly in time. The farmer could not to-day get along without his car. And he has time to keep up with the times, for by the use of motor transportation and through the use of the motor driven tractors he is making time constantly. Everything to-day is working out to the benefit of the man who tills the soil. And his life, as the passenger car was the leader, becomes pleasurable where formerly it was too often irksome.

A Solution Which Promises to Solve Some Tire Troubles.

A solution which is injected into the inner tube of an automobile tire through the stem is said to keep the tire at normal inflation and to make it practically puncture proof. The solution lies in a fluid state at the bottom of the tire, occupying only six per cent of inner space, except when the car is in motion, when centrifugal force carries it around the tire in a thin film, thereby sealing all porous places that cause slow leaks. The fifty or eighty-pound pressure forces the solution into every infinitesimal opening where air leaks out. As the filling dries the hole is sealed.

German New Guinea Now Held by the Australians And Will Not Be Returned

"DR EDWARD HABER has been appointed Governor of German New Guinea," reads a despatch from Europe which reached Australia late in December. And almost on the same day that it appeared, Thomas J. McMahon, a travelled and discerning Australian newspaper man and lecturer, fresh from a tour of German New Guinea, was telling an interviewer in Sydney: "I saw a great deal of the Germans. They are still there—very much there. Far from relaxing their efforts because of the Australian occupation, they are going vigorously ahead in the firm belief that German New Guinea will remain German territory. Some of them openly expressed to me the strong belief that after the war Australia, too, will be German territory."

Dr. Edward Haber was acting Governor of German New Guinea when the war broke out. It was he who surrendered the big and scattered colony to the Australian, Col. Holmes, upon conditions which will be touched upon presently. But first the point needs emphasis that while on parole in Sydney in November, 1914, awaiting return to Germany via the United States, Dr. Haber told a newspaper correspondent: "I do not think that German New Guinea will be given up. It will be given back to us after the war. We will keep it."

What was heard with some disbelief in Dr. Haber's common sense in 1914 is confirmed by the observations of Mr. McMahon in 1917; and if further confirmation were needed there is Berlin's nomination of Dr. Haber for the post he held prior to the war. Germans in Germany and Germans in New Guinea want German New Guinea. And their hankering is a German hankering which is unlike any other in the world. But they reckon without Australia. Australia already has a sizable dependency in Papua, or British New Guinea, and if German New Guinea were not German the commonwealth might well pause before the prospect of further responsibilities on the huge island. But what is to be done with a people who breathe assumption and talk post-war aggression? To quote so high and just an authority as Lord Bryce, writing in 1916:

"Australians and New Zealanders have long watched with anxiety the actions and plans of the German Government. They conceive, to use a colloquial parase, that 'its room is better than its company.' Among the governors who have served Germany I know at least one upright man, who wished to rule the island with justice and fairness all around. But neither in the Pacific nor elsewhere has the German power been found a pleasant or trustworthy neighbor."

To proceed with the interview with Mr. McMahon: "The Germans in New Guinea," he said, "fail to see that they are going to be defeated. They still hold all the interests the A. N. G. have done wonders and have proved unmistakably that German New Guinea is a place of such resource, of such prospective wealth, that should it come under Australian administration and protection after the war it will recoup the commonwealth for much of its borrowing for war purposes.

"Most Australians do not understand that the territory is still German country, governed by German laws, and is merely occupied by an Australian administration under the terms of occupation. My investigations led to the opinion that the Australian administration is highly successful. Thanks largely to the tact and firmness of Gen. Sir Samuel A. Pethebridge (the Australian administrator), the Germans are behaving themselves and are giving no trouble. That territory will unquestionably be a valuable asset to the commonwealth should it be passed over to it. All the main tropical products are engaging the attention of the Germans. Their plantations are becoming wonderfully fruitful and profitable, the revenue since the military occupation having largely increased."

Dr. Haber was once connected with the Deutsche Bank on the American Pacific Slope, and prior to going to German New Guinea he held a responsible official position in German East Africa. To have been identified with the Deutsche Bank and with the German colonial system in Africa may be recommendations in German eyes, but they may not by any means be such in the eyes of others. When the Australians took German New Guinea he tried by shuffling and delay to stave off surrender. His hope was that Admiral Count von Spee's squadron would save the colony. Col. Holmes, who was acting for Australia under limited powers which had been suggested by the British Government, at length pinned him down to terms of capitulation which were singularly liberal and which present the present anomalous state of affairs.

Only fear that the commonwealth would carry out its threat of retaliation and bar Germany from the Australian wool, metal and other trades brought about a settlement of the Ysabel case and a change of policy by Germany with respect to the Marshalls and the Carolines.

But the devil was not exorcised, for from 1905 until the war broke out not a ton of copra was carried from the Bismarcks to Australia for transshipment to Germany in an Australian bottom. Germany saw to it that the North German Lloyd had a monopoly of all the copra shipped from that and adjacent groups. Prohibitive duties and heavy subsidy did the trick, notwithstanding the treaty of 1886 provided for "most favored nation" treatment. It may be argued that "business is business" and that German had a right to do as she would with her own, but upon what ground can Germany's side of the Ysabel case or her circumvention of the treaty be justified? And why should German actions in German New Guinea constantly have led to the belief that there were cards up the German sleeve?

There is good reason for thinking that German New Guinea was a piece in the game of "Weltpolitik." German New Guinea had been German for about thirty years. In most of that time it cost the central government about $250,000 yearly. Just before the war it was costing twice that amount. But Germany never had, nor has she now, more than a handful of settlers in German New Guinea, and yet she pretty well filled Rabaul with officials. It is true that latterly the development of the colony was in certain directions characteristically wonderful and that its trade was stimulated to the extent of about $3,000,000 annually. Apparently the motive in her outlay was "beggar my neighbor," namely Australia, and keep the selfsame Australia [illegible]

Parched Corn Meal Biscuits.

Put a half a cup of yellow corn meal in the oven until it is a delicate brown. Heat one and one-half cups of water, one teaspoon of salt and one cup of peanut butter. While this is hot, stir in hot meal, and heat thoroughly. The dough should be of the right consistency to drop from a spoon. Bake in small cakes in an ungreased pan. This will make sixteen biscuits containing one-sixth ounce of protein.

GERMAN ADVANCE HAS BEEN DEFINITELY STOPPED

BRITISH CABINET IS DRAFTING IRISH HOME RULE BILL

THE BRITISH TROOPS HAVE CHECKED THE GERMAN DRIVE WEST OF ARMENTIERES

Present Enemy Effort Like the One in Picardy Seems Almost Definitely Stopped—Enemy Suffered Very Heavy Losses.

STILL HOLD HEIGHTS

NEW YORK, April 15.—The Associated Press in its war review dealing with to-day's official reports from the western front says:

Fighting heroically in hand to hand engagements, British troops have checked the German drive in the region west of Armentieres and this enemy effort, like the one in Picardy, seems almost definitely stopped. The Germans have spent thousands of lives in reckless and insistent attacks, to break through the British lines or to destroy the British army, but their effort has been without the result desired. About Neuve Eglise and before Bailleul, Field Marshal Haig's battered divisions have been putting up a desperate resistance to the Germans. Neuve Eglise has changed hands several times in the furious fighting and is now held by the Germans after fighting in which the enemy suffered grievously. It is an important strategic point, as it is one of the outposts of the Messines Ridge.

Attacks Repulsed.

Although they have been but little more than a mile from Bailleul, a valuable position, for two days, the Germans have not been able to advance more than several hundred yards. West of the town the Germans have been repulsed in heavy attacks, and south, around Merris, their efforts also have gone for naught.

On the remainder of the battle front in Artois, there has been no change. Near Apex, on their salient at Merville, the Germans attempted an attack but were driven back by artillery fire. In Flanders and along the Messines Ridge there have been no further actions and the British still hold the heights of the south unchallenged. There has been no activity on the Picardy battle front and on the remainder of the western front, except for artillery duels.

Sunday Fire Had Mysterious Origin

Two George Street Stores Threatened

The stores, 313 and 311 George street, occupied by T. L. Anderson and A. Kingdon, were seriously threatened by fire on Sunday afternoon, at 5.30. Fire from a mysterious origin, started in the rear of the west side of the building, which was unoccupied during Sunday, and ate its way into the main building. Ex-Mayor Bradburn, who was passing, rang in the alarm, and the Fire Department immediately arrived and arrested the progress of the blaze after using a 40 gallon chemical and 1200 feet of hose. The building is the property of Mr. E. G. Taylor, who was on hand during the blaze.

A THEORY AND THE DAMAGE.

The chief is puzzled over the cause of the fire, as there was no defective wiring. His only theory is that mice had carried matches into their nests, and then set fire to them.

The damage from smoke and water is considerable, though not as yet determined.

BOY HAD A NARROW ESCAPE.

Was Struck by a Car at Corner of Hunter and Aylmer Streets.

Jimmy Robinson, the little six-year-old son of Mrs. Robinson, who resides at the Palace Hotel, had a narrow escape on Saturday afternoon at 4.30 o'clock, when he ran into a car going south at the corner of Aylmer and Hunter streets.

The little lad, who escaped with a badly bruised arm, was taken to Dr. Greer's. Mrs. Robinson claims that the driver (whom she can identify) neglected to blow his horn, otherwise the child would have been warned of danger and escaped.

Popovers can be made of all-wheat or whole-wheat, or part rye or barley flour.

BRITISH CABINET NOW DRAFTING THE IRISH HOME RULE BILL

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, April 15.—A committee of the British Cabinet is now drafting an Irish Home Rule Bill, the Parliamentary correspondent of the Daily Telegraph says. An Irish parliament and executive will be established with full powers over internal legislation and administration and over direct taxation. Representation in the Imperial Parliament will be retained in form of a delegation of forty-two Irish members.

On Irish Senate of sixty-four members, he adds, will be constituted by alloting representation to different interests. The Irish House of Commons will consist of two hundred members, eighty guaranteed to be Unionists chosen in the south by nomination, and in Ulster by an additional direct election. The supreme authority of the Imperial Parliament will be recognized by reservation of powers relating to the Crown, to foreign relations, to army and navy, and to minor services and interests. Control of police and post office will be retained for the period of the war. Completion of land purchases will be expedited.

BATTLE HAS SLOWED DOWN ALMOST TO A DEAD STOP

Another Critical Period Has Been Put Behind the Allies Who Are Awaiting Further Onslaught Undismayed.

DEAD LITTER ROADS

(10 O'clock Despatch.)
(United Press Service.)
(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, April 15.—Despite the most desperate efforts to progress toward their first goal, the Germans are apparently stalled. Hazenbrouck, Bailleul, Aire, Lillers and Bethune are still in possession of the British. The German blows are growing more feeble, while the Allied resistance is strengthening

Has Slowed Down.

The battle has slowed down practically to a dead stop, similar to the Picardy drive after the first week. Though the first phase has seemingly ended the fighting continues, and undoubtedly will not cease for some time.

But another critical period has been put behind the Allies, who are awaiting further onslaught undismayed.

Germans Checked.

Part of Von Arnim's fourth army, and practically all of Von Quest's sixth army, comprising more than twenty divisions (240,000) have been bloodily checked. The British were the first to admit the seriousness of the German assaults, but scattered over a hundred square miles, battle field lines of German dead reveal the price paid. Dead men and horses and smashed transports littered the approaches to Bethune, St. Vaust, Morville, Bailleul and Neuve Englise. As proof of the prowess of British artillery, machine guns and low flying airplanes.

Bridges have been smashed almost as fast as German engineers could rebuild them. Paved and macadamized roads are so shell pitted, prisoners say, as to render difficulties in bringing up guns and ammunition almost impossible. The enemy troops are subsisting on (iron rations), kitchen carts having been unable to follow them for two days.

A Fierce Fight.

Von Stattin's divisions yesterday, after the stiffest struggle, won a few hundred yards' front in the region of Meteren. Von Ederhardt's storm troops broke down under the hot British fire west of Neuve Eglise. After a slight advance Von Kraewel's attempts to retake possession of positions north of Festubert failed with heavy losses. North of Robecq, the British recaptured a position on the Clarience river. The battle has thus been reduced to a patchy struggle. The sky is overcast and there is a high, biting wind.

South of the Nieppe Forest Von Carlowitz tried to shove considerable forces along the canal but was halted by machine gun fire and rifle fire. A captured order verified odd tactics of German officers who rode their horses into battle. German prisoners say the famous one-armed General Von Hofer, commanding an Erzatz Division, walked with the first wave, using his cane for a sword.

DRASTIC CHANGES FORESHADOWED IN MILITARY SERVICE ACT

Cabinet Has Been in Session Over Week-end—Signs of Dissatisfaction

MORE MEN WANTED

OTTAWA, April 15. —The Cabinet over the week end has been seriously considering ways and means whereby Canada can do something commensurate with the needs of the situation as revealed by the news from the battle line. What they have decided upon is being kept a secret and will be made known first to the House, probably this afternoon. It may be safely conjectured, however, that their decisions involve some drastic changes not only in the Military Service Act itself, but in its administration. One thing is certain. There is growing signs of dissatisfaction among new Union members, especially as to the results so far of the workings of the Act.

"I know exactly why my constituents elected me as a supporter of the Government," said one western man to-day. "They did so because that government was pledged to secure a hundred thousand men for overseas service. We've got to get them, and get them quick."

The debate on the Quebec riots was precipitated, not so much to discuss the riots in themselves as to discuss the general results obtained under the Military Service Act.

Jail For Those Who Light Fires In City

Chief Thompson announced this afternoon that citizens will be prosecuted for lighting fires within the city limits. Rubbish and grass must be disposed of in some other manner. The garbage colectors will take the most of it, and the incinerator needs combustibles. There have been far too many fire alarms recently. Most of the small fires grew from grass and rubbish burning. This notice should serve as sufficient warning. The practice must cease at once.

Positions Improved

This Morning's Operations Indicate That Defence of Entente Allied Troops Has Stiffened—Severe Fighting

BRITISH COUNTER ATTACKS

(3 p.m. Despatch.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, April 15.—The battle about Neuve Eglise near the Belgian border, which has been retaken by the Germans continued to rage this morning with the same intensity that has marked it for days, and the British are pounding the Germans hard, says a despatch received this afternoon at three o'clock.

Another assault on Bailleul, four miles west of Neuve Eglise, is expected momentarily. Latest reports this afternoon showed that the British line was going strongly held as a whole in the northern zone, and in some instances had been considerably improved by counter strokes.

Successfully Countered.

The British last evening followed up their success Saturday when they pushed the Germans back from Robecq on the Clarence River. Local counter attacks delivered on German positions three thousand yards to the east of this town were completely successful, and the enemy again was forced to fall back somewhat.

The British in the course of the afternoon also pushed out several posts north of the canal between the Lawe and the Clarency rivers. These operations indicate that the defense of the Entente Allied troops has stiffened.

Minister Resigns

Count Czernin, Austrian Foreign Minister, Has Been Counted Out — Stronger Control

A BID FOR PEACE

(Canadian Press.)

London, April 15.—Following revelations of his alleged peace proposals involving the United States, France and Austria, Count Czerin, the Austrian Foreign Minister, has resigned, and Emperor Charles has accepted his resignation.

Washington, April 15. — Count Czernin's resignation was regarded to-day as largely attributed to the failure of his peace effort, but more to the fact that the militarists (now in the saddle) want a stronger control.

PEACE TRICKERY.

The Austrian peace trickery and the blundering of her secret diplomats' peace moves, as expressed in recent days probably had much to do with his resignation.

Whether Czernin was sincere or not it was apparent that he was striving to get a peace for Austria before it was too late. Then suddenly apparently at German militarist dictation, he ignored President Wilson and began imposing burdensome conditions on Roumania His whole change of front indicated clearly he had heard from the militarists—his masters.

SENATOR STONE ILL.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—Senator Stone of Missouri who suffered a stroke of paralysis last Wednesday is in a serious condition, his physician said.

OPENING OF THE SPRING FAIR

Happiness, cheer and summer time are the predominating notes of the Spring Fair, which is at present in full swing at the Market Hall. The hall has been transformed from the four grim walls to the most fascinating fairyland ever seen. Dainty booths covered with yards upon yards of gay ribbon and paper flowers and vines have truly made a lovely spot.

The committee in charge are:
Hon. President—Mother Superior.
President—Mrs. A. Dunn.
Sec. to the Rev. Mother—Sister St. George.
Sec. of the rooms—Miss May Sullivan
Treasurer—Miss Merill.

The Booths.

The Japanese booth, under the convenorship of Miss Hurley is a delightful spot—trillis work covered by cherry blossoms, butterflies, Chinese lanterns are festooned with the loveliest hand work of boudoir caps, aprons, handkerchiefs and every dainty feminine accessory imaginable. Miss Hurley is assisted by Mrs. E. J. McCarthy Miss May Sullivan and Miss Margaret McGrath.

Canada, the booth in the charge of Miss Welch, is a bower of beauty. The Sodality girls have spared no time, ingenuity or trouble in decorating with autumn leaves, cedar boughs and birds, in making it a pleasure to behold. Here one can buy stationary, live chicks, birds houses and fancy goods of every description.

The fish pond, always lively with swarms of children, is in the charge of Miss Annie Simonds, Mrs. Lane, Miss Ada Maher, Miss May Clancy, Mrs. P. Simonds and Miss Margaret Brady.

The store and rummage sale contains, broadly speaking, everything heart could want. Mrs. Lynch and Daly are in charge.

The cigar booth takes one to Egypt, for the walls are hidden in Egyptian tapestries and plaques. Mrs. Ed Conroy Miss Josie Phelan, Mrs. Girard and Miss Mollie Lapiante are in charge.

At the candy table Mrs. (Dr.) McNulty, Miss Maud Theobald and Mrs. F. J. Hickey are kept busy, and well they might, for the both is the daintiest, most attractive resort heart could desire.

Mrs. M. Tooley, Mrs. Gallivan, Mrs. McGibbon and Mrs Rollie Hunter have a fancy work booth which is a joy to the feminine fancy. The loveliest specimens of embroidery done by the Sisters are to be had here.

The ecclesiastical booth, done in Papal colours and emblems, is most striking and attractive. Mrs. B. Law, Mrs. McCarthy and Miss Minnie Coughlin are in charge.

"France" is the country proclaimed indelibly by the gay and festive decorations of the lottery booth, and in charge of Mrs. F. M. McFadden, Mrs. D. J. Perry, Mrs. Fred Sullivan and Mrs. MacPherson.

Italy represents her mother country by quantities of dainty fancy work, mostly the work of Italians about the city. Here Miss Lynch, Miss O'Heron, Mrs. Gentille, Mrs. Gleason are in charge.

The neutral booth, in mauve and white decorations, where prizes are awarded is in charge of Mrs. M. Sharpe and Miss K. Sharpe.

Scotland predominates at the clothing booth, of which Mrs. T. McGrath, Miss Nora Devlin, Mrs. Turcotte, Mrs. McMurray are in charge.

Mrs. Ball, Mrs. Rutherford and Mrs. Primeau preside over a booth dear to the heart of every child—the dolls. Belgian colours obscure every unsightly nook and dolls of all nations are on sale. Miss McFadden and Miss Madelyn Rutherford are in charge of the lovely doll donated by Miss Fanny Carveth to be held as a lottery.

The Dining Room.

The dining room, where Ireland proclaims itself in every corner, is a credit to those in any way responsible. Mrs. Merrell and Mrs. Croft who are charge, are assisted here by a bevy of lovely girls, charming in 'coleen' costumes of green and white, who serve the most splendid meal in quick and gracious fashion. Mrs. McFadden, Mrs. J. F. Crowley and Mrs. John Coughlin are in charge.

The Post Offices.

Watch the papers for your name, boys, for letters may be waiting for you in the England booth or in the Canadian post office at Canada.

The Peanut Cart.

To-night, besides countless attractions in the way of soloists, gypsies, Miss V. Carveth and Miss O'Brien will sell peanuts.

The following letters are at the Canada booth at the spring fair: Mr. Lou Potvin, Mr. A. J. Kelley, Mr. M. Tooley and Mr. V. Sullivan.

GERMANS BOMBARD AMERICAN TRENCHES WITH HIGH EXPLOSIVES

Americans Hacked Their Way Through Superior Force of Germans—Enemy Compelled to Retire

PRISONERS TAKEN

(By Fred S. Ferguson.)
(United Press Service).

WITH AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, April 15. — American troops on the right bank of the Meuse (between St. Mihiel and Verdun), were attacked by picked detachments from four companies of Germans following a violent bombardment with high explosives and gas shells which lasted from midnight Saturday until early Sunday morning.

The enemy swarmed into the trenches close behind their barrage just as the Americans rushed from their shelter wielding bayonets and hurling grenades.

Compelled to Retire.

The Germans were compelled to retire leaving thirty-four dead and ten wounded on the American wires. Thirty more dead Germans were counted in "No Man's Land."

A party of twenty-five Americans surrounded by a superior enemy force outside the trenches, fought their way through the Germans and returned to the American lines with prisoners. An unknown number of enemy dead and wounded were dragged back to the German trenches.

Wonderful Speed Pictures Of Wild Geese

Mr. Fred Roy Secures a Remarkable Collection Which Will Be Shown at Motor Show

Mr. Fred L. Roy has returned from Kingsville, Ont., where he was successful in taking a wonderful collection of speed photographs of the wild geese on the farm of Mr. Jack Miner, the famous naturalist. Mr. Miner, who recently lectured in Peterborough, has been studying the habits of the wild goose for a number of years. On his farm there is a pond of about half an acre, which is visited by thousands of geese each year during the migratory troops from north to south or vice versa. When Mr. Roy visited the place there were between 700 and 800 geese feeding in the pond so tame that they could be closely approached without taking alarm.

The photographs which Mr. Roy secured will form part of the Roy Studio exhibit at the motor show in the armouries and should be seen by everybody.

Enemy Made Seven Distinct Drives Against British Front—Line Restored by Counter Attack.

BRITISH OFFICIAL REPORT

LONDON, April 15.—(Official.) — The War Office announces this morning that seven distinct smashes by German divisions against Merville sectors have been repulsed with very heavy loss to the enemy.

The British have lost Neuve Eglise, Southwest of Bailleul, the Germans temporarily penetrated British positions, but were driven out by counter attacks.

The statement follows:

Severe fighting continued all day yesterday around Neuve Eglise. After beating off numerous attacks, our troops were in the end compelled to withdraw a second time from the village. Strong attacks were made by the enemy yesterday afternoon at a number of other points on the battle front. Northwest of Merville, fierce fighting took place as a result of which attacking German infantry was driven back with great loss. Hostile infantry along the northern bank of the Lys were caught by the fire of our artillery and were unable to develop their attack. In the course of the day no less than seven attacks were delivered by the enemy in the Merville sector, all of which were repulsed with heavy loss to his troops. In one case the enemy advanced to the assault in five waves. Under the weight of this attack our line was bent back slightly, but was completely restored by a counter attack.

FOOD DEMONSTRATION

For the Food Demonstration, in connection with the Motor Show, the committee have been fortunate enough to secure Mrs. N. D. Seaton, Graduate of Macdonald College, Guelph. These demonstrations should prove not only interesting but extremely profitable, as they are being conducted in accordance with the Food Controller's regulations, and will show how to use the different substitutes for wheat, flour, butter, sugar and meat.

The following demonstrations have been arranged for—

Tuesday afternoon, 3.30 o'clock:
Buckwheat muffins.
Oatmeal date cookies.
Gingerbread.
Wednesday Evening, 7.30 o'clock:
Rye bread.
Rolled oats bread.
Thursday afternoon, 3.30 o'clock.
Fish, baked, boned and jellied.
Recipes for the above dishes may be purchased at the booth.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

MONDAY, APRIL 15TH, 1918.

BE INDEPENDENT.

In these days of threatening famine when in some countries even the possession of great wealth is not a guarantee against the danger of starvation we people in Canada should be grateful for the opportunity that we have before us. It is not possible for all to have great wealth, but in this country it is possible for all to be independent to a great extent as far as food supplies are concerned. Many people discovered this fact last summer. Their gardening operations enabled them to materially reduce the cost of living, and they will start out this spring more enthusiastically than ever, convinced of the practicability of the plan and its economic success.

Wealth does not alone mean money. Just now an abundance of food stuffs is more valuable than currency. The possibilities offered along this line by Canada are so great that is a pity indeed that a larger organized effort is not made. If people would realize this fact and realize too that by taking part in such an effort they might be saving the life of some one overseas, the gardening operations of last year would seem small in comparison to this year's accomplishment.

Every man, woman and child in Peterborough capable of the work should make up his or her mind to get into the production game. Get a vacant lot and give it earnest attention. You will find that you can grow enough vegetables to keep you from one season to another. At the "taking in" time next autumn see that you have produced enough to take care of your family during the winter.

THOUGHTLESS MOTORISTS.

People who drive motor cars are probably not any more thoughtless than any other class of citizens, so the heading of this article may be an unwarranted reflection. However, it is occasioned by the happenings of a few minutes during the open air service of the local Salvation Army and their visitors from Toronto yesterday afternoon. The Salvationists held their meeting on Hunter street, near the corner of George street, and naturally with their number augmented by the Dovercourt Songsters, they occupied a considerable portion of the street. During the short service probably a hundred motor cars buzzed past, their horns interrupting the service, and their wheels dashing dirt over the clothing of those taking part in the meeting.

Legally, of course, the motorists perhaps had the right of way, but the point is that the occupants of nine out of every ten cars which passed were only out enjoying the fresh air and sunshine. They had no particular need to go clattering past, interrupting the service, and even if they wished to go over the Hunter street bridge they could have gone around the block.

These motorists acted as they did, not through any lack of courtesy, but merely from thoughtlessness — just as many car owners glide past a badly wounded soldier, hobbling along, without thinking of inviting him for a ride.

If this article causes an improvement in this respect, it will have served its purpose.

The citizen who put his clock back an hour, instead of forward sixty minutes, declined to make a statement when asked for his opinion of the daylight savings measure.

1915, AND NOW.

A week from to-day is the third anniversary of the Battle of Ypres—the testing time of the Canadian forces, when Canada's first contingent won immortal fame for themselves and for the Dominion by blocking the Huns' fierce drive for the Channel ports. The anniversary is to be observed in Peterboro by the Great War Veterans, and in two ways: a church parade on Sunday next, and on Saturday a tag day to raise money for the Veteran' Relief Fund.

In connection with the latter it may be said that the Veterans in commemorating the famous battle in this way are showing the same spirit of self sacrifice that led them to leave everything they held most dear to go overseas to fight for Canada. For the funds to be raised on Saturday are not for themselves, not to furnish club rooms, not to provide amusement or recreation. They are to be used only for the relief of cases of distress among the Veterans and their families, and among the dependents of Peterboro soldiers overseas, and of those who have made the supreme sacrifice. There are many occasions when such help is needed; sometimes through errors of omission or commission on the part of officials, pension cheques are wrong, separation allowances go astray, or the income is interfered with in some similar way, and temporary assistance is required.

This is the purpose of the Veterans' Relief Fund. It is always at the disposal of cases of distress not covered by the usual agencies, and from the Association the soldiers' dependents can always depend upon receiving ready assistance when the circumstances so warrant it.

At this time, when the Canadian forces, defiantly holding the positions they snatched from the Huns last year, are awaiting to meet the onslaught of Hindenburg's hordes, the people at home should welcome the opportunity of assisting the comrades of these men who have already returned. Among the men who will take part in the tag day campaign on Saturday will be a large number who three years ago formed part of that living barrier that filled the gaps north of Ypres; there will be others, too, who a year ago fell wounded as the Canadians dashed up the slopes at Vimy Ridge, and captured that stronghold which now stands as a bulwark against the German flood.

These things should not be forgotten on Saturday when you will have a chance of showing your appreciation by helping the Veterans' relief work.

THE NEED OF THE HOUR.

The present crisis in the war, indicated by Lloyd George's appeal for men and his statement that Germany means to seek a military decision this year, and driven home by Field Marshal Haig's message to his battling troops, makes it apparent that the Military Service Act will have to be amended, or its administration speeded up, if Canada is to do her part. Great Britain is making undreamed of sacrifices—men past the prime of life, and mere boys, are being drawn into the army. No man of military fitness under twenty-five years of age, is to be left in England. Civil strife is being risked to get men in Ireland.

In Canada it is estimated that there are 400,000 unmarried men of military age left. Not all are physically fit of course, but a large percentage are, and the Military Service Act has failed to get them into the army. And they are wanted now. Next autumn may be too late. The war may be lost in the next few months Canada's assistance must come now. It is said that under the new system of training recruits can be fitted for service in France in fourteen weeks after they reach England. That means that the men called out now would not get into action under about the middle of August, at least; so that it is evident that there is no time to be lost.

The Union Government was selected to enforce the Military Service Act. Certainly its administration of that measure has not been a glittering success. This is not the time for recriminations, however, but for action. Votes for women, titles, and other things important in themselves but having no connection with the present crisis, should be put aside for the moment.

The Ottawa Journal sounds a timely warning, when it says:

"It is time to quit deluding ourselves with fatuous theories, and look the facts squarely in the face. The stern reality of the situation is that we are not winning the war, and, what is far more grave we may definitely lose it within the next eight months. We are told that this is not a time for panic, but for courage, and faith, and we agree; but faith without works, is perilous in war, and what is wanted, above everything else in the country to-day is that the people be roused into realization of the peril that is threatening them—roused so that with all possible speed we may be able to throw our last ounce of strength into the struggle."

BASEBALL AND WAR.

The seriousness of the war situation is beginning to cast its shadow over our neighbours to the south, to an extent that will be appreciated when it is known that even the baseball world has begun to realize that a crisis has arrived. In the United States, of course, baseball is something more than a pastime or recreation; it is an industry, large in size and influence. Millions of dollars are involved in the carrying on of the different major and minor leagues throughout the country, and the popular interest in the game surpasses that shown in any other amusement feature.

During the past few months there has been a growing feeling among United States citizens that baseball hasn't done its part in the war. Well-known baseball men like Captain Huston of New York, who is now on active service in France, have been outspoken in their criticism of he diamond experts who have shown little eagerness to exchange the flannel of the ball uniform for the khaki of Uncle Sam. A number of ball players were, of course, caught in the draft, but the total of the players, especially of the big leagues who enlisted, was miserably small—in marked contrast to conditions in Canada where the sporting world made a remarkable record in enlistment, whole battalions of football, hockey, lacrosse and rugby players having answered the country's call.

That baseball men are awakening to the duty of the hour, is indicated, however, by a striking editorial in the St. Louis Sporting News, the greatest baseball journal in the world. The following is an extract:

"There is only one party who is going to be beaten in the end in this the Hun. If he makes it harder to beat him by a temporary success now, then harder it will be—but it will be done. And the harder it becomes the more Uncle Sam will be called upon for his part.

"A German success in the present drive will mean a demand for war service in America that can delay on no draft call, and the man who is capable of doing his bit, and does not respond, whatever his draft number, will be in the category of those Canadian slackers in the early days of the war, when an able-bodied man on the streets was decorated with a white feather if he was found in anything but a uniform. With the Hun knocking at the gates, people in this country will have no time for baseball, or anything else, except the business of war. Therefore it is not the new draft call that interests most at the present time, but the situation around Amiens, or wherever they are fighting."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

"Let the women speak for themselves," is Mr. Burnham's adive. Well, don't they?

We can't save too much daylight with weather like this

The change in the time provided a novel excuse for the man who didn't want to go to church yesterday.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

HOME RULE ALL ROUND.

(Buffalo Express)

Now someone has started an agitation for home rule for Wales. England will be making a similar demand on the British government one of these days.

THE WORM WILL TURN.

(Ohio State Journal)

Some day the patient German people are going to get to wondering whether it's worth while to lose so much man power and keep so much Crown Prince power.

DIETARY DUTIES.

(Toronto Star)

The three meals a day man who continues to eat what he always did, and who, when at table, wants what he wants when he wants it, ought to figure up how much the country would save if he, and a million like him, would feed upon home-made, home-grown foods from now until the war ends.

SMALL, INDEED.

(Kingston Whig)

We each have our worries and our individual responsibilities, but how small and insignificant they are compared with the heavy load that rests upon the shoulders of Premier Lloyd-George.

THE KEYLOG IN THE JAM.

(London Advertiser)

Bourasse has been, and continues to be, the keylog in the Quebec jam. He stopped the flow of men toward the colours early in the war, and the jam he caused has become larger and capable of greater resistance. But the lumber boss in charge of the drive set his lumber jacks picking at the outside logs with their pike-poles and peevies. They bruised the skin of the logs, but they did not release the jam. The boss seemed afraid to tackle the keylog for fear the jam might fall over upon him.

MORE FUN IN JAIL.

(Rochester Post Express)

Fears for the morals of our boys abroad will be quieted by the lament of a Kansas lad to the home folks that he could have more fun in the county jail than he is having in France.

FOCH'S STRATEGY.

(Buffalo Courier)

General Foch will not hit the German attacking force where it expects to receive the thrust, and certainly not where the enemy's forces are best prepared to oppose it. That is fundamental strategy. Also he will choose for his blow the time when he figures the Germans have extended their active strength to the utmost and have drawn most heavily on their supplies of ammunition and materials for offence; that is, at the time when it will be most difficult to put additional effectiveness into their resistance. This, too, is basic military tactics. General Foch is a master both of strategy and tactics. He will not strike until he is ready—and he will strike where the attack will be the most difficult for the Germans to oppose.

Another Holy War.

(Mercyville, Ia., Banner.)

The Ladies' Aid society, first in everything, began the extermination of rats in the church and parsonage last Wednesday. Traps, poison, hot water and good mousers were used, and if the raid isn't effective, all theories are overturned.

Time To Put In the Peg.

(Detroit News.)

Recently knighthoods have been growing at such a rate that apparently Canada is afraid some day a duke of Ontario, and earl of Saskatchewan, or a baron of Rainy River will be thrust upon her. Apparently she has no fancy for having her American-Indian geographical nomenclature placed in humourous juxtaposition to heavyweight titles. She might in the process evolve a Viscount Medicine Hat or a Duke of Moose Jaw. Her "sirs" probably seem quite funny enough to the young giantess of the north.

His Liberty Restricted.

(Windsor Record.)

We're all law-abiding folks around here but withdrawal of our liberties makes us sort of touchy. We can't get a drink, we can't have a Sunday paper and we can't cross the river to Detroit without showing a marriage certificate, even though we have a perfectly good passport. Don't monkey with us much more. We're getting rather hot under the collar.

Wait for the Third Act.

(Chicago Evening Post.)

"The first act is ended," says Von Hindenburg. The gentleman is in error. It is the second act that is ended. In the first act, if we have not forgotten our melodrama, the diabolical plot is conceived, the villain makes his plans and vanishes, with every prospect, from the hero's standpoint, seemingly full of promise. plans into execution; the curtain falls upon the hero about to perish beneath an onrushing train, or to be blown to pieces by a bomb. Vice is triumphant and the villain gleeful. It is this act that we have just witnessed, with Von Hindenburg rubbing his hands and chuckling as he looks upon the success of his work. But the third act is the act where the villain "gets his." And the third act is to come. Wait for it.

NO MORE FURLOUGHS.

Only Men Unsuitable for Service Will Be Returned.

MONTREAL, April 15.—A copyrighted cable to the Gazette states that the Overseas Minister of Militia has issued an order that in future there will be returned to Canada only those men unsuitable for any form of army service. The departments and camps are being combed to secure men for various duties if not in the active army to release those who can be made fit for active service.

The training of the recent drafts is being rushed, and the draftees are making an excellent showing. It is expected that some will be fit for service in France by July. The last month's training will be with reserves in France. It is believed there are sufficient reinforcements in France to keep the divisions up to their normal strength until the drafts are trained.

Those granted leave on compassionate grounds in the future will be returned to Canada at the public expense. They will not be granted furlough, but will be struck off the overseas strength and placed at the disposal of the home authorities to discharge, return with drafts, or employ at home. Last month of 500 applications for such leave only 25 per cent. were granted.

LIVING IN CITIES

Residents Are Not as Neighborly as in Country.

Life in Metropolitan Municipalities Is a Battle for Existence, With No Time for Sociability.

"Who, then, is my neighbor?" the man "in the city pent" asks himself, as he regards a row of similar house fronts and reflects on the fact that he has only a nodding acquaintance at best with the majority of the inmates.

Interdependence is fostered by the conditions of living in the country. Ordinarily we do not need the help of the next house, near or far. But let fire come, or a destructive storm, or a predatory visitor, or a serious illness, and the neighbor may be as welcome as angels, says a writer in Philadelphia Ledger.

City life is often a battle of the strong, because there are crowds and there are many mouths to feed and many shuffling feet to be shod. If we let ourselves think of it, the vast multitude of identities striving to establish themselves is almost terrifying. Where did so many people come from? Where are they all going? How are they to find a lodging for the night? Each of the moving swarm is the center of a circle of friends. The humblest, unless deeply unfortunate, has ties that bind him to earth and make life—in a degree—dear to him.

Out of the pagan wilderness to the urban lights and roarings comes bucolic youth. What will the city do to that unsophistication? Or in what way will its rugged, innocent power in time come to prevail upon the city?

Your shrewdest, hardest captain of business closes his eyes at his desk and is taken back to murmurous water brooks and bees, to the aroma of hay, of kine, of burning leaves, to the sound of the whetted scythe or the sight of baked apples in the window of the woodshed.

Why can't they brown flapjacks or bake beans or concoct apple sauce or cook oatmeal as they did down on the farm?

The table was always big enough for the unexpected guest. An egg or a quart of milk was no such great event as it is in a city. There used to be time, too, to settle the affairs of the borough and the nation, to discuss Horace Greeley and to wind the clock, between supper and early bedtime.

We have filtration, and the vacuum cleaner, and the servant question, and all the other city advantages. But it was something to know the neighbors, and somehow or other "the men that were boys when I was a boy" mean something in a lifetime that the brisk, ambitious, clean-shaven, up-pushing generation does not convey. It would do these take-it-or-leave-it fellows good to study the large, leisurely, tranquilizing ways of their forebears in the days when "civilization" was not on a tear from the cheap lunch to the bargain counter, and home was not a way-station betwixt the joyride and the moving pictures.

Dispersing a Crowd.

"I have just come back from forty-eight hours' duty in Paris," writes an officer in a Highland regiment. "My servant and I, both in the kilt, were buying some stuff outside a shop, as one does in Paris, when a crowd of about twenty people gathered round, and simply stared—some amused, some open-mouthed, and some doubtless in admiration. I was amused at first, but it got a bit too much of a good thing, and my servant, who is a wag, said: 'Shall I hand round the hat, sir?'

So, not thinking he would, I said: 'Yes, do,' and—if he didn't whip off his Balmoral and take it round perfectly seriously, with a childlike expression on his face. They cleared off all right, some grinning, and others looking very sheepish. But we got nothing."

Prepare to Care for Themselves.

Nowhere have the French shown their remarkable national vitality more striking than in the way they have kept up the pursuits of peace while bearing the brunt of the most exacting war in history. So far from having their industries broken by conflict they have developed scores of new ones, writes a correspondent. An exhibit now being held in Paris is given over entirely to products manufactured in France, which were formerly imported. The first division consists of articles formerly brought from foreign nations, largely from Germany, while the second is made up of articles formerly made in the northern French districts now occupied by the invader, which are now being manufactured in southern France.

Interesting Experiment.

Experiments just completed by two French scientists have reopened the controversy whether rudimentary manifestations of life can be produced in inorganic matter. These men took a glass tube containing a solution of colloidal silica, sealed it by melting the glass and subjected tube and contents to a high temperature, long enough to sterilize them thoroughly, according to all current ideas of sterilization. The tube was then kept moderately warm for two months, and when opened the contents were full of living bacteria. Objectors contend that the colloidal silica probably operates to protect bacteria originally in the solution from the effects of the heat sterilization.

Patience enables a man to walk but it is usually a long walk.

AIRPLANE ROUTE TO SWEDEN

Trelleborg and Sassnitz to Be the Termini of the Proposed Line Connecting With Germany.

The following bulletin on Trelleborg and Sassnitz, the termini of the proposed Swedish-German airplane route, which assumes special significance in the light of recent developments in the diplomatic relations between Germany and Sweden, has been issued by National Geographic society.

Between Trelleborg, the most southerly town in the Kingdom of Sweden, and Sassnitz, a summer resort on the northeastern shore of the German island of Rugen, express steamers in times of peace make regular trips across this arm of the Baltic in four hours. This is the chief water link in the 24-hour express service between Stockholm and Berlin. Neither town would be of any importance were it not for the fact that they are the termini of this steamer service.

Trelleborg is a quaint old town of some 10,000 inhabitants, lying 20 miles southeast of Malmo, capital of Skane, teh most populous province in all Sweden. It is only 16 miles from Malmo to the Danish capital, Copenhagen.

Sassnitz is one of several popular seaside resorts on the Island of Rugen, the largest insular possession of Germany, having an area about equal to that of Cape Cod. Only about 2,500 people make Sassnitz their permanent home, but during the bathing season in times of peace the village is visited annually by more than 20,000 pleasure seekers.

The water trip from Trelleborg to Sassnitz is 60 miles. Thus the rail-and-steamer distance between Stockholm and Berlin is 415 miles.

SALMON THRIVE IN ATLANTIC

Humpbacked Variety From Pacific Coast Retain Their Habits When Placed in Eastern Waters.

Many thousands of humpback salmon, native to the Puget sound, where they were collected by the government two years ago, entered Pembroke, Dennys, Penobscot, St. Croix and other rivers in eastern Maine as part of the fisheries bureau plan of stocking the east with the pride of the Pacific coast catch.

The bureau's investigation shows that the humpback in its new environment retains its Pacific coast habit of proceeding to the ocean shortly after it begins to swim and returning to the rivers to spawn and die when two years old.

The government has made annual shipments of eggs of the humpback salmon across the continent for the last five years, drawing the consignments alternately from Washington and Alaska.

Joke Books for Soldiers.

Making joke books for soldiers is the latest form of patriotic industry on the part of those who stay at home.

It is said that the plan originated with Rudyard Kipling.

A blank book, preferably with large pages, is first obtained. Upon the pages are pasted the funniest pictures and anecdotes found in current newspapers and magazines. Some bright, short stories are also included.

The books are then sent to army hospitals, where they afford great entertainment to convalescent soldiers. Day after day the books are in steady use until they are worn out.

Surgeons say nothing is so essential in the hospital as to keep the patients in good spirits. Toward this end the joke books are a valuable help.

To Sell Eggs by Telephone.

Telephone operators need a sense of humor to make the petty annoyances of their occupation bearable. If they have that, they can find endless matter for amusement in the freakishness of the human nature that exhibits itself at the other end of the wire.

A telephone subscriber asked his operator to ring his bell in three minutes, and immediately hung up his receiver. At the appointed time the supervisor rang on the line, and the subscriber responded merely with "Thank you." Later he called again to thank the operator, and explained that he had been boiling eggs and wanted to time them. They had been cooked to the queen's taste, he said.

The Cow Wen.

An official of the board of health in a Massachusetts town notified a citizen that his license to keep a cow on his premises had expired. In reply to this letter the official received the following communication:

"Monsieur Bord of Helt—I just get your notis that my licens to keep my cow has expire. I wish to inform you, M'sieur Bord of Helt, that my cow she beat you to it—she expire t'ree week ago. Much oblige. Yours with respek.

Ticket-Vending Semaphore.

At Kansas City an electric interurban railway has tried out, with gratifying results, a coin-operated semaphore intended for way stations where cars do not stop unless signaled. To operate the signal, one places a nickel in the slot and presses a lever. This actuates the semaphore arm, ignites a red lamp, and issues a five-cent ticket to the prospective passenger.

The Idle Rich.

"Sherman was right in his famous remark about war."

"Goodness me, I should say he was. Just look at my tie. It's at least two inches shorter this year than last, all because of this horrid war."

A man's idea of sympathy is to look sad and pat a girl's hand.

Kneading boards and such things should be kept in a cupboard or some place entirely free from dust.

BIRDS HELP SAVE TREES.

Will Demolish Tussock Moth Which Are Destroying Growth.

Don't kill the native birds. They are valuable allies to us in our warfare against the Tussock moth. Last summer these insects ate up everything in sight that looked green, more or less. Everyone became familiar with that white frothy, woolly substance which is seen on the trees and shrubs. Each one of these white masses contains from 150 to 500 eggs, enough to destroy all the leaves of any small tree.

It is quite easy to remove these cocoons by the use of a hook fastened to a pole, the cost of which is only thirty cents. Another way to eliminate the pest is to scrape off the rough bark and apply tree tangle foot. This can be bought in strips of about three to four inches wide, and if placed around the tree will prevent the larvae from climbing up. Sticky flypaper will answer the purpose if tree tangle foot cannot be procured.

Encourage the Birds.

The birds will do a great deal to help keep down the pest, and everyone should realize the value of encouraging them to stay. Boys should learn the usefulness of these songsters and catapults, air-guns, or other small fire arms should not be used to kill the birds. Cats, too, are accountable on an average for fifty birds in a season. Let the birds live and they will help you destroy the pesky tussock moth whe army this year promises to whose army this year promises to must be won by the joint military forces of the allied nations."

The former President advocated that the United States, as soon as possible put into the western battle front an army of from 5,000,000 to 7,000,000 men. This probably would take two years or more, he said.

"When we get our army of 5,000,000 men abroad," he declared, "the victory is won. We'll occupy the centre of that terrible battle front, and we'll bear the brunt of the struggle, as we should after our allies have been fighting our battles for the last three years."

Kingston, April 15. — Leonard W. Ripton, who was interned for a year in Fort Henry, suspected of being a German spy, has been killed in action. His father, John C. Ripton, of Johnston, N.Y., received word that he met death on April 7th. Ripton enlisted with the American artillery at Watertown last year. In 1915, he joined the 8th C.M.R. at Kingston, but became suspected and was interned. He was eventually released, as it was proved that he was an American citizen, and on the 1st of October he returned to Watertown, declaring that some day he would prove that he was not pro-German.

DAYLIGHT SAVING SCHEME WHICH BEGAN YESTERDAY

European Countries Have Already Gained Much Through Economy Due To Turning Forward Hands of Clock---How It Affects Peterborough

It was as a war measure that Joshua commanded the sun to stand still. When the great national leader of the Israelites wanted a longer period for the smiting of the Amorites at Gibeon, he cried out: "Sun, stand thou still upon Gibeon; and thou, moon, in the valley of Ajalon." There were no clocks in those days. If there had been, it is conceivable that Joshua might have put the clock forward an hour or two in order to save that much daylight for the battle.

When Germany, in 1916, adopted the plan of daylight saving by turning the clock forward, it was done as a war measure, mainly to allow more munitions to be manufactured in the daylight hours. The example of Germany, where the measure was a success, was soon followed in England, France, Italy, Holland, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Belgium, Austria, Portugal, Iceland, Australia and parts of Canada.

Then, after two years of propaganda, our own government passed the measure, which went into effect at 2 o'clock Sunday morning, and will continue in force until two o'clock on the morning of Thursday, 31st day of October.

The routine of life will not be affeted by the change whih put the clock one hour forward.

AN EXTRA HOUR.

Those who spend the afternoon in the country or in the city parks will find an additional hour of enjoyment in daylight. When the hands of the clock begin to point toward the dinner hour, sport lovers and strollers will be torn between the desire to keep on enjoying the extra hour of daylight and being on time at the evening meal, the chances favoring a tardy appearance at the table.

IN ENGLAND.

In England a special committee appointed by Parliament to investigate the results of the daylight law, after it had been in operation a year, reported that an average reduction of 20 per cent. for lighting purposes was given by the power companies. Thirty one private companies estimated a reduction of 18.3 per cent. The percentage of reduction in individual companies ranged from 1 to 55. In the consumption of gas in Great Britain the average saving reported to the committee was 9 per cent. Edinburgh reported a saving of 8 per cent., or $30,000. Nottingham placed its saving at 10 to 15 per cent., and Belfast at 5.25 per cent. The total saving in the use of artificial light and fuel in England was estimated at $2,500,000 a year. The annual consumption of petroleum in Great Britain was reduced by 11,500 tons.

BOON TO WORKERS.

The extra hour has been a boon to the workers in all the countries that have tried the plan. In England the extra daylight was largely used in the cultivation of gardens and contributed to the increase of the food supply. Million of workers, women, particularly, were benefitted by the long light evenings. The poilce reported that the tendency throughout the country to spend the extra hours of daylight out of doors made for an improvement in the general moral tone of the people. In particular, there was noted a decrease in juvenile crimes.

SAVING OF COAL.

The adoption of the plan in France in 1916 resulted in the saving of about 442,500 tons of coal in the six months, costing about $8,000,000.

The saving of coal in the form of gas was estimated as more than two pounds to the person, or one ton for each 1,000 persons each month. A survey is now being made as to the saving in 1917. The shipping authorities reported that the plan increased the loading capacity of the docks at Calais by 250 tons a day, because the longshoremen consented to work overtime for the extra hour. At Marseilles the extra freight handled between July and September mounted to nearly 13,000 tons.

GAS ONSUMPTION.

The municipal gas works at Berlin reported a decrease during May and June, 1916, of 508,000 cubic meters in pite of the fact that 18,000 new meters were installed in the first six months of 1916, and the records from January to April showed an increase of 2,400,000 cubic meters output of gas, as compared with 1915.

Albert Halstead, U.S. Consul General in Vienna, reported that in the Austrian capital alone the daylight saving plan for five months in 1916, caused the people to consume 158,000,000 feet of gas less than usual, saving $142,000. The city also required 14,000,000 cubic feet of gas less for street lighting.

AN OLD IDEA.

Though the daylight saving plan has been regarded as a modern idea, it is known that Benjamin Franklin gave it considerable thought and wrote an article on the subject in French. This was published in the Journal de Paris on April 26, 1784, and can be found in English under the title, "An Economical Project," in his collection of essays. It was written in a semi-humorous vein, and Franklin purposely exaggerated in his whimsical way the effected, but the plan appealed to him seriously. After recalling that one day he went to bed at 4 o'clock in the morning, and that when something suddenly awakened him at 6 o'clock, he was surprised to find his sum total of savings that would be room filled with sunlight, the writer continues:

"This event has given rise in my mind to several seriou and important reflections. I considered that if I had not been awakened as early in the morning, I should have slept six hours longer by the light of the sun, and in exchange have lived six hours the following night by candle light; my love of economy induced me to muster up what little arithmetic I was master of and to make some calculaions."

THE LATE RISERS.

Estimating that there were then 100,000 families in Paris, each consuming half a pound of candles an hour, and taking into consideration that very late risers wasted in the summer season seven hours of sunlight a day, and substituting seven hours of candlelight after sundown, he calculated in the six months from April to September, with wax or tallow at 30 sous a pound, a total saving of about $19,000,000 might be affected.

Of course his estimate was exaggerated purposely, for there are few people who habitually slept seven hours of daylight. However he imagined some interesting means by which the law might be put into operation. He proposed that a tax of a franc be levied on every window found closed when the sun was shining, that no family should be supplied with more than one pound of candles a week; that no coaches, except those of physicians, surgeons, or midwives should be allowed on the streets after sundown; that every morning at sunrise all the church bells should ring, "and if that is not sufficient, let cannon be fired in every street to wake the sluggards effectively, and make them open their eyes to see their true interests." It was Franklin's thought that all the difficulty would be in the first few days, and that after that the new plan would be as natural and easy as the previous way. He added:

GO WILLINGLY.

"Oblige a man to rise at four in the morning and it is more than probable he will go willingly to bed at eight in the evening, and, having had eight housr of sleep, he will rise willingly at four the following morning."

The originator of the project in England was the late William Willett, an architect. During thirty-three years he rode in the early morning to business in London through practically empty streets, and the reflection was borne in on him that the best part of the summer day was being wasted.

THE ADVANTAGES.

Among the advantages in favour of the idea to this continent (for, be it understood, the scheme has already been in operation in the United States for several weeks) was that it would offer opportunity to 20,000,000 workers engaged in trade, transportation and other pursuits outside the field of agriculture, to spend an extra hour of daylight in working on the land after the end of their regular working day. It is believed that work in gardens in the additional hour will mean considerably more food for this country and for the allies.

A COOL MORNING.

Besides, in the summer a cool hour in the morning will be substituted for a warm one in the afternoon; there will be less danger from accidents, because artificial light will not be needed at the end of the day; there will be better use of recreational facilities; eye strain will be lessened because of less use of artificial light; there will be an increase in the health of workers and their families; the rush hour of city travel will come in the daylight, and there will be a great reduction in the expenditure for light and coal.

ONE ADVANTAGE.

One advantage of the plan is that it brings the United States and Canada into conformity with the European nations. Last summer there was a difference of six hours between this country and Europe, instead of the usual five hours. This put the Stock Exchanges of New York out of touch with the European Exchanges for the entire business day, whereas formerly this country and Europe had one hour in common when business could be transacted on both Exchanges.

When the bill was before the House of Commons a member objected to it on the ground that under the new law in some cases the younger son would be made the older. He said:

A UNIQUE CASE.

"Take the case of parents who have twins. The clock is to be put back one hour on the 31st of October at 2 o'clock in the morning. At 1.55 that night the eldest twin is born, and he is registered as having been born on Oct. 31st at 1.55 a.m. The second twin is born ten minutes later, and therefore he should be entered as having been born at 2.05 on the same date, and is therefore properly registered as the younger son. But between the two births you put the clock back an hour, with the result that the eldest son is born at 1.55, and the youngest at 1.05, nearly an hour earlier."

The members of the House decided that the case was one that would have to be especially provided for if it should ever arise.

"Nothing Else Like It" He Says

Had Rheumatism So Bad He Was Nearly Helpless—Tanlac Overcomes It

"One morning, while coming in on a Weston car, sitting by another railroad man, I happened to say something about my rheumatism and he said, "Frank, you try Tanlac; I had rheumatism pretty bad myself, and Tanlac fixed me up all O.K." "Oh, well, I haven't much faith in those kind of medicines," I replied, But he persisted, saying, "You try Tanlac, anyway; whether you believe it or not, it beats anything you ever tried." So I took him at his word, got me some Tanlac, and found it just like he said."

The above statement was made recently by Frank W. Buck, who lives at 5 Gray avenue, Mount Dennis, near Toronto, and is employed as a car man by the Grand Trunk Railroad. Mr. Buck is also an active member of the Brotherhood of Railway Car Men of America, and is popular with all who know him.

"During the past five years," Mr. Buck continued, "I simply suffered torture. I don't reckon anybody ever had a much worse case of rheumatism than I did, and sometimes I was so crippled up that I could not work at all. My arms and legs, and joints and muscles would get so stiff and painful that I could hardly bear to move. I couldn't cross my legs without lifting one over the other, and my arms were in almost as bad a fix. My right arm was almost useless to me, and at night I couldn't sleep for that nagging, unmerciful pain which never let up. I had taken all kinds of medicines and used bottle after bottle of liniments, but none of them ever helped me one bit.

"Well, sir, the results of Tanlac has completely surprised me. Before I finished my last bottle I could feel the rheumatism letting up. Since I finished my sixth bottle I have been out in all sorts of weather, wading in snow and sleet up to my knees, crawling under the cars—and have exposed myself more than ever before, but I haven't felt a sign of the rheumatism to this good day. Tanlac seems to have cleaned it out of my system entirely, and I certainly do think that there is no medicine like it. I prize it above everything else. My wife and son are now taking Tanlac and I have recommended it to all the boys in the yards who I have heard complaining about rheumatism."

Tanlac is sold in Peterboro by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock, by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield, by the Tanner Drug Co., Ltd., in Fowlers' Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert, by A. J. Scott, in Westwood, by G. Pringle and Son.

Memories Of 2nd Battalion's First Days In France Are Awakened By Late Despatches

To the average civilian the official communique, "The Germans are now fighting in the outskirts of Estairets," means but little especially after having given up in despair the geographic layout of the country over which the belligerents have been locked in deadly combat since August, 1914. To the khaki clad onlooker wearing the blue or red shoulder strap, (indicating the 1st Canadian Division infantryman or artilleryman), however, the despatch causes no little surprise, for was it not in Estaires that he had been billetted in an estaminet that was rich in souvenirs of the first and only tour of the despised Hun through that territory in September, 1914?

There has been demonstrated by Madame a lance left by a Uhlan through necessity, as was also a helmet peculiar in design to that branch of German cavalry. The onlookers watched carefully the gesticulations of the narrator of the visit of the Germans without understanding a word, but a careful scrutiny of the village told them that the occupation had been but brief as no buildings appeared to have been destroyed.

This brief despatch visualized that same Estaires battered, smoking and razed to the ground, perhaps his friend Madame was even then lying dead amongst the smoking debris of her home together with her cherished souvenirs.

The "Original" turns from the bulletin and walks off down the street, recollections surging rapidly through his mind of that three weeks in March and April, 1915, when his Battalion was in rest at Neuf Berquin; of the route marches through Merville, Estaires and along the canal. Perhaps he will remember a canal barge being hauled along the canal in Merville by an old woman, while her better half sat upon the barge smoking and meditating upon the welfare of his mule which was at that moment doing service in the army.

Perhaps if that Original be a Second Battalion Canadian he will remember the Easter Sunday morning service held in an orchard just off the road leading to Vieux Berquin next to the billet occupied by the machine gunners. That impressive and beautiful service presided over by the 2nd Battalion chaplain, Major Beatty, and Major Gordon from Kingston, and of how in the midst of the service a Taube flew over, but apparently, respecting the sanctity of the occasion did not attempt to bomb.

The recollection of this particular area will remain for many years as a pleasant memory to all those of the First Division, first because it was while they were in this area that they experienced, for the first time in France, spring and warm weather, realizing that for some at least the trenches would be more habitable than they had been for the first two or three tours at Bois Grenier and Fleurbaix, and secondly because it was the first real relaxation since leaving Saillysur-la-Lys and one could turn in at night feeling that no "stand to" orders would be issued during the night to interrupt peaceful slumbers.

This peaceful countryside has at last fallen under the unmerciful hammer of modern warfare, and to-day, its small but none the less fertile patches of farm lands are being churned and ploughed by shells and bombs and the soil fertilized with the blood of Anglo-Saxons and Teutons. Few of the Second Canadians realized, that bright summer-like morning of April as they left Neuf Berquin on their first march up into the Ypres salient that it would only be a matter of time until the country through which they were marching would be the scene of such heavy present day fighting. They marched along through Vieux Berquin, then Strazeele, where they had debarked from the train upon their arrival in France some two months previous then on through Steenwerck, Caestre, Steenvoorde on to Winnezeele, for a short rest prior to taking over a section of the salient that afterwards turned out to be so costly but yet so effective.

SINN FEINERS TO CONFER WITH THE NATIONALISTS

DUBLIN, April 12.—Upon invitation of the Lord Mayor, Arthur Griffith, founder of the Sinn Fein organization, and Prof. Edward De Valera, one of the leaders of that organization, have consented to meet John Dillon, chairman of the Nationalist party, and Joseph Devlin, Irish Nationalist member of Parliament for Belfast, for a conference on the conscription question. The meeting will take place next week.

Route For The Automobile Procession

The automobile procession which will be held on Tuesday, April 16th, will start at 7.50 p.m. The cars will line up along Simcoe street, down Water street to the Market Place, and to te corner of Charlotte and George streets. The course of the procession will be from the corner of Charlotte and George streets west on Charlotte to Park, north on Park to Hunter, east on Hunter to George, north on George to Antrim, east on Antrim to Water, north on Water to Smith, west on Smith to George, south on George to London, west on London to Aylmer, and south on Aylmer to McDonnel street. Here the procession will divide. The first part will proceed east on McDonnel to George, south on George to Murray, east on Murray to the Armouries. The second half will proceed south from McDonnel and Aylmer to Murray, east on Murray to George, where the cars will remain on the south side of Murray street, opposite the Armouries, for the formal opening of the Motor Show.

If you can decorate your car, and if not, come along and make this the largest and grandest parade ever seen in Peterboro, remembering that your efforts are all for Red Cross Work.

All cars should be lined up on Water street or Simcoe street not later than 7.50 that evening.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASS ENTERTAINED

The boys of Mrs. Payne's class of St. James' Sunday School were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Stevenson, Braidwood Avenue, on Friday evening. The evening was spent in games and amusements, after which refreshments were served. On the motion of Cecil Everson, seconded, by Norman Gross, a vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson, which was accompanied by a hearty hand-clap. As the boys were getting ready for departure to their respective homes they all joined in singing "For He is a Jolly Good Fellow".

Fashion's Newest Dress Fabrics are "Costume Silks"

Silks to the fore! So says Dame Fashion, and we must follow her lead. Never before have we assembled such wonderful fabrics in texture and shade. Color can lend distinction, so can quality and design. If these are wrong nothing can make your dress right; they are not wrong in our materials. There is such a wonderful variety in this season's silks, in texture, designs and colors, and the prices are just as varied. We are sure you will be delighted with the elegant array of soft, rich looking silks we are now ready to show you.

Silk Foulards

And they are so correct, don't you just love them? Why! they are the prettiest materials for "Milady's" dresses that have been shown for a long while. To look at them brings thoughts of spring time in "ye olden days" and right away you will want a foulard dress too. One very pretty line is in a Japanese pattern in navy and white the design is in figures and spots. This is an excellent quality silk, 36 inches wide and the price is $2.50

Radium silk crepe foulard is another beautiful material and it will give splendid wearing satisfaction. The colors are in sand, brown and black. It is 39 inches wide and is priced at, yard $3.75

Paillette Tussor Silks

A distinctly charming material that will prove its practibility by its exceptionally good wearing qualities. The designs in this silk are the very newest, gingham plaids and stripes, they are lovely. It is 36 inches wide and is sold at, a yard..... ..... $3.00 and $3.50

Radium silk crepe is a very popular dress fabric and the shadings are most attractive, sand, grey, black, navy and Copenhagen. It is full 39 inches wide and the price is, yard $3.50

Silk faille for suitings and skirts is a smart, stylish material. It is a heavy corded weave and will be very serviceable. The colors are nigger brown, navy, gray and black. A 36-inch wide silk that is priced at..... $3.75

The New May Delineator is now on sale 15c a copy. For One Year's Subscription the price is reduced from $1.25 to 95c. Only a few more days to procure it at this price, 95c for one year. Butterick Patterns are reliable, easy to follow and the styles are the very latest. Come to our Pattern counter for dress suggestions.

Two Deserters And Pair Of Drunks From C.P.R. Midnight Train Arrested On Saturday

Albert Poirier and S. Lavergne, French-Canadian privates in a Toronto Depot Battalion, decided on Saturday night that the east bound troop train was altogether too unhealthy an excursion for them. They broke away at Leaside and the train continued on its way to the coast without this rather husky pair.

Their disappearance was telegraphed to Peterborough and Sergeant Kidd and P. C. McIntosh picked them off the midnight train. They had tickets for Smith's Falls but were minus the necessary passes to cover their absence from the battalion. On the way to the station they admitted that they had deserted, and this morning they smiled as Magistrate Dumble ordered them to be turned over to the Military Authorities. In all probability they will catch the troopship.

Got Two Drunks.

While the police were escorting the deserters to the police station, two drunks staggered up George street ahead of them. They had got off the midnight train, and started unsteadily uptown, cutting a widdy and wobbly path over the sidewalk and pavement. Sergeant Kidd was quite content to lag behind the procession until it reached Charlotte street. From that point, however, there was quick action. The deserters were hustled to the police station; a detour by Simcoe street brought the police abreast of the brace of drunks, who were practically carried to the station.

One of them, Wm. Ridley, was fined $200 and $9.75 costs in police court this morning for having liquor in a place other than his private dwelling. A big bottle of Mitchell's Irish that would have filled two or thre little brown jugs was found bulging one of Ridley's pockets when he was searched. He stated that he had come down from Toronto to work on a farm in Otonabee, and had brought the bottle from his home. He and his companion had filled up with whiskey before they left, and had nothing to drink on the way down.

Ridley argued that he was going from one home to another, and that he thought he could move his whiskey.

Magistrate Dumble corrected his erroneous idea of the law, and added that he had no option but to impose the minimum penalty of $200, or three months in jail.

"Two hundred bucks," repeated Ridley in an awesome tone, and unconsciously fingered through his vest pockets as the vaudeville comedians do.

His companion was taxed $13.75 for having been drunk, and the latter's brother, who lives here, was called in to render financial first aid.

SIR SAM HUGHES GAVE EVIDENCE

Haliburton Man in Difficulty Over Russelite Literature—Was Acquitted

Lindsay, April 15.—At a session of the police court on Saturday, G.T.R. agent Johnston, of Haliburton, was acquitted of the charge of wrongdoing, in connection with the delivery of certain Pastor Russell literature to a Russelite residing in Haliburton (Sidney Thomas). Police Magistrate Bradford presided. County Crown Attorney Stinson represented the Crown and Colonel Glass, the Customs Department.

consignment of Pastor Russell litera-

It apepars that in February last a ture, comprising fifty Scripture studies, and fifteen books and sermons (including the "Finished Mystery") came through the customs to Haliburton. The G.T.R. agent at Haliburton gave them out to Thomas believing that the customs regulations had been complied with. He did not know the nature of the literature at the time but was informed a week later that certain publications in the parcel were banned.

He immediately took steps to have the literature returned, but Thomas refused.

Sidney Thomas, in his evidence, told of having received the literature, and also informed the court of the names of the different publications. He testified that Agent Johnston had tried to prevail upon him to return the literature, but he had refused to do so. Thomas also stated that he had delivered nearly all the literature to parties around Haliburton.

At this juncture County Crown Attorney Stinson asked Thomas for the names of the parties receiving the literature but the witness refused to give them, giving no satisfactory reason for his refusal.

The County Crown Attorney then informed the Court that an order would be issued for Thomas' committal on the charge of contempt of court.

The witness was placed in the county jail for a week before answering the charge. A warrant will also be issued for his arrest for refusing to answer the call for military service.

Sir Sam Hughes and Reeve Currie, of Haliburton, both gave evidence on behalf of Agent Johnston. He is a man of splendid character and is held in highest esteem in the North Country.—Lindsay Post.

Music & Drama

POLLYANNA.

It was unfortunate that the audiences at the Grand Opera House on Saturday were not as large as usual in view of the excellence of the presentation of the stage version of "Pollyanna." Those who stayed away missed one of the most enjoyable performances of the season. The "glad girl" as presented by Miss Patricia Collinge captured every heart. The delightful young actress has succeeded in effectively catching the spirit of the part and her instructions as to how to play the "glad game" were splendidly presented. The supporting company was thoroughly adequate. That sterling actor Oswald Yorke gave a capital impersonation of John Pendleton, and Joseph Jefferson did equally brilliant work as Dr. Chilton. A delightful feature was the role of Jimmy Bean, which required two members of the cast. Master Stephen Davis was the twelve-year-old Jimmy, doing stellar work in the part, while Glen Hunter was most successfully cast as Jimmy at the age of seventeen.

The book has been carefully followed in the stage version, and acted as it was by Saturday's splendid company "Pollyanna" is even more enjoyable before the foot lights than between the covers of a book.

Memorial Service In Mark Street Methodist Church

Impressive Service Was Conducted by Rev. Mr. Whattam

An impressive military memorial service was conducted last night at Mark Street Methodist Church, in memory of Privates Edwin William Wicker, Ray Nelson and Fred Holden all of whom have during the past few months made the supreme sacrifice, and whose names have been placed upon the honour roll at the Church.

THE SPEAKERS.

Lt.-Col. Walker, in his address, spoke of the heroic deeds in life as exemplified by our soldiers, and the worth of their lives to the Empire and the world, their Christ-like ideals and the influence these will have in the history of the world. Lt.-Col. Johnson spoke from personal knowledge of the men, their homes and their courage and bravery on the battlefield. He related some interesting incidents of the courage of these men on the field of battle.

The service was closed by the Pastor, Rev. Mr. Whattam, who instanced the testimony of Dr. Hillis from personal experience among the men in the army that out of every five of the French soldiers four have found God and immortality during the past three years. He spoke particularly of the soldier, Jean, who, asked his experience at the front, replied: "I sleep in the mud, I battle in blood, but my soul is in the stars."

THE MUSIC.

The music of the service was of a particularly meritorious character, the choir sang "There's Music in the Air" and "Thy Kingdom Come." Mrs. Iradale's solo, "Land of Light and Glory," rendered most pleasingly, was greatly appreciated.

SPECIAL PRAYERS.

Special prayers were asked by the Pastor for the Empire, the soldiers, and those who survive and suffer at home and at the front.

Chief Grange In A Collision

Fire Chief's Car Struck a Vehicle at Corner of George and Dublin Streets.

When answering a call to Box 50 at 11.40 on Saturday morning, the Chief's car was following a block behind the chemical car when, at the corner of George and Dublin street, a vehicle, ambling along, turned west to go up Dublin. The Chief's car approached from behind, and to avoid a collision turned to the left. His car skidded into the vehicle with a glancing blow, tearing off the right front wheel and one shaft of the waggon. The Chief proceeded uninjured on his way to the fire.

Will Re-examine Men Rated Too Highly

ANYONE FAILING TO APPEAR FOR MEDICAL EXAMINATION IS A DEFAULTER.

TORONTO, April 11.—That not only are men whom it is thought are rated too low sent up for a re-examination but also men who are thought to be rated too highly, was the interesting statement C. Lesslie Wilson, the Registrar under the Military Service Act made yesterday. Men are not being sent up for re-examination by classes, but doctors who go over the questionnaires select men here and there. Army medical officers pass on the medical history sheets in relation to the questionnaires and the men sent up for re-examination go before a review medical board. It is likely that more of these boards will be appointed for the Province shortly. Any man who is ordered for his first or re-examination by the Registrar and fails to obey the injunction is a defaulter and liable both to a civil and military penalty. He is considered to be absent without leave just as soon as he disregards the order.

"B" MEN DELINQUENT.

Class "B" men are not sending in their questionnaires as readily as did the "A" men, according to official statements from the Registrar.

LIGHTED CIGARETTE SET FIRE TO GRASS

Barns and Outbuildings Had a Narrow Escape.

The danger of carelessness in throwing away lighted cigarettes was exemplified on Saturday afternoon when, a farmer following a carriage passing Mervin's slaughter house, saw the driver throw away a lighted cigarette, which immediately caught the dry grass and spread to the fence, threatening the barns about. Only prompt action on the part of the farmer saved the sheds. The incident was reported to-day to Chief Grange to issue a warning.

Did It Ever Occur to You?

That the FORD is the only car now selling for less money than before the war?

Have you considered that perhaps RIGHT NOW you can buy a Ford car for less money than you will be able to for some years to come?

If you contemplate buying a car THIS YEAR, you would be well advised to do so without delay.

Even if you do not want a Car until next year, it might pay you to buy RIGHT NOW.

The prohibition of Foreign cars to Canada will undoubtedly cause an unprecedented shortage and increase in price.

In addition, there is daily expected an Excise Tax of 10 p. c, on all unsold cars.

Buy your Ford car or Truck RIGHT NOW if you would save delay and money, yes, and probable disappointment.

Street Railway Men Get Up At 3:30 A.M. By The Old Time

When the first shift of the Street Railway crews rolled out of bed this morning in response to the summons of "Big Ben," the hour was 4.30 o'clock, but the sleepy motormen and conductors realized that the correct time was actually 3.30 a.m.

The cars leave the barn at five minutes to six every morning. Most of the men who go out first live at considerable distance and in order that they may have plenty of time to Fletcherize their ample breakfasts, the while wondering why they have had to get up at 4.30 o'clock. There was not only breakfast, but also the fires and other chores that required attention. But now since the clocks have been moved forward one hour, these men are "showing a leg" at 3.30 o'clock by the old time. And the only class that objected to daylight savings were the farmers.

Last week the first cars were running in broad daylight, this morning's initial trip was greeted with dull day break. The lights had to be turned on in a shade as dark as March mornings. The railway men seemed to accept the conditions quite contentedly. "Next week it will be daylight" one of them remarked, "so why "grouch."

Daylight saving has served one useful purpose; it has shaken the people as a unit out of a rut, and those who object may blame the Hun, if they are deeply peveed over this seeming revolution in their habits.

Trains that left the divisional terminals on Saturday night followed their schedule on time, but on reaching their destination they were one hour early. This gain will be counterbalanced when the clocks are turned back one hour in September.

A clerk on Saturday expressed the wish that the change was made in the day time. Thus they would get paid for time in which they were not employed. In a few days the public will forget the glaring deception the expressionless faces of the clocks are working upon, and will forget that hour they persist in calculating in their counting the time.

Lord Bishop At St. John's

Inspiring Addresses at Both Services—Special Music

Stirring effects were produced at the services in St. John's yesterday, when the Organist, Mr. R. J. Devey, without any announcement, played the great French war song, "The Marseillaise," the trumpet call "To Arms," and "March On," brilliantly played, brought before the mind's eye the gallant French army marching to back up the British army in the fierce battle now raging for the freedom of the world from the would-be yoke of the "hun." The sermon at evensong was preached by the Lord Bishop of Toronto. Before the sermon Bishop Sweeney expressed his pleasure at the way the congregation had kept together during the indisposition of the Rev. Canon Davidson, who would soon be able to resume his work among them under arrangements for assistance which he hoped to make.

The organist and choirmaster and the choir by their splendid services had kept the congregation together, and indeed, Bishop Sweeney said, it must be hard to stay away from such an inspiring service as that in which they had just taken part.

Runaway Horse Collided With Car On Reid St.

James Cole, 423 Concession street, hired a horse and buggy from F. L. Robinson's livery barn on Saturday afternoon. He drove to Bridgenorth and stayed with a friend until 10.30 p.m. On his return to Peterboro, he was approaching Reid street when he met another horse and buggy. They were both driving in the middle of the road, with the result that they collided. Colts' horse broke its harness and bolted, smashing the shafts. Cole left the buggy on Reid street, and reported the accident to the men in charge of the livery barn, and helped to bring the buggy back. The horse was badly cut and bruised, and it has since transpired that it collided with Mr. Clayton Telford's automobile near the corner of Reid and London streets.

Mr. Telford had turned off McDonnel street into Reid street, on his way home. He saw the horse coming over the top of the hill, but thought it was hitched to a buggy. Not until it was only twenty-five yards away, did he notice it was running wild. Mr. Telford turned sharply toward the ditch but the horse, seemingly attracted by the car, changed its course and made directly for it. The left hind wheel remained on the road and against the rear fender and the top on that side the horse collided with full force. It bent the rods that support the top, smashed the fender, and left other dents.

The affair happened so quickly that the passengers on the rear seat were unaware of their danger until the horse was upon them. It had only a scrap of harness left, and Mr. Telford said he had never seen an animal running so fast, and frightened. None of the five passengers was injured, but the horse was badly gashed. It left patches of hair and flesh in the dents on the car.

Mr. Dela Fosse Was Taken For a Spy

Mr. F. M. Dela Fosse returned yesterday from a six weeks' visit at Riverdale, California.

Mr. Dela Fosse returns delighted with the response the American people have made to the call to the colours. Everything in the United States is war at present, and all have given their last dollar and are making their united efforts towards the success of the Allies. Women have responded nobly to the call to duty and are making what Mr. Dela Fosse considers the best way of impressing most effort, as great efforts as the Canadian women. The American army seems to pour in thousands of magnificent troops, as fine looking as the Canadians, without feeling any drain.

TAKEN FOR A SPY.

At his hotel Mr. Dela Fosse was considerably embarrassed at being taken for a spy. Every stranger is watched, and he came in for his share when day and night he was watched by a secret service agent, until the agent was finally satisfied. Mr. Dela Fosse attended the yearly Easter services at Mount Rubidoux, which he describes as the most impressive he ever witnessed. Food, he says, not scarce, yet regulated, and only certain diets may be obtained. Hoover makes a splendid food controller.

JAPAN'S MOTIVE FOR SENDING TROOPS INTO SIBERIA

Land of Rising Sun Will Not Permit the Establishment of German Base on Pacific.

A Pacific Coast Port, April 15.—Any action Japan may take in sending troops to Siberia will be of interest to all nations with whom Germany is at war, and not in the sole interests of Japan, Viscount Isrii, the new Japanese Ambassador to the United States, declared here to-day. Ishii has arrived from Japan en route to Washington.

There is a possibility Germany might establish a base on the Pacific Asiatic Coast should she make a successful drive through Siberia, Ishii declared, and it will be Japan's duty to prevent such a move.

JOHN CLANCY WAS FATALLY INJURED

Employee of the Quaker Oats Died This Afternoon.

John Clancy, 686 Concession street, an employee of the Quaker Oats Company, died this afternoon at 1:30 as a result of injuries received when he was caught between two shunting cars at the old MacAllister Milling Company. The accident occurred at 11:30 this morning, and Dr. F. C. Neal administered first aid after which the injured man was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital in Belleghem's ambulance. Later Dr. McNulty was called and found the man to be hopelessly injured, his spine and legs being broken.

He leaves a wife and two children.

Were Moving Cars.

It was stated that the G.T.R. does not shunt the cars all the way down the siding, but leaves them on the ledge north of the old McAllister Mill. Clancy and other workmen were moving one car when another which had broken away behind them, and quietly moved down the track, without the slightest warning, bumped into the lower car, crushing Clancy's body between the couplings.

SIR ADAM BECK IS IN WASHINGTON

Scene from "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," at the Grand, Wednesday and Thursday of this week.

There will be presented for the first time here at the Grand Opera House on Wednesday and Thursday, April 17th and 18th, matinee daily, the most remarkable photo-drama of the day, a picturization of Jules Verne's immortal story, "20,000 Leagues under the Sea." Fascinating as was the book, more so is the screen version. The mysteries of the deep are presented like no writer can picture them. It is an achievement that has gained for the producers the greatest praise, and the work has been called a masterpiece. Recently "20,000 Leagues under the Sea" was presented for the first time in Toronto, at Massey Hall, and the large audience was taxed to the capacity at every performance. So great was the demand for seats that extra morning performances had to be given, with special matinees for the school children. Its educational value, its interesting story, and its artistic photography, places the picture in a class by itself. Its merits as an attraction are such that it i now being presented at the new Princess Theatre, Toronto, where only the high-priced legitimate productions are presented, and is duplicating the tremendous business of the first engagement. Special Children's Matinee will be given on Wednesday afternoon at 4 p.m.

PETERBORO' CASUALTIES

One Peterboro' Soldier Killed in Action and Two Wounded

Confirmation.

His Lordship the Bishop of Toronto administered the holy rite of confirmation in the Church of St. John the Baptist on Sunday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock. Twelve candidates were confirmed by the Bishop.

There was no evening service in St. John's Church on Sunday.

Sunday saw the beginning of the daylight saving, and the majority of the people observed it. All the churches but the Presbyterian Church held their morning services according to the new time. Some rather amusing mistakes were made, but on the whole it was adopted according to schedule.

GOVERNMENT PROMISES CAREFUL CONSIDERATION

Letter-Carriers Ask for Increase in Wages.

Special to the Examiner:

OTTAWA, April 15.—Careful consideration by the Government was promised by Sir Robert Borden today to a deputation of the Trades and Labour Congress, which waited on members of the Cabinet and asked for increased wages for letter-carriers, stronger beer, and sundry other concessions. At the same time the Premier asked the deputation to take carefully into consideration the gravity of the financial situation and other conditions which had a bearing upon their demands.

CLASS ONE WILL BE COMBED OUT

It Is Improbable That Second Class Will be Touched at Present.

OTTAWA, Ont., April 15.—While nothing official was given out to-day regarding the proposed amendments to the Military Service Act, it is generally believed of the first class that the Government proposes a vigorous combing out process of men exempted by tribunals and medical examinations. It is thought quite improbable that the second class will be touched at present.

DOMINION SECRETARY OF WAR VETERANS HAS RESIGNED

N. F. R. Knight Declares That Action of Irresponsible Veterans Threaten the Ruin of the Association.

Special to he Examiner.)

Toronto, April 15. — N. F. R. Knight, who has been the secretary of the Dominion Great War Veterans' Association, since its organization, has resigned.

In an interview he declared that the action of irresponsible Veterans threaten the ruin of the Association and more stringent rules are needed if the organization is to hold the good opinion of the public.

"Our only hope," says Secretary Knight, "lies not in the government but in the respect and the good opinion of the general public, and in our ability to command the esteem and respect of all honourable men and women. The recalcitant and mischief maker must be curbed—and it should be done right away! Far better that a few should be made to play the game or get out than that we should destroy the whole structure by losing the goodwill and the support of our fellow-citizens."

Secretary Knight then gives in detail a plan of reorganization which in his opinion must be adopted at the coming provincial and Federal conventions if the Association is to survive.

The Appointment Liquor Vendor

Mr. P. J. Kenny Late of the Central Liquor Store An Applicant

The appointment of a liquor vendor for the County of Peterborough which must be made immediately, is one that will require careful consideration by the Government. The Ministerial Association recently passed a resolution that the appointment be given to a person not a stranger to the city, but to a local man of clean record.

Mr. Kenny, late of the Central liquor store—a resident of the city at present and some years back, in making application, gives as one of the strongest reasons for his appointment his record and the record of the liquor store he managed, as being absolutely clean under license law. The success of the new prohibition law will be more fully assured throughout the Province by the appointment of clean, honest vendors in all localities.

Mascot—Gerald Patterson.
Score keeper—Clifford Chapman.

ED. BARROW'S TROUBLES.

NEW YORK, April 15.—Judging from the games they have played with Brooklyn, Ed. Barrow's Boston Red Sox are not running any too smoothly. Just where the trouble lies it is hard to say.

McInnis seems to be playing third base acceptably. Hoblitzel has been putting up a good game at first. Manager Ed. Barrow is doing a lot of experimenting around second.

This leads to the assumption that Johnnie Evers is not making too strong a come-back. Schang and several others have played the keystone sack at times recently.

Barrow is finding it hard to replace Duffy Lewis in left field. It begins to look as if the Sox might not be as strong this season as they appear on paper.

Baseball Season Will Open To-day

NEXT!

Winnipeg Domestic Workers Form a Trade Union.

WINNIPEG, April 12.—A Domestic Workers' Union was formed last night at a meeting held in the Labour Temple, with a membership of 50. Many more have signified their willingness to join. A committee of four has been appointed to draft by-laws, etc. The union will send delegates to the Trades and Labour Council.

HARDWARE AND METAL MARKETS

Revised prices on shovels, spades and scoops have been made during the week which reveal an advance of about 10 per cent. all the way through. This is directly attributed to the recent advance provided for in new discounts issued on handles. Another line which has been affected similarly is handled axes, new quotations now ruling at considerably higher levels.

The fact that prices on white lead and linseed oil have advanced to such an extent since prices were established on ready-mixed paints in February leads to the belief that higher prices on paints would not come as any surprise. Manufacturing costs continue to soar also and it is thought that new prices from 15c to 25c per gallon higher may be named.

Linseed oil supplies are very limited and there are few offering oil in any quantity. Some shipments reached the city during the week, which, with others expected, will clean up the back orders which have accumulated in these quarters. Turpentine reveals a firming tendency in the primary market and this is reflected in Toronto markets though Montreal have declined 8c per gallon.

Tin remains in its usual scarce condition in the metal markets and there are no sales reported. Revised prices have been made in solder in some quarters and manufactured products containing tin must necessarily be in an uncertain position. Tin plate stocks are badly broken and heavy grades are practically unobtainable.

Further advances have been made in clay and rock picks, mattocks, grub hoes, crowbars and wrecking bars. This follows a higher level of prices only recently established and indicates the position of steel and how cost of production has increased.

New net prices have been issued on game traps which are about 10 per cent. higher than those formerly ruling. Wood screws have advanced approximately 20 per cent. in the United States and whereas no change has yet been made in Canada, jobbers seem to feel that an advance may follow here. Revisions in prices towards higher levels are revealed in quotations issued on Mrs. Potts' sad irons, cotton Gloves, cotton wrapping twine, mop sticks and cloths, oilcloth binding, Nicholson files, Redlich faucets and foot warmers. Business is reported to be good.—"Hardware and Metal."

The Earliest Spring In Seventy Years

AVERAGE TEMPERATURE HAS BEEN FOUR DEGREES WARMER THAN AVERAGE TEMPERATURE FOR SEVENTY YEARS.

Toronto, April 15.—Ontario is experiencing the earliest spring in 70 years. The first half of April this year has been four degrees warmer than the average temperature for the previous 70 years. The first 15 days of this month have also been much drier than the average for the last 70 years. The year's temperature in March of this year was 5 degrees above the average temperature for 70 years. In April to date the average temperature was 42 degrees, compared with 38 as an average during 70 years.

Since the 15th of March Toronto has had .38 inches of rain fall. The average in March for the last 70 years was 2.20 inches, and for April, 2.13 inches. Toronto has thus had less than one fifth of the average amount in rain.

POSITIONS IMPROVED

bombardments at several points on the front.

The battle which has been raging about Neuve Eglise has been one of the most sanguinary of any since the German offensive began. On Friday night the Germans succeeded after heavy hand-to-hand fighting in gaining possession of the town. They held it through the night, but on Saturday morning the British drove forward and pushed out the enemy. The Germans continued to fling great numbers of troops against the defenses. Yesterday the British took the initiative and cleared the Germans from the slopes ao the east and south of the town. The enemy kept on hammering and after a night of severe fighting at close quarters forced the British to abandon the village.

Even at Neuve Eglise, which the Germans entered, after many attacks, their success seems likely to be short lived. This village has changed hands repeatedly in the fighting of the last few days, and to-day the British are again pounding away at the Germans there.

Expressed Hostility To Conscription

Special to The Examiner:

DUBLIN, April 15.—Large meetings to oppose conscription were held in Armagh, Limerick, Omagh and other places yesterday. Although Cardinal Logue definitely opposed organized resistance he expressed hostility to the conscription measure.

Local Fighting Continues To-day

(3 o'clock Despatch.)
(United Press Service.)
(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, April 15.—On the Lys battle front local fighting continues to-day for tactically important positions.

The tenacity of the British in the half burned city of Bailleul fooled Hindenburg's plans. Von Eberhardt attacked Neuve-Eglise more than ten times hoping to break through to the northward of Bailleul. He took the city but could not progress beyond.

BOBCAYGEON HAD ANOTHER FIRE

BOBCAYGEON, April 15.—Another fire that narrowly escaped having serious results occurred here. The section men of the C.P.R. had been cleaning up the yard and during the day had set fire to the rubbish collected. During their absence the fire caught in the grass and crept down toward the boat house owned by Mr. Wm. Hiskson, which along with its contents was consumed. Mr. Hickson loses a canoe that has taken him on many a fishing jaunt and has accompanied him on many a holiday to the lakes of northern Peterborough. In addition a considerable number of decoy ducks were burned. The fire alarm was responded to with despatch, but the house had burned to the water's edge. The other boat houses in the vicinity had a narrow escape.

Grocers Too Must Follow The Clock

Some grocers have expressed the intention of keeping open until 8 o'clock because of the Daylight Saving Bill. The foundation for this strange notion is not clear. The grocers open their stores an hour earlier than formerly, as a result of moving the clocks forward one hour, and they will naturally close one hour earlier. Boiler-making is said to have been the cradle of many a grocer, but it would be most unfair to intelligent boiler-makers to suggest a mental density that could read out of the change in time the suggested closing of the stores one hour later. It is one of the marvels of business how dealers of this calibre manage to survive competition with men who have been trained in and who study the business.

IN MEMORIAM

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of Mrs. Edward Courtney, who died April 14, 1917:

We loved her, yes we loved her,
But Jesus loved her more,
And he has sweetly called her
To yonder shining shore.

The golden gates were opened,
A gentle voice said, "Come,"
And with farewells unspoken
She calmly entered home.
—Inserted by Husband and Daughters.

In loving memory of Private F. H. Gregor, died of wounds April 12, 1917, after Battle of Vimy Ridge. Formerly of 93rd Battalion.

Killed in action, our hearts are sore,
For king and country we miss him more.
His cheerful smile, his loving face,
No one on earth can fill his place.

We loved him, yes no tongue can tell,
How much we loved him and how well,
God loved him too, and thought it best
To take him to His home of rest.

The blow is bitter, the loss severe,
To part with one we loved so dear,
Our loss is great, we'll not complain,
But hope in heaven to meet again.

In loving memory of Privae F. H. Orde, of the 93rd Battalion, who was killed at Vimy Ridge, on April 9th, 1917:
Your King and country thank you,
Oh, loyal souls and strong,
Who side by side, and steadfast eyed,
Stood forth to right the wrong.
Who left your own behind you,
And took on shoulders free
The strong man's yoke, that weaker folk
Secure from harm should be;
Who braved for them the peril,
For them the burden bore
Through Summer's glow and Winter's snow.
These three long years of war;
Great host, where all are heroes—
Can e'er we pay our debt?
Your King and country thank you
And never will forget!

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards — Receipts, 170 cars, with 3179 cattle, 874 calves, 1,446 hogs and 21 sheep and lambs.

There was an extra strong and active market yesterday, butcher cattle prices scoring another good 25c advance over last week. The feature of the market was the demand for choice heavy steers and the fine quality of several loads offering. One full load of extra fine heavy steers sold at the record price of $14.50, probably the highest price ever paid on this market at this season of the year. Another lot sold at $13.75 and several loads at $13 to $13.25. Choice butcher cattle, handy weights, sold firm at about 25c higher than last week. All grades strong in proportion.

Hogs sold steady at $20.25, fed and watered.

Ottawa House To Meet In Secret War Session

Premier Borden Announces That "Contents of Certain Letters Received by Government From England" Will Be Considered Confidentially on Wednesday of This Week.

SIR T. WHITE WILL GO TO WASHINGTON SOON

OTTAWA, Ont., April 16.—Premier Borden announced at the opening of the House yesterday afternoon a secret session will be held in order that the members may be informed of the contents of certain letters received by the Government from England. The Prime Minister said: "Owing to the serious conditions that threaten the allied cause, I think that the members should be informed in a confidential way the contents of certain letters which it is thought desirable they should know. For this reason it has been decided that this should be done in the immediate future, so that it will be possible to explain the situation as it could not otherwise be explained." Sir Robert then moved that the secret session be fixed for Wednesday afternoon and stated that all strangers would be barred from the House.

Speaking on the motion, Sir Wilfrid Laurier remarked that he had been consulted by the Prime Minister as to the advisability of a secret session. On a matter of this kind, Sir Wilfrid said, the Government must take the responsibility. There could be no harm in a secret session if the Government wished to impart information which it was not in the public interest to give to the public in general. Under the circumstances there could be no objection.

NO STRANGERS ADMITTED.

The motion was carried, as follows: "Resolved that the sitting of Wednesday next, April 17th, shall be a secret session until the House shall then otherwise order and that all strangers be ordered to withdraw during such secret session, provided however that this order shall not effect the privileges enjoyed by members of the Senate of being present at debates of this House. Resolved further that a message be sent to the Senate informing their honours of the terms of this resolution."

SIR THOS. TO RESUME DUTIES.

Sir Thos. White will leave for Washington shortly to represent Canada in certain important financial negotiations according to an announcement made by Sir Robert Borden in the House this afternoon. The Minister of Finance has recovered greatly in health and will resume his Cabinet duties after leaving Washington.

"Over activity of a too vivid imagination," is Armand Lavergne's chief trouble, according to Hon. Mr. Doherty in reply to a question as to Lavergne's alleged appointment as Chief Keeper of the Records. The question was brought up in the House this afternoon, but the Minister of Justice stated that there was no such position as Lavergne was reported to have been offered, the report emanating from Lavergne himself.

NEW PARLIAMENT PILE.

Hon. Carvell extended an invitation to the members of the House and the press to spend an hour and a half with him on Tuesday or Wednesday in looking over the new Parliament buildings. He remarked that unless some changes were made it would be practically impossible to have the building completed before next session.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier asked if it were true that it had been decided to erect a house for the Speaker on the cliff back of the Parliament buildings.

Mr. Carvell replied that this had not been decided upon but the committee in charge of construction had determined not to make provision for the housing of the Speaker within the walls of the Parliament building.

Sir Wilfrid thought this was a mistake, and the Speaker should be provided with accommodation as is done by the Imperial Parliament.

Mr. Carvell replied that the matter could be considered after the members had viewed the building.

BANK'S EXCESS CIRCULATION.

Hon. A. K. MacLean asked for the endorsation by Parliament of a proclamation approving the issue by the banks of excess circulation as provided by the status. He said that all the banks had taken advantage of this privilege during the past year, with the result that the Government had received additional revenue amounting to $109,532, the banks paying five per cent. on excess circulation issued.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier asked whether the banks had made a request for permission to increase the circulation. Mr. MacLean replied that the very fact that the banks had taken advantage of the opportunity given in past years showed that they desired it. However, he said, the proclamation had been issued at the suggestion of the banks. The approval of the House was then given to the proclamation.

A number of private bills engaged the attention of the House.

CLAIMED $500 FOR BLOOD.

TORONTO, April 15. — Claiming that he was weakened by a transfusion of blood to aid a Japanese patient named Shiko, who was suffering from tuberculosis, Avany Yatsko, a Russian, brought suit against the Toronto General Hospital and I. G. A. McIntyre for $500 damages. Yatsko was being attended at the hospital for stomach trouble. He maintained before Judge Winchester that the operation was made on his arm without his consent. Doctors and nurses from the hospital asserted that an interpreter was called to question Yatsko at the time, and it was understood he was agreeable to have the operation performed. They further held that Yatsko was not injured in any way by the event, and that his own ailment was very slight. He was picked out as a healthy patient.

"Did it prevent you joining the army?" queried his Honour.

"That is a different matter," was the reply through interpreter Markovitz.

"On the evidence I can't help you any," concluded the court. "The case is dismissed."

MISSING MAIL BAG FOUND IN CROSSEN'S LUMBERYARD

A young boy who was going through Crossen's lumberyard, came across the mail bag that was stolen in transit from the post office to the westbound train on Feb. 18th. The mail bag had been ripped open, and numerous letters opened. There were cheques and money orders galore in the bag but these were left, as the thief hesitated, no doubt, to attempt to cash them. Whatever money was in letters was missing, and there does not seem any way of tracing what amount there was. Chief Ruse is working on the case, and has his suspicions as to who the guilty party is. —Cobourg Star.

GRAIN MARKET

The corn situation in the local market has developed a decidedly easier tone in the past two or three days. Many cars bought at Chicago, in some cases months ago, but held up from delivery here by the recent U. S. War Board embargo, are now coming across the border, almost with a rush, with the result that there is a condition approximating a temporary congestion locally, and No. 3 kiln dried, is now being offered at $1.90, track, Toronto. Cash oats and barley are both quoted easier in the local market, although the options on Manitoba oats at Winnipeg developed strength, closing higher than Saturday's close.

Manitoba wheat—No. 1 Northern, $2.23½; No. 2, $2.20½; No. 3, $2.17½; No. 4, $2.10¼, including 2½-cent tax, in store, Fort William.

Manitoba oats—No. 2, C. W., 94 5-8; No. 3, 90 7-8; extra No. 1 feed, 90 1-8c; No. 1 feed, 88 1-8c, in store, Fort William.

American corn—No. 3, kiln dried, $1.90 track, Toronto.

Ontario oats—No. 2 white, 92c to 93c, nominal; No. 3 white, 91c to 92c.

Barley, malting, $1.64 to $1.65.

Ontario wheat—No. 2 winter, $2.22, basis in store Montreal.

Peas—No. 2, $3.60 to $3.70, according to freights outside.

Buckwheat—$1.78 to $1.80.

Rye—No. 2, $2.60.

Manitoba flour—War quality $11.10, Toronto, new bags.

Ontario flour—War quality, $10.70, Toronto-Montreal, $10.70, new bags.

Millfeed—Car lots, delivered, Montreal; shorts $40.40; bran, $35.40; feed flour, not quoted; middlings, not quoted.

Hay—Baled, track, Toronto, car lots, No. 1, $17 to $18; No. 2, $14 to $16; mixed, $13 to $16; straw, car lots, $8.50 to $9.

REVIVE CURFEW LAW IN TOWN OF NEWMARKET.

Newmarket, April 13. — The authorities of the town of Newmarket have decided to resume the enforcement of the curfew law, which was in effect here some years ago. The new order will go into effect on Monday, April 15, and from that date girls of 16 and under and boys fourteen and under will have to be accompanied by parent or other responsible elder if found on the streets after 9 o'clock at night.

NEWFOUNDLAND KEEPS MEN AT HOME.

Unmarried Men Between 20 and 35 Can't Leave Island—Conscription is Coming.

ST. JOHNS, Nfld., April 13.—Unmarried men between 20 and 35 years old are forbidden to leave the island by an Order-in-Council passed by the Newfoundland Government. The Order was preliminary to the Military Service Law which it is expected the Colonial Legislature will enact at a special session, called for April 23. Need of raising men to fill the Newfoundland naval and military forces was given by the Cabinet as the reason for calling the Legislative session, and conscription has been proposed as a necessity for the conservation of man power in vital industries.

Pencils in Japan.

An unthought-of result of the war has been the creation of a lead-pencil industry in Japan. In 1911 Japan imported 65,000,000 pencils, most of which came from America and Germany. But with the opening of the European conflict German sources of supply were cut off and native manufacturers, who had been producing only in comparatively small quantities, seized their opportunity and made the most of it. In 1914 Japan exported over nine million pencils and in 1916 the number had increased to 168,000,000. There is strong indication, observes a writer, that many of the markets won by the Orientals will be held by them after the war, for they have the advantage of very cheap labor. Most of the lead which they use is imported from India and this country.

Woman Horse Nurse.

In London Messrs. MacNamara, who employ about forty woman drivers, have put their horse hospital entirely in charge of women. Mrs. Pary, the superintendent, says they have thirty to forty patients a day. She and three assistants do all cleaning, grooming, feeding and administering of medicines prescribed by the veterinary surgeon. The animals, she says, are grateful and companionable, and she has no doubt that women will want to keep on with this work after the war. "We do not baby the horses," she says. "Somehow we reform the worst cases of temper, and the women can do anything they like with even fractious, nervous and suffering horses. The effect on the nerves of the horses, and consequently on their value, is noticeable."

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

SELF RELIANCE

CHAPTER XLII.

I dressed carefully. I remembered how very particular George was that I should look well the day he took me to the Elite for luncheon. I wore the same dress, but this time instead of the toque. I wore a big, floppy, black hat that was very becoming.

"You look very nicely," Mrs. Sexton said when I joined her down stairs. She herself was beautifully dressed, and so stylish. I wondered why she had to work teaching people how to behave, when she could dress like that. I learned afterward that her clothes were her capital. She had to dress well so that she could go where her clients wanted to go. That was the way I thought of them —as "clients."

The head waiter knew her, and to my surprise he was as deferential as he had been to George. Another exploded idea. I had supposed that only men were interesting to waiters. That they sort of looked down upon women; that they slighted them and gave them inferior service.

"My cheeks burned, and I was so nervous that my hands trembled when Mrs. Sexton waved the waiter away with a graceful motion in my direction.

Bowing obsequiously, he moved around to my side and gave me the menu. He had a patient expression on his face, as much as to say: "why didn't the older woman order?"

I recalled that I must order "briskly," so I started in.

"We'll have some clam bullion," I looked toward Mrs. Sexton, but she was gazing around and wouldn't let me catch her eye. Then we'll have—broiled chicken—and—"

"Some celery or a salad?" the waiter asked as I hesitated.

"No, bring some peas, and a tomato en surprise. I will decide the dessert later." I had heard George say that, so I knew I might also.

Deserved Praise.

"You did very well. I am glad you did not allow the waiter to dictate."

"But it is such a simple lunch."

"That is the very reason I am praising you. When you can't do anything elaborate well never attempt it. Simple things, if properly managed, are very common. The luncheon will be very nice, I am sure."

She then told me who many of the people around us were. She knew everyone. Two or three stopped at our table and spoke to her. One man she introduced, a Mr. Stewart. He seemed very nice and spoke so nicely about George.

Our luncheon was really very good as she said it would be. We had nearly finished the main order, and I was wondering whether Mrs. Sexton would rather have French pastry, ice cream, or pie, when that Mr. Carpenter who had spoken of "the bunch," the day George and I were there, came up to the table.

"This is a surprise," he said to Mrs. Sexton. "I didn't know you were in town." He then spoke to me, but again turned politely to Mrs. Sexton as she replied:

"No I haven't been away. But I haven't been up to my usual form, so have rather avoided going out."

"No wonder you couldn't resist today —with such a charming companion," and he bowed graciously toward me. I was terribly embarrassed, but Mrs. Sexton simply laughed and called him: "Flatterer."

I paid scarcely any attention to what they said, after that; my mind was on the dessert question. Finally I ordered French pastry and coffee.

"May I have a cup with you?" he asked looking at Mrs. Sexton.

"This is Mr. Howard's luncheon, I am her guest," she replied, and, I thought, not over pleased.

"May I?" he turned to me.

"Certainly. Bring three coffees, waiter."

After asking me if he might remain, he scarcely noticed me. But kept up a running fire of conversation with Mrs. Sexton. They talked of mutual friends, etc. I was a bit bored, but tried not to show it.

We had just been served with our coffee when I saw Merton Gray coming toward us. I gave a little start, and over went the hot coffee in my lap. It burned me slightly, but I cared nothing for that. I was so mortified, I wanted to get under the table and hide. I made matters worse by making too much fuss about it.

Mr. Carpenter was very solicitous, fearing I had been burned. But Mrs. Sexton was as quietly calm as if nothing had happened. I wondered if ever I should have her savoir faire.

Merton Gray evidently had seen my accident and had immediately turned away. I was so thankful.

"When you see Mr. Gray, please do not allow his presence to make you as awkward as it did to-day," Mrs. Sexton said on the way home, letting me see that she had seen and understood.

I burst into tears, and when we reached home went directly to my room.

DON'T FRET ABOUT TRIFLES

Magnifying Petty Mistakes and Troubles Weakens One's Ability to Master Bigger Problems.

Some of us rather overdriven women get into a habit of magnifying the petty mistakes or troubles of disagreeable events of the day, the business day, and making them out very big and terrible. The result is a loss of energy, for magnified troubles bring worry and anxiety, which is a sort of poison to the mind and even to the body, writes Jessie Roberts in the Houston Post.

Don't hang on to the mistakes of yesterday. Today's will be easier to manage if you haven't that drag on you, and by a little more firmness you can soon get to the point when the annoyance of the moment gets itself settled in that moment and then is dropped.

We would think it a fool thing to feed our body poison, even in the minutest particles; but we feed our nerves poison, even though it be in small quantities, when we deliberately fret and worry over small things, making them huge and important by the mere turning of them over and over.

These are strenuous days. Don't weaken your strength by unnecessary and harmful fussing over trifles. After you have done whatever can be done to remedy what has gone wrong, turn your mind away from it. Refuse to be dominated by small mistakes. Few of us, by the way, are terrified by a really big thing. We rouse up and meet it definitely and firmly, unless we have a yellow streak. But the small thing often breaks down our nerves—and then our nerve.

A Drop On a Touchy Corn

Instant relief! Then corn or callus lifts off with fingers.

Just think! You can lift off any corn or callus without one twinge of pain.

A Cincinnati man discovered this ether compound and named it freezone. Any druggist will sell a tiny bottle of freezone for very little cost. You apply a few drops directly upon a tender corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears; then shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you can lift it right off.

Freezone is wonderful! It dries instantly. It doesn't eat away the corn or callus, but shrivels it up without even irritating the skin.

Hard corns, soft corns, or corns between the toes as well as painful calluses, lift right off. There is no pain before or afterwards. No soreness or smarting. Women should keep a tiny bottle on the dresser and never let a corn ache twice.

FAVORITE SPORTS OF TODAY

Baseball and Football Are Games Evolved From Daily Work of Our Forefathers.

Play is ancestral work. The things our forefathers, near or remote, did to live, we do for fun, muses an exchange. Away back in the dim distance, they lived by hunting—and by dodging the creatures which were hunting them. In those days, it considerably strengthened one's grip on life to be able to throw a stone with accuracy, to hit quickly and strongly with a club, to run from tree to tree so swiftly and with such nice judgment of distance as to foil old Saber-Tooth, the original apostle of frightfulness.

The men who could do these things well left descendants. Generations, centuries, aeons passed, and these descendants, struggling to repeat the daily work of their forbears, evolved such games as cricket, one old cat, and rounders. Out of this last, by happy chance and happier genius, was developed baseball, to exercise our lungs, improve our eyes and increase our vocabularies.

Far different is the origin of football. The keynote of that is the massed rush—like the one which won the battle of Marathon. Sometimes the massing is extra close, corresponding to the charge of the Theban column at Leuctra, and with pretty nearly as high a proportion of casualties until the rule makers abolished the flying wedge. But even in the most open game, football is essentially a disciplined charge, and the activities it calls into play are immeasurably less ancient than those of baseball.

Why the one game has become the greatest of professional sports and the other the peculiar joy of colleges, no one can say, but so it is. Perhaps half the problem can be solved by recollecting that the college age is the military age, and takes naturally to a game which mimics ancient war.

Von Hindenburg a "Junker."

"Junker" is philologically akin to "Jonkheer" and has a quasi-equivalent in the English "Squire." The Junker is a man of some birth and of inherited property, especially land, says an exchange. The word is used to describe that large class of Prussians who come of noble, seminoble or at least old and "good" families and whose worldly possessions are such as to give them as appreciable stake in the government. Von Hindenburg is a fine example of the Junker; Ludendorff, his collaborator, is not a Junker by birth, however much a one he may be by taste.

Capital Punishment.

Capital punishment prevails in all the states of the Union except Kansas, Maine, Minnesota, Rhode Island, Washington and Wisconsin. In Michigan the only crime punishable by death is treason. The death penalty was abolished in the state of Washington in 1913, in Iowa in 1872 and restored in 1878, in Colorado in 1897 and restored in 1901. Hanging is the ordinary mode of execution, but in Indiana, New York, Nebraska, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Arkansas, Vermont and Virginia electrocution is the legal method. In Nevada hanging or shooting is optional with the condemned person.

Aching Head, Pains In Back

Heart Action Was Weak and Nerves Greatly Exhausted—Now in Extra Good Health.

TWEED, Ont., March 28.—This is a cheering letter from Mrs. Wagar, because it describes the condition in which many women find themselves and tells how cure was effected.

Once the food cure was resorted to the system was gradually and certainly built up and reconstructed. The old symptoms disappeared, because the reason for their existence had been overcome. It is well worth while to give Dr. Chase's Nerve Food a trial when such results are obtained.

Mrs. H. E. Wagar, Tweed, Ont., writes: "My system was in a run-down condition. I could not sleep well, and was very nervous. I had frequent headaches and pains through my back, and my nerves used to twitch. I took weak spells, was short of breath and my heart action seemed weak. I was in very poor health generally. I went to a doctor and he advised me to take a rest, anod gave me medicine, but it did not help me. My husband got me some of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food one day, and this treatment gave me such relief that I took many boxes—I cannot tell just how many, but enough to build up my system and rid me of the old symptoms. I gradually began to get stronger, until I could get around and do my own house work. I am not bothered now with sick headaches and am enjoying extra good health. I would recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to all suffering from nervousness of any kind."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50c. a box, a full treatment of six boxes for $2.75, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

Get a Magnet.

A magnet will attract a hook and eye which is liable to rust, while it rejects the nonliable ones. So a magnet is a handy tool for the sewing basket.

Nursery Note.

It costs Paris nearly $100,000 a year to care for the trees on its streets and boulevards and in its parks, more than 1,000 new ones being planted annually.

Measure Smoke.

A British committee for investigation of atmospheric pollution maintains smoke measuring apparatus in 13 English and Scotch towns.

Keep Up the Good Work.

HE GAINED PREMIER'S EAR

Man Disrobed With Others to Receive Free Treatment, and Appealed for Position for Sister.

Clemenceau, beneath his brusque, masterful, sarcastic and oft-cutting speech, and in spite of the vitriolic character of his writings, possesses an exceedingly kind and charitable heart. He is not rich, and therefore cannot afford to give away much. But he has made a point, both when in office and out of it, to devote a couple of hours each day to free medical advice to the poor, never consenting to take a fee, writes a Paris correspondent. His specialty is skin diseases, and his consultation room is always crowded with poor patients. One day when last in office as premier, being in a hurry, he instructed his servant to tell the last batch of his male patients to strip in his ante-chamber, so as to save the time of the undressing in the consulting room. One by one they were rapidly prescribed for and sent on their way, until only the last remained. He presented himself in due course in an extremely decollete condition—without a stitch of clothing, and with every appearance of nervousness.

"M. le President," he began, with a low bow.

"Well, what is the matter?" asked the doctor-premier.

The man stammered inarticulately.

"Come! Come," exclaimed Clemenceau with impatience. "Out with it! Your skin seems perfectly healthy. I can see nothing wrong."

"There is nothing the matter with me," said the poor man at last, recovering his voice, "but—I don't know—it is all strange—I only came to ask you, M. le President, for your powerful influence with the government to procure for my widowed sister a place as postmistress at Clermont."

DRIVING CATTLE BY MOTOR

Stock Dealer Introduces Innovation Which May Sooner or Later Relegate Broncho to Background.

A new use for a motorcar has been found by a cattle dealer in one of the middle western states, whose business compels him to drive extensive herds of meat on the hoof along the roads, says an exchange. During the hottest part of last summer this purveyor determined to drive his animals by night in order to spare them the inevitable suffering that attended such operations in the middle of the day. Getting in his car, he started the herd ahead of him in the road, and by throwing the searchlight before and honking his horn he kept the animals moving quickly in the compact mass.

There are instances of the use of the motorcar in round-up work in the far West, so that the traditional picture of a cowboy astride a bucking broncho may have to give way to one of that leather-breeched gentleman cuddled down into the wheel of a flexible runabout, his lasso presumably dangling over the windshield.

Height Effects in Airplaining.

Some effects of airplane flights at very high altitudes are described in a recent English report. "Height effects" begin to be felt at 10,000 feet and become marked in most cases from 17,000 feet up. The principal difficulties are cold and lack of oxygen. Strange to say, no airplane has yet been devised on a plan which deliberately utilizes the heat of the engine to keep the passengers warm, although any tractor model has this effect to some extent. The matter of oxygen is solved by taking a supply in a container, which the aviator mixes with air when he feels oppressed. It is feared that flying at very high altitudes, to be made possible in the future by further development of models, may produce a trouble analagous to the "bends" experienced by workers in compressed air caissons due to the extreme pressure changes.

Climbers Imprisoned Atop Fuji.

The wisdom of erecting huts on Fuji for refuge in case of sudden storms of snow and rain was proved recently when a violent fall of snow and hail burst upon the crest of the sacred mountain. During two days more than 10,000 climbed the mountain and sudden arrival of the storm caught several hundred of them upon the hilltop. They sought safety in the numerous refuges. When the storm burst the police compelled all excursionists to wait for better weather at Gotemba and Tarobo. Relief parties were sent out but were unable to get through the drifts. Anxiety was felt for the food supply, but the adventurers came down safely. For two days the people in the snow were incommunicado, owing to the destruction of the telephone wires. These will be buried before next season.

Jerusalem's Great Walls.

After 1244 Jerusalem was under the rule of the sultans of Egypt until the year 1517, when Selim I conquered both Palestine and Egypt, taking the title of caliph, and carrying off the sacred banner of the Moslems to Constantinople. Selim's son, Suleiman the Magnificent, once more built the great walls about Jerusalem. These walls of Suleiman are the present fortifications of the city. But the great walls of Suleiman the Magnificent are only the last of a long series of walls which, time after time, have been built only to be destroyed. The most tragical destruction not only of the walls, but also of the whole city, was that which was carried out by the Roman armies of Titus, in the year 70 of our era, in the reign of the Emperor Vespasian.

WINNERS OF THE V.C.

SEVEN CANADIANS WERE ON RECENT LIST.

This Coveted Decoration Can Only Be Won by Conspicuous Bravery and Other Manly Attributes—Men From Overseas Dominions Have Distinguished Themselves.

NOT every soldier gets the Victoria Cross who deserves it, but nobody ever got it without risking his life for it. To win the V.C. it is not enough to be brave, not enough to risk life. To be brave and face death is expected of every soldier, but the super-soldier, the V.C. man, must be conspicuously brave, and usually more than that. His conspicuous bravery must result in some advantage to his comrades. It must be bravery that accomplishes something, a punch, not a gesture. In the latest list of eighteen V.C. awards we note such expressions as "for most conspicuous bravery, initiative and determination," "most conspicuous bravery, initiative and devotion to duty," "most conspicuous bravery and skilful handling of the troops under his command," "most conspicuous bravery and resource," "must conspicuous bravery and fearless leading." It is plain that V.C. courage is always accompanied by intelligence. It is not the bravery of the man who does not realize his danger, or the desperate bravery of the man who is actually seeking death.

Of the eighteen awards no fewer than seven were won by Canadians. One was earned by a trooper in an Indian cavalry regiment, another by a New Zealand private, and the others by Scotch, Irish and English officers, non-commissioned officers and men. Capt. Geo. Randolph Pearkes, acting major, and previously winner of the M.C., of the Canadian Mounted Infantry, was wounded just before an advance, but regardless of this he continued to lead his men "with the utmost gallantry." At a particular stage in the attack further advance was threatened by a strong point which was an objective of the battalion on his left. He appreciated the situation, captured and held this point, thus enabling his further advance to be successfully pushed forward. Lieut. Christopher Patrick John O'Kelly, M.C., of the Canadian infantry, led his company "with extraordinary skill and determination." After the original attack had failed and two companies of his unit had launched a new attack, O'Kelly advanced his command 1,000 yards under heavy fire without any artillery barrage, took the enemy positions on the crest of the hill by storm, then personally organized and led a series of attacks on pillboxes, his company alone capturing six of them with ten machine guns and 100 prisoners. Later in the night this company repelled an enemy attack, took more prisoners, and before finally settling down to sleep captured a German raiding party.

Sergt. George Harry Mullin, a military medal man, of the Canadian infantry, single-handed captured a commanding pillbox. He rushed a sniper's post in front, destroyed the garrison with bombs, and crawling on the top of the pillbox he shot the two machine gunners with his revolver. Then he rushed to another entrance and compelled the garrison to surrender.

Corp. Colin Barron, also of the C.I., rushed three enemy machine guns single-handed, killing four of the crew and capturing the remainder. He then turned the guns upon the enemy, causing them severe casualties. His action produced far-reaching effects and permitted the advance to continue.

Pte. Thomas William Holmes also distinguished himself against a pillbox, whose heavy machine gun and rifle fire was producing a critical situation. On his own initiative Holmes ran forward and threw two bombs, killing or wounding the machine-gun crews. He then returned for another bomb, and under heavy fire threw it into the entrance of the pillbox, causing its 19 inhabitants to surrender.

Pte. Cecil John Ross, C.I., showed a courage that probably has never been excelled. The advance was being held up by a machine gun, and Ross, after making a survey of the situation "deliberately divested himself of all his equipment save his rifle and bandolier, and regardless of his personal safety, advanced alone over the open ground in broad daylight, charged the enemy machine gun, killing the crew of six and seized and destroyed the gun." His action enabled his company to make a further advance of 300 yards to a highly important position.

The platoon of Pte. James Peter Robertson, C.I., was held by uncut wire and a machine gun. Robertson, dashing in on the flank, killed four of the gunners and then turned the weapon on the others, who, dismayed by his fierceness, were fleeing to their own lines. Then, carrying the machine gun, he led his platoon to the final objective, set up the gun and made most devastating play with it. Later, when two of our snipers were wounded in front of the trench, he went out under heavy fire and carried one of them in. He was killed just as he returned with the second man.

The Indian trooper, Dafadar Gobind Singh, won his V.C. for thrice volunteering to carry messages between the regiment and brigade headquarters, a distance of a mile and a half over open ground under the observation and heavy fire of the enemy. He made the three trips unscathed, but each time a horse was shot under him.

WOMAN PLEADED FOR CANDOR

Matron Announcing Nearness of Birthday Found Truth Not So Attractive After She Got It.

A woman with a birthday in sight spoke earnestly to three men who were her friends, writes Ella Randall Pearce, in life.

"Tomorrow will be another birthday for me," she said. "I know the freshness of my youth has departed, but I should like to know just how old I appear in the eyes of the world. Tell me, my dear friends, if you were looking on me for the first time what would be your impressions?"

Said the first man glibly: "I have known you for several years, and you appear the same as when I first saw you. Your beauty is undimmed; your charm is undiminished. If I did not know otherwise, I should say tomorrow would be your twentieth birthday."

Said the second man more slowly: "I, too, have known you for several years, but it seems to me you have been favored by time. Your beauty has ripened and deepened until now you, who were once a lovely bud, are a lovelier rose in bloom. I should count tomorrow as the beginning of your twenty-fifth year."

"And you," queried the woman of the third man, who had been regarding her with clear-eyed frankness.

"Between friends there should always be truth," he replied gravely. "I acknowledge your beauty and your charm and both have been wonderfully preserved in semblance of youth. But you ask for candor and you shall have it. Looking at you closely, I should not expect you to see thirty—after tomorrow."

The woman faced the three men who were her friends, and her eyes were gleaming while her cheeks' pink turned crimson. She pointed an accusing finger.

"You have lied," she said tremulously, "and you also. But I will forgive you both because you lied to please me. But you"—she whirled toward the last speaker—"you are a barbarous egotist. You have wounded me in order to maintain your own reputation for veracity. Truth, indeed! Your honesty offends me. We are no longer friends. Go—and quickly!"

"Whew!" exclaimed the third man as he strode through the outer darkness. "I wonder what would have happened to me if I had really told her the truth?"

New Boomerang Bullet.

The discussion of the war is heard everywhere. Even negro janitors find time while shoveling on the coal to talk about it, says a New York news letter. Two of them were discussing the wonderful inventions brought about by the war. "The man Edison is some boy," said one of the negroes. "How's that?" inquired the other. "Why he's done gone and invented a magnetized bullet dat can't miss a German, if it sees his steel helmet." "That's what I calls some invention," exclaimed the other. "But dat ain't all what that bullet can do," continued the first speaker. "Whenever that bullet don't hit nothin' it comes straight back to the American lines. "Dat so?" asked the second janitor, with some doubt. "How do they manage to keep them there comin' back bullets from hittin' our own men?" "Well, mah frien', didn't 'splain that," answered the first one, "but you can betcher life that man Edison has got dem bullets trained. You doan 'spect he'd let 'em kill any Americans, do you? No, sir. He's just got them fixed so dey will come back and fall around our gunners' feet."

Ground Moles Are Big Eaters.

A Scotchwoman has just announced the results of an interesting series of observations on the common mole. The most striking point to the layman is the inordinate appetite of this tiny creature. A mole will eat its own weight in earthworms in 24 hours. An ordinary man eating in the same ratio would require 150 pounds of food a day. If the human race were constituted like the moles, comments an exchange, Mr. Hoover's task would be hopeless from the outset. One of the moles which was a subject for study weighed four ounces and devoured 120 ounces of food in a single month.

Electric Ship Has Future.

The electric ship is no longer a dream but a reality and I should not be surprised to find, within a few years of the close of the war, every new vessel of any size driven, steered, stepped, reversed of turned, merely by the pressing of a series of buttons on the bridge, says a writer in the Electrical Times, London. The application of this principle will enable ships to be run with the highest efficiency at an even speed, permit marine engineers more liberty of design and yield proportionately greater cargo space than the present cumberous form of machinery allows.

An Old Habit.

The recruit at bayonet practice had just given the dummy a vicious jab, when the drill sergeant noticed that he was grimacing in a rather unusual manner.

"Number Four!" cried the sergeant; "what's the idea of all that mugging?"

"Why," said the recruit, a former movie actor, "you want me to register hate or fury or something don't you?"

Back-Handed Comfort.

"They say men of brains live longer than others."

"Don't worry about that, dear boy; you may be one of the exceptions to the rule."

A Patriotic Indian.

Alfred Picard, grand chief of the Huron tribe at Lorette, got word recently that his son, Capt. Ormond Picard, of the first Canadian contingent, was wounded at the front.

COMPREHEND IF THEY WISH

Foreigners Reluctant to Admit Knowledge of English, but Understand When It Is Advisable.

Many of the foreigners are extremely bashful about admitting their ability to speak and understand English, when there is work to be done, according to the officers, observes the Boston Herald. On the other hand, if they desire a pass or any similar official boon, their comprehension becomes exceedingly acute. On one occasion, a captain announced:

"Kabibble, you are on fatigue duty; you will sweep the mess hall and the office."

"No spik Engleesh," murmured the conscript, with a blank look at his superior.

"Hm—wait a minute."

The officer whispered to one of the sergeants.

"Sure, he understands all right," the latter affirmed.

The captain returned to the still uncomprehending Kabibble.

"Look here, if you don't sweep this mess hall quickly, you'll lose your pass for the next month. Do you understand that?"

"All right; where the broom?" the private replied with astonishing facility.

WOMAN LOVED HER CANARY

Matron Charged Brother With Theft of Bird and He Narrowly Escaped Being Sent to Prison.

Mrs. James Farmer was the complainant against her brother, George Clark, in special sessions recently, writes a New York correspondent. She lives at 502 West Fifty-ninth street, in excellent style, and on the witness stand was fashionably dressed and cultured.

"My brother called with a friend," she said, "and stole my pet canary—the best one of the thirteen I keep, and the sweetest singer you ever heard."

"Do you want me to send your own brother to the penitentiary?" asked Justice Bixby.

"Well, he is in bad health," she replied hesitatingly; "he's had chills and fever for a long time; but—"

"But you think more of the bird than you do of your brother?" suggested the justice.

"Well, your honor," said the lady half-reproachfully, "this canary was a special pet."

The brother escaped, however, through a technical error in the complaint.

His Fault.

"The preacher, who was an exbase ball player, seems to depend much on his delivery."

"It would be much more effective if he only knew something about being a shortstop."

GOOD OLD WINTER

Cold Wave Makes Humanity Warm Up to Every One.

Zero Temperature Brings Out Diversified Discussion Around the Stoves in Favorite Meeting Places.

After all ther's somethin' fine an' humanizin' about a good stingin' cold snap. It seems t' bring us closer t'gether an' cause a friendlier feelin' all around. Most any o' us are willin' t' let bygones be bygones before we git a square from home on a zero mornin', fer ther's somethin' about a cold wave that makes us want t' warm up t' th' first feller we meet. We jest seem t' feel that we must release ever'thing on our minds that's pleasant an' frothy, says Abe Martin, in the Indianapolis News.

Around th' grocery stove, in th' close, ill-smellin' depot, in th' stuffy crowded car, or wherever folks are wont t' huddle, like marooned sailors, in zero weather, we find th' best o' fellowship. We hear o' ole winters in th' seventies; we hear a lively exchange o' views on th' probable extent o' th' cold weather; we learn th' inner workin's o' th' homes o' others; we're brought face t' face with resurrected overcoats an' muffs o' doubtful vintage.

We gather highly illuminative information regardin' th' respective claims o' th' various heatin' systems; we learn valuable facts about th' heat units o' this coal or that; we find out who gits up first in th' homes of others; we hear pitiful stories o' destitution 'n how th' pumps an' water pipes have stood th' sudden drop in temperature; we learn th' thickness of our neighbors' underwear, an' almost allus there's somebuddy in th' crowd who has jest received a letter from a friend in Floridy an' we gain much interestin' information about th' climatic conditions in th' Southland.

"We burned twenty-one tons o' coal so fer an' we have t' live in th' dinin' room," says th' blustery little man, with an icicle danglin' from his goatee.

"We heat our house fine an' we're in our seventh ton o' coal," says th' tall, faithful clerk with a purple nose.

"I let my wife run th' furnace," says the frail bookkeeper with watery eyes.

"Th' only trouble we have is shootin' hot air in a southwest bedroom," says a tall man o' commandin' appearance an' buckled overshoes.

"I stayed at Aunt Ella's house last night. She has' th' steamed heat an' her house is jest like toast," says th' narrow-g>ged stenographer, with bare powdered throat, transparent shius an' nondescr>pt coat muff.

"If you're goin' t' heat a house, you've got t' burn coal. I don't care whether it's steam or hot water or hot air, you've got t' loosen up an' pile on th' coal. I never knowed that till this winter. We used t' spend our winter evenin's in th' nickel the-aters," says a round, positive feller, wearin' an ole reversible ulster.

"Our friend is right. You've got t' have a fire. You can't put any o' that economical stuff over on a furnace. No economical wife ever made a good cup o' coffee. There's two things you've got t' use liberally if you want results, an' them's coal an' coffee," says a fierce lookin' man with thin red whiskers an' a prehistoric fur cap.

But zero weather clumps an' crowds are allus friendly, fer ther' seems t' be somethin' in th' cold, bitin' winds that warns us t' keep off o' politics an' confine our observations t' th' more homely topics.

Speed Was Justified.

Police magistrates have heard that stereotyped excuse of speeders—that something must be wrong with their speedometer—so often when they are haled to court for stepping too hard on the gas that they welcome any new stuff, relates a New York correspondent. "You are charged with speeding 28 miles an hour," said the magistrate of the traffic court to a roadburner. "That, sir, is a very dangerous speed. Death and disaster lurk where a motorist travels with such disregard of the law." "Now, judge," said the man at the bar, looking into the eyes of the magistrate like a spanked baby waiting for the next blow. "I had heard where I could buy some sugar, and I was in a hurry to get there." There wasn't much the magistrate could do in the face of that, so he fined the defendant $25.

Alaska Natives Like Taxis.

High, white-topped shoes and silk and satin party gowns, worn by native Alaskans, are cited by J. L. McPherson of the Seattle chamber of commerce as proof of the prosperity being enjoyed by the residents of that territory.

Mr. McPherson, who has returned from a six weeks' trip to Alaska, says that the present fad of the Ketchikan natives is taxi riding at a cost of $3 an hour, according to the Seattle Post-Intelligencer. The seven taxicabs recently installed at Ketchikan are doing a land office business, he says. To bid good-by to a native departing on one of the boats, an entire family of native friends rode down to the dock, alighted and shook hands with him, wishing him a good voyage, re-entered their motor car and the head of the family airily waved to the chauffeur, "Home, James."

With their rapidly acquired taste for the latest styles in clothing, Mr. McPherson says, has come a liberal patronage of the bootblack by both the men and women, much to the delight of the bootblack.

An Old Custom.

At Lloyd's, the marine insurance exchange in London, a bell is tolled when a ship is reported lost, or when a ship long overdue and considered lost unexpectedly reaches port. The bell used at Lloyd's belonged to the ship Lutine, which was wrecked near the Zuyder Zee in 1799, while taking specie from English merchants to Hamburg. When a ship is "posted" as lost the old bell is tolled once, and on that day the insurance money is payable and all who were on the ship are considered legally dead. In the unusual event of a vessel arriving in port after being posted as lost, the bell is tolled twice, and the announcement is cried aloud by an official in uniform.

The Great Crises.

The great crises of life are often like a bolt out of the blue of a summer day; there is not a moment for preparation. In such crises all that a man has been doing in the way of preparation suddenly bears fruit. He often acts instinctively; he does that which he is in the habit of doing and, because he is in the habit of doing his best and all his instincts prompt him to put forth the best that is in him, he seizes the golden moment and does not discover until afterward that it was golden.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

We eat too much meat which clogs Kidneys, then the Back hurts

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys, and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble

DEFENDS THE WORKERS.

Col. Repington Subjected to Some Telling Criticism.

Victor F. James, of Small Heath, Birmingham, a British munitions worker, writes the New York Times an indignant reply to assertions previously made in the same journal by Col. Repington, the war critic. Repington claimed that many men who should be in khaki were engaged in munitions-making, and that labor was not doing its full "bit." He advocated a "real comb-out of factories and munitions works."

James writes a gripping and inspiring letter. He denounces Repington's assertions as "mischievous libels," and says he writes to express "the indignation it has caused among my fellow-workers." The story he tells of the service and sacrifice of the British workman is one worthy of a place in the annals of war achievement. He says:

"The statement that the men here are deliberately limiting the output of munitions is really wicked. We are not without our labor disputes, but during the war there has been a ready disposition on both sides to settle these quickly for the sake of those in the trenches. At my factory most of the departments have worked twelve hours daily for over two years with real enthusiasm, and never a grumble at Sunday work, and when we take it into consideration that many of these men have been used to a more or less time-free and easy life in small businesses of their own, also that many are over fifty years of age, their behaviour is most creditable."

Observing that he is forbidden to give information as to the numbers of men employed, Mr. James adds: "But you can take it from me that the percentage of really fit, able-bodied fighting men not in the army is very small." And he tells something of the work being done by crippled men and patriotic women. Alluding to Repington's caustic references to "the comparatively small number of women whom you see in mourning," this British workman rightly waxes warm. "One cannot," he says, "go down any street in any town without seeing legless and armless men and women in mourning. Many women here do not care to advertise their losses and be perpetually reminded of them by sympathizers, therefore their mourning is not conspicuous." Mr. James scores when he reminds Col. Repington that "one must not make false conclusions from observations taken in a dinner-hour crowd in the west end of London, or listen to idle theories and rumors emanating from clubrooms." Visit the grimy inland cities and realize how wholeheartedly we are out for victory and how earnest everyone is to attain that end, then one will see how misleading and thoughtless Col. Repington's article is."

The British workman has made out a telling case. In so far as he expresses the spirit and purpose of his comrades, he makes a sorry spectacle of the caustic military critic whose war service is empty and negligible in comparison with the laborer he presumes to lecture.

Stock Food Substitutes.

In the search for substitutes for live stock food a German scientist made analytical tests of materials suggested for the purpose. He found dried rhubarb leaves better than hay as a fodder for hogs; kelp may be fed to cattle and pigs, but it has little nutritive value; ground straw, which is selling at from 28 to 50 marks the quintal, is not good for any animal, nor are ground pea pods. He advises against cornstalks and cobs. The seeds of beets are nutritive, those of parsley too exciting, those of raisins, if ground before the oil is extracted, are as good as hay. Oil cakes made from beech or other nuts are excellent for cattle.

Strategic Economy.

"So you are tending your own furnace?"

"Yes," replied Mr. Meekton. "And I rather like it. When Henrietta starts an argument it is something of a convenience to go down cellar and rattle things around a bit."

Period of Rest Coming.

See the studious young man. How solemn he is. His brow overhangs like the back of a snapping turtle, and he is as ominous as the first mutterings of an earthquake. He burns the midnight oil in great quantities, poring over ponderous tomes until he is worn almost to skin and bones. But never mind, he will presently have ample opportunity to rest. In a short while he will be admitted to the bar, and after that he will not have anything to do

SLUGGISH LIVER CAUSES LOTS OF TROUBLE

When the liver becomes sluggish it is an indication that the bowels are not working properly, and if they do not move regularly many complications are liable to set in.

Constipation, sick headache, bilious headache, jaundice, heartburn, water brash, catarrh of the stomach, etc., all come from a disordered liver.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are a specific for all disease or disorders arising from a slow, sluggish, lazy or torpid liver, and they have been universally used throughout Canada for over 20 years with the greatest success.

Mrs. W. A. Harrison, 7 Poplar Grove, Halifax, N.S., writes: "I take pleasure in writing you concerning the great good I have received by using Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills for a sluggish liver. When my liver got bad I would have severe headaches, but after using a couple of vials of your pills, I have not been bothered any more."

THE AMERICAN WAY.

(Ottawa Journal.)

The new United States sedition bill provides penalties of twenty years' imprisonment and $10,000 fine for breach of the prohibition of language and actions of disloyalty or obstruction of war efforts. Why doesn't Canada go to the root of some of its troubles by providing and imposing such penalties for seditious speech and action?

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Result of a Halloween Party

By RUTH GRAHAM

Clara Duncan lived a lonely life. Her mother was an invalid, and Clara's time was almost exclusively taken up attending to her wants. When Halloween was approaching Clara was invited to a gathering to be held on that evening at the house of one of her intimate friends, Edna Stewart, but her mother was too weak to admit of her accepting the invitation. This was a great disappointment to the girl, who after a previous Halloween party had listened to the recitals concerning the gathering from which two different engagements had resulted.

"Well," said Clara to herself, "if I must wait to meet my fate at a Halloween party I shall die an old maid, I suppose."

The party convened at the Stewart home "on the hill," as the principal residence portion of the town was called, in the afternoon. The guests were to remain for dinner, after which they were to tell ghost stories by the firelight and occupy themselves with other appropriate Halloween specialties. The day was a typical October one, and when night fell Clara thought of the party of young persons sitting around the fireplace listening to the ghost stories. Going to see if her mother wanted anything, she found her looking comparatively well.

"Clara," said the invalid, "I am feeling so well this evening that I can spare you. Go up to the Stewarts and join in the festivities. Get what pleasure there is left of the gathering and don't hurry home. You'd better take the electric light."

Midway between her home and the Stewarts stood a vacant house. It had been prepared for a bride and groom, but just before they were to have been married some trouble arose between them and separated them.

Clara was obliged to pass this house while going to the Stewarts. The way was lonely and dimly lighted by a street lamp here and there. Just before reaching the deserted house she heard a footstep above and for a moment saw a man's figure coming toward her. The situation for a young girl was not a pleasant one. She could not tell whether the comer was of high or low degree.

It occurred to her to go into the yard of the deserted house and remain in darkness till he had passed. Standing beside a box tree that had been planted thirty years before, she waited. The man came on and stopped before the place where she was hiding. Clara, terrified, ran to the house, which was back some distance from the sidewalk, and up on to a rear porch. Peeping from her new hiding place, she caught a glimpse of the man coming across the street. She convulsively put her hand on the knob of a door to open it and was surprised at being able to do so. The wood had rotted away from the iron receptacle into which the bolt was shot.

The poor girl was less frightened at being alone in the deserted house than she would have been at facing the man who seemed to be bent on finding her. He had doubtless seen her enter the premises, and the house and its surroundings were lonely and deserted. There was barely enough light for her to see an opening through which she passed, and, feeling her way, her hand rested on a banister. Ascending a staircase, she saw the light of the sky through an open door and window and entered a room. There, trembling like an aspen, she crouched in a corner.

Meanwhile a wind arose, and the casements of the windows, which were loose, rattled, and the few blinds that had not been shaken off by other winds began to slam. Besides, the sky had become covered with clouds, and the poor girl could not see her hand before her face. She had heeded her mother's injunctions to bring an electric lamp and had it in a bag which she carried on her arm.

Putting out a hand, she felt a piece of furniture, but could not tell what it was. Taking her lamp from her bag, she flashed it.

She was standing before a bureau and looking straight into the mirror. In the mirror was a reflection of a man's head and shoulders.

A scream was suppressed at seeing not the face of a murderer, but a young man in evening dress. Moreover, the moment the lamp was flashed he smiled. In a twinkling Clara found herself not only free from her supposed danger, but protected from real or imaginary terrors.

"Don't be frightened," said the man quickly. "Aren't you Miss Clara Duncan?"

"Yes."

"I'm Fred Stewart. I came home in time for my sister's Halloween party. Some one telephoned from your house that you had started to come up the hill, and I thought I would meet you on the way. I fancied I saw a woman come in here and that it might be you, so I"—

"Oh, I am so thankful!" interposed Clara. "For heaven's sake take me out of here."

Whether Clara collapsed in his arms or not neither of them ever told. At any rate, she leaned heavily upon him as they left the house, he illuminating the way with the electric lamp, and later they appeared at the young man's home, where they found the party bobbing for apples.

The only engagement that resulted from that Halloween gathering was that of Clara Duncan and Fred Stewart.

Expect New Comet.

A spectacle in the sidereal heavens of surpassing brilliancy may be expected the coming spring if the predictions of cometary observers are verified. Not since the great comet of 1858, which aroused a vast deal of interest, has an appearance in the sky equaled what is confidently expected for 1918. The return of Halley's comet in 1910, which had anxiously been awaited, did not come up to what had been predicted and expected, and since 1882 there has not been any especially brilliant comet seen. The newcomer is described as a gigantic comet, outclassing in size and brilliancy all those seen in modern times. It will be a thing of glory in the northwestern sky throughout the spring, astronomers say, probably remaining visible for three months, being at its brightest in June. It is now speeding toward the sun at an approximate rate of 1,134,246 miles a day.

An Advertisement.

A recent advertisement contains the following: "If the gentleman who keeps the boot shop with the red head will return the umbrella of a young lady with whalebone ribs and an iron handle to the slate-roofed grocer's shop he will hear of something to his advantage, as the same is the gift of a deceased mother now no more with the name engraved upon it."

His Old Man.

"Look here, Charlie," said one young collegian to another who had been asked to run his eye over a letter which his friend had written to his father in which there was the inevitable request for money, "you have spelled jug g-u-g."

"I know," said Charlie, "but you see I need the cash, and don't want the old man to think I'm putting on airs. That's how he spells it."

Two Splendid Things

One is plenty of open-air exercise.

If you can't get all of that you should, it's all the more important that you should have the other tried-and-true remedy for a torpid liver and bowels that don't act freely and naturally.

Take one pill every night; more only when you're sure it's necessary.

FOOD ORDERS ARE OBSERVED

Meatless and Wheatless Menu in Connection With Lord Mayor's Annual Banquet at Mansion House.

At last the gaunt figure of famine has stalked into the Mansion House and edited the menu of the lord mayor's banquet. There, everybody who knows anything about English history or about good eating, knows that the center, the very palate, of gourmandise is situated, according to a London correspondent.

The British empire is ransacked for edibles and potables to furnish forth this aldermanic holiday. And when the occasion's star guest, the premier, rises to shake the pillars of the world with his address, the guests are often in such a state of torpor that they have to scan the morning papers to find out what he really said. But war has changed all that. When the time for this year's banquet approached, London's sensational press began to shout for a war menu so loudly that his lordship had to come out and assure the reporters of the meatlessness and wheatlessness of the coming feast. Another of England's glories vanished!

Sewing Machines in Arabia.

The sale of sewing machines in Arabia has increased since the war began, owing in part to the demand of Red Cross organizations. A recent shipment of 600 American machines, according to a correspondent, will be disposed of as follows: One hundred in Aden, 200 in Abyssinia, 100 in Red Sea ports and 200 in the Persian Gulf district. There is also an increased demand on the part of the natives. Germany formerly supplied the territory with cheap machines, but the stocks of these are low, and American products now lead. Foot-power sewing machines are in growing preference over the hand-operated type, but electrically-driven machines cannot be sold, as there is no general electric service plant in Aden. Dust and rust are difficulties experienced in the use of the machines in the Arabian climate.

KIDNEY DISEASE OVERCOME.

Mr. James Prouse, cattle dealer, Sheho, Sask., writes: "For about ten years I suffered from kidney disease; at times I was bad with backache, and derangements of the digestive organs. During that time I was treated by four different doctors. One day I read in Dr. Chase's Almanac about the Kidney-Liver Pills and began to use them. Altogether I used six boxes. All I need say is that I feel well now and attribute this condition to the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills."

Famous Gainsborough.

Gainsborough's famous painting, "Blue Boy," remains in the Hearn family, Mrs. Clarkson Cowl, the eldest daughter of the late Mr. Hearn, paying $38,000 for it after a series of spirited bids at the closing night of the sale of Hearn pictures. The ballroom of the Hotel Plaza was crowded when the painting, which is said to be the original by Thomas Gainsborough, was auctioned, a score of thousand-dollar bidders dwindling to a few as Thomas E. Kirby, the auctioneer, sang out the soaring figures.

Mrs. Cowl also purchased Turner's "Fitz Alan Chapel" at a price of $20,500. The presence of high bidders added zest to the sale, and the enthusiasm of the audience rose as each masterpiece came under the auctioneer's hammer. Ninety-two old masters were represented, netting $209,975, which, added to the amount raised on the contemporary American and European paintings, brought the grand total up to $715,108, one of the biggest sales in the history of recent exhibits.

British Humor.

The number of consulting physicians in England has become so reduced as a result of mobilization and overwork on the part of those not called to active duty, owing to age, etc., that invalids and those subject to everyday maladies are requested to refrain from sending for the doctor for "every little ache and pain," this privilege being permitted only in extreme cases.

"It is desired that the public in general, in order to simplify medical services, take the greatest of care possible in order to prevent carelessly contracting diseases that require long, difficult and expensive courses of treatment.

"It will be a proof of patriotism on the part of every one during the war to content themselves with the less serious complaints, such as influenza, neuralgia, headache and hysteria, these latter being easily relieved by means of a few cheery words."

Griddle cakes may be made of middlings.

Army Medical Department.

There are now more than 13,900 officers engaged in the work of the medical department of the army, including regular army officers and the four officers' reserve corps—medical, dental, veterinary and sanitary—connected with the work under Surgeon General Gorgas, says the Medical Journal. It is estimated that at least 24,000 physicians will be included in the personnel of the department when full strength is reached. Every step in caring for the physical welfare of the soldiers from the time they are sworn into service until they are discharged comes under the medical department. In this work is included inspection of foods to be served soldiers, sanitation, care of the sick and wounded, the operation of field base and convalescent hospitals, "re-education" of the permanently crippled, handling the supplies for all this work, etc. The total number of hospital beds will be on a basis of 25 per cent of the strength of the army.

Don't Flatter Yourself.

"Somehow I was always different from other people," is a common saying among men, even among those who lay no claim to any special virtue, observes Los Angeles Times. Indeed, the statement is often made by those who pretend to be ashamed of their vices, but who are really almost proud of them. To feel like that and to admit it is only a confession of the egotism common to humanity. Whoever you are, you are only different from others in personality. You belong to the race and probably are neither better nor worse than any one of the vast majority. Everybody thinks that he is different from all the rest. He ain't!

NOTHING LIKE PHOSPHATE TO INCREASE STRENGTH, VIGOR AND NERVE FORCE

ORDINARY BITRO-PHOSPHATE WILL DOUBLE THE STRENGTH OF WEAK DELICATE, NERVOUS PEOPLE IN TWO WEEKS' TIME IN MANY INSTANCES.

Weak nerves quickly reduce the strong and robust to an extremely pitiable condition and rob men and women of all the joys of life. Slowly and stealthily the health is destroyed, the poor sufferer only realizing the magnitude of his ailment when faulty memory, sleeplessness, indecision, lack of energy or other unmistakable symptoms indicate weak nerves. Then it is a serious and dangerous mistake to resort to the use of so-called tonics, alcoholic or drug stimulants.

Weak and exhausted nerves need food and nourishment—not stimulants that lash them into temporary activity. The food and nourishment advised by present day physicians is just one 5-grain tablet of pure bitro-phosphate taken during or immediately after each meal. Simple advice, but its soundness has been proven over and over again.

Moreover the genuine standard bitro-phosphate is inexpensive and is sold by McDermid & Jury and most all good druggists under a binding guarantee of satisfaction or money back.

To Save Tin Now Wasted.

A small electric furnace has been installed and operation begun on the volatilization of tin from scrap at the Northwest experiment station of the United States bureau of mines at Seattle, Wash., says the Engineering and Mining Journal. An extensive series of experiments will be carried out there with the idea of saving the tin now wasted in discarded containers and other forms of scraps.

Some Figures About Conditions In Great Britain.

In Great Britain, as in Canada, the war has been accompanied, since the first year of shock and uncertainty, by more than normal prosperity in many departments of trade and industry. "The Economist," in its analysis of the latest reports of 350 British industrial companies of a representative kind, shows that they yielded last year an average increase of 10½ per cent. in profits above the amount of the previous fear, and 39½ per cent. more than two years ago. The general movement of industrial profits is thus described: "First there is the slight decline owing to the first effects of war. Then, in the second year, record prices are made, but by the third year the excess profits duty has come to check the rate of increase to a considerable extent."

The average amount put aside for depreciation and reserves in this group of industries last year was 38.6 per cent.; a rate so high that in many cases it is probably a form of profit concealment. The brewing business has been specially lucrative, and stands near the head of the list. The London Daily Chronicle reports that 86 companies present an increase of nearly 50 per cent. in profits during the three war years over the three pre-war years' average, despite liberal allowances for depreciation, repairs, and renewals. A number of breweries which were weak and failing before the war have been restored to financial health. The gross profits of four of the largest firms are given as follows: Allsopp's, £239,700 last year, against £68,100 in the year before the war; Ind, Coope & Co., £204,700 and £94,100, respectively; Watny, Coomb, Reid's, £1,112,900 and £904,200, respectively; Salt & Co., £98,100 and £20,300, respectively. Of the whole number of 84 brewing companies, 27 are paying the highest rate of ordinary dividends during the whole of their career, while many others give the best returns for ten, twelve, or fourteen years. Several have begun to capitalize their reserves by issuing increases of ordinary shares so as to keep down the rates of dividend.

The prosperity of British banks has been so enhanced by the war that deposits have increased from £740,000,000 in 1913 to £1,265,000,000 in 1917, and six of the larger institutions have increased their dividends.

summers occupy its cheerful wards and many others in the convalescent stage, clad in hospital pale blue are walking about the spacious grounds. The hospital proper occupies Mossley House, the former home of Dr. Edmund Knowles Muspratt, a noted authority on chemistry and one of Liverpool's leading citizens, who when he heard that the Americans wanted it gladly turned it over to them. It occupies the highest elevation in the city. A typical old gothic style English town house, it stands in the centre of seven acres of beautiful grounds, the flower gardens of which are rapidly being converted into plots for raising vegetables. An American flag, flying from the tall staff in front of the grounds can be seen a great distance, and assists visitors to find the place.

A Voiceless Mule.

The bray of the army mule is to be heard no longer in France. French veterinarians are extracting the bray and after that is done the nearest a mule can come to making a noise is to wheeze. A slight surgical operation on the nose removes the hee-haw which sounded like an imitation of Hun shells. The brayless mule is less dangerous, for it cannot warn the enemy of its nearness, but removing the hee-haw takes all the romance out of a mule.

Mother and Children Had Awful Coughs

WERE CURED BY DR. WOOD'S
NORWAY PINE SYRUP

Mrs. Arthur Appleyard, Novar, Ont., writes: "This past winter my children and I had awful colds and coughs which we got by being in drafts. I tried a number of different remedies for us, but got no relief. I thought I would try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and I found it a most excellent and sure cure. It gave relief to the tickling in the throat, and stopped the cough, and with a few bottles we were all cured."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is a remedy that has been on the market for over twenty-five years, and we can recommend it as being without doubt, the best cure for coughs and colds that you can posibly procure.

There are a lot of imitations on the market, so when you ask for "Dr. Wood's" see that you get it. Put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c and 50c; manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

GIRL'S COAT.

Coats for young girls show more fitted lines this season than last, for most of them are belted and many have yokes of some kind. A very charming style is shown in No. 8736. It has a straight shoulder yoke across the front and back, and the lower section of the coat is gored so that it fits the yoke without gathers. It is not the least bit narrow looking, however, for it widens toward the lower edge and hangs in full ripples. A tiny roll collar and cuffs of moire silk add a smart touch. The coat may hang straight, or, if preferred, the narrow, stitched belt run through bound slots may be used to draw it in at the waistline.

The girl's coat pattern No. 8736 is cut in five sizes, 6 to 14 years. As on the figure the 8 year size requires 2⅝ yards of 36 inch or 1⅞ yards of 54 inch material, with ⅜ yard 36 inch contrasting material. Price

This Pattern Can Be Obtained From the Examiner Office on Payment of 15 Cents.

VOICES MUST BE PLEASANT

Hospital Nurses Undergo Course of Training in Some Institutions to Cultivate Refined Speech.

"If the success or failure of a physician is, in some cases as least, determined by his tongue, how much more important is this matter of speech to the nurse, who must be constantly with the patient, and whose every look and gesture are watched—targets for criticism, silent or open," writes Dr. Irving W. Voorhees in the Nurse. "It is said that in some hospitals this question of refined, pleasing speech has become a part of the nurse's course of training, and that she is demerited for disregard of the principles as set forth by her teachers. Although I have no personal knowledge of these hospitals, it is certainly a consummation devoutly to be wished that every one who comes into the sick room should know how to speak softly and agreeably."

Doctor Voorhees says European nations realize the importance of the nurse's voice and insist upon it far more than we do. And any woman who plans to become a hospital nurse and has not a pleasing voice already should start at once to cultivate one.

The sick are very sensitive to voices; the blind are especially affected by harsh voices, so much so that some wealthy blind men will not permit a person whose voice is not pleasant to come near them.

TORPEDOES ON FOUR WHEELS

Explosive Propelled Toward Enemy Trenches and Controlled by Means of Wires Attached to Works.

La Domenica Del Corriere, Italy, reports a new war device, the invention of an English engineer, Strafford Talbot. Literally, it is a torpedo on wheels which may be propelled toward the enemy trenches and controlled from the starting point by means of attached wires.

The explosive is mounted on a metallic box which rides on four wheels. Attached to the box is a contrivance consisting of a dynamo which propels the wheels. The entire machine is electrically controlled, permitting the explosion of the charge at the desired moment.

Two parallel wires connect the torpedo with the control station. These are carried on spools and unwind as the machine advances. The power is derived from accumulating batteries at the starting point. When it is desired to fire the charge all that is required is to push a button. According to the inventor the total cost of this contrivance is about $150.

What He Wants for "Plain Food."

Do you know this man, have you ever heard of him—the man who likes plain food? His tastes are of the simplest; a little clear soup yourself, clear consomme the color of pale sherry: Take a knuckle of veal and four pounds of lean beef . . . goes the sympathetic recipe. (Notice, you "take," you don't "buy.") "Fry, to a tender brown, carrots, onions," etc. So goes on this tender, delectable process until you finally "clarify." The dissolute cook spends upon the simmering, the frying, the clarifying, and the straining is not of course taken into account. "The man who likes plain food enjoys roasts of meat, joints and rib-roasts."—Exchange.

Chemistry Recognized Science.

Chemistry has been accorded an almost formal recognition as the science at the heart of modern warfare. The British ministry of reconstruction has pointed out that Germany selected the chemical industry for especial nurture in making its war preparations, especially that part of the industry dealing with coal tar derivatives, in which field the imperial government gradually won a temporary world monopoly. The minister of reconstruction has appointed a committee of six chemists to investigate the situation in England and to recommend a plan for making the British chemical industry self-sustaining and equal to any call upon it during and after the war.

WEATHER CHANGED HIS VIEWS

New Englander Allowed Blowing Over of Church Steeple by Hurricane to Influence His Wedding Plans.

The recent destruction by fire of a certain ancient New England meeting house has set the villagers to retelling an amusing anecdote connected with its partial demolition nearly a century ago, when it lost its steeple in a hurricane, says the Youth's Companion.

Deliberate and cautious lovemaking figures in many tales of rural New England; but surely in none of them does the hero show less impetuosity than the Amos of this story showed. For ten years he had courted his patient Eliza; at last he had proposed, had been accepted, and the wedding day was set. It dawned unpropitiously, with a howling gale blowing, which increased hourly in violence. At the appointed hour, nevertheless, the guests gathered at the home of the bride and waited for the bridegroom, but he did not appear.

The storm was truly terrific; indeed, the meeting house, just across the common, had already surrendered its steeple with a tremendous crash. The bride became hysterical and her brothers began to look worried. Ominous whispers ran about that if the great elm in front of Amos' door had blown down it must surely have crushed in the whole front of the house; perhaps Amos was killed or pinned under the wreck.

At last a party of anxious volunteers started forth, in the teeth of the tempest, to investigate. When they reached the farm the elm was still standing, and on the threshold, very much surprised, stood Amos. He had supposed that of course the wedding would be postponed.

"Well, now, when I woke up 'twas pouring guns and pitchforks, so to speak, and I says to myself, says I, 'I don't know 'bout this! I don't know!' After breakfast 'twas wuss; and says I to myself: 'I most know they'll put it off; I most know they will!' I had my eye on the meetin' house steeple, and I could see 'twas swaying considerable. 'I know they'd orter put it off,' says I to myself, 'but then, women is so onreasonable maybe they won't.' I kep' my eye on the meetin' house steeple, and says I: 'If she goes, I don't; and if she don't, I do.'

"She swung and she swayed and she kind of hung in the wind, and then, jest as I was gettin' my boots on to start, over she went! And, says I to myself: 'That's a clear showing, if ever there was one; and here I stay!

Even a woman couldn't say a word ourselves stand up again a gale when a meetin' house steeple can't. No, sir,' says I to myself, 'there ain't a mile of doubt about it; this weather is onsuitable for weddings!'"

Nevertheless, he was imperatively persuaded to come and be married without waiting for it to clear up.

No Master and Man.

(London Daily Mail.)

We have frequently urged that the old idea of master and man is now wholly obsolete that capital and labour need one another; that prejudices of class must be laid aside by both sides; and that employers and workers must join hands on the sound basis that the highest possible wages in return for the greatest possible output is the key to industrial peace and national prosperity. There are agitators in the labour world who do not want harmony. And, on the other side, there are still stupid or stingy employers, full of feudal ideas, who do not yet realize that the conclusion of this war has brought into existence a new industrial order.

Hindenburg's Forces Have Now Captured Bailleul

Three Picked Divisions Used Against Stronghold

BRITISH HAVE TAKEN UP NEW POSITIONS NORTH OF BAILLEUL AND WULVERGHEM

Germans Succeeded in Carrying the High Ground Southeast of Bailleul and Haig's Troops Have Fallen Back to New Positions Leaving Bailleul in Enemy Hands--Bailleul is the First German Oejective to Fall--Position Guards the Ypres Salient.

BRITISH POSITIONS ARE ENDANGERED

LONDON, April 16.— The Germans have captured Bailleul on the northern battle front, the War Office announces. The British have fallen back to new positions north of Bailleul and Wulverghem.

The statement reads:

Yesterday evening, preceded by an intense bombardment, the enemy launched very heavy attacks against our positions between Bailleul and Neuve Eglise. The assault was delivered by three picked German divisions which had not been previously engaged in battle and it succeeded, after a fierce and bitter struggle, in carrying the high ground south-east and east of Bailleul, known as Mount De Lille and Revetsberg. Our troops on the front have fallen back to new positions to the north of Bailleul and Wulverghem. Bailleul has fallen into the enemy's hands.

FRESH ATTACKS.

This morning fresh German attacks are developing in the neighbourhood of Wytschaete. Early this morning the enemy also attacked south-west of Vieux Berquin, under heavy artillery and trench mortar fire, but was repulsed. A number of prisoners were taken by us during the night in a successful minor enterprise south-east of Robecq. On the remainder of the British front there was nothing of special interest to report.

BAILLEUL IS AN IMPORTANT POSITION

Bailleul is the first of the main geographical objectives of the German drive to fall. It is located on the main Armentieres - Hazenbrouck railway, midway between the two cities. It is three and a half miles west of Neuve-Eglise, which also is now in German hands. The way now appears to be open west to Hazenbrouck, a most important railway and highway centre in Flanders, and northwards to Ypres, around the western edge of the Messines ridge. Bailleul before the war was a town of about 12,000 people. It is of excellent construction, according to Gazetteers. Recently the city was set fire and half of it destroyed.

THE BRITISH LINE IS ENDANGERED

Bailleul has been the scene of the most desperate fighting in the entire Flanders drive. It was the stronghold from which the British hurled back the Germans from the northern edge of the Flanders salient. It guarded the entire Ypres salient from the south and its fall endangers British positions in Ypres on the Messines ridge and in Zennebeke, south-east of Robecq (a mile and a half south of St. Venant).

Both Parties Went Into Caucus This Morning As Preliminary To Secret Session To-morrow

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, April 16.—Both the Government and the Opposition went into caucus this morning as a preliminary to a secret session of the House which is to be held to-morrow. Both conferences were serious and lengthy affair and no statement for the public emanated from either. It is understood that the Government has made to its followers certain proposals for the opening up of the Military Service Act and for the securing of more men as speedily as possible.

ORDER-IN-COUNCIL.

However, whatever amendments the government decides upon will in all probability be made by virture of the War Measures Act and passed by Order-in-Council to be afterwards ratified by Parliament. The Government believes it has sufficient mandate for such action in the present crisis.

The military authorities, it is stated, favour abolition of exemptions in the first class and the drafting of everyone medically fit.

CO-OPERATION WANTED.

There is no doubt that one of the purposes of to-morrow's secret session is to endeavour to enlist the co-operation or approval of the Opposition to the Government's plans, though from a superficial view of the situation it is difficult to see how the party which in the first place opposed the Military Service Act will favour an intensification of its provisions. No doubt one of the purposes of the Government's proposed amendments is to sweep away number of things in the Act as it at present stands, which renders it slow of application. To any curtailment of technical advantage given by the Act as it at present stands, there is sure to be opposition from the Quebec members.

LARGE CROWDS ATTEND SPRING FAIR

If the success of the opening night of the Spring Fair is an indication of what the week's success will be the ladies in charge will have reason to congratulate themselves everlastingly. Starting at 9 o'clock in the morning the crowd grew as the day wore on until by supper time, when hundreds enjoyed the dainty meal provided, the hall was filled with well pleased purchasers.

ONE ATTRACTION.

One attraction which is meeting with great success is the raffle of the doll by Miss McFadden, Miss Grace Primeau and Miss Rutherford. The little folk are anxious over the outcome of this feature.

ENGLAND.

Heintzman & Co., with their usual enterprise, have fitted up a charming booth representing England, and here all the latest music and victrola records keep the hall lively. The Company gave the use of a piano to Miss Hurley last night, when her three choruses of the Sodality girls sang.

'PHONE AND CHECK DEPARTMENT.

No need has been neglected for the visitors as a checking and telephone department, of which Miss Florence Leahy is in charge, has been installed.

MENU TO-DAY.

The menu to-day is strictly in accordance with food regulations and the ladies are sparing no pains to make it worth while to come.

GERMANY CAN STILL MUSTER A COLOSSAL FORCE

(United Press Service.)
(By Wm. Phillip Simms.)

Ten O'Clock Despatch:

With the British Army in France, April 16. — Beaten to a standstill before Amiens and blocked on the road towards Hazebrouck, where will Hindenburg start next?

He must strike again or acknowledge his offensive broken, which nobody here pretends is the case. British fighters admit the allies must withstand further blows similar to this last one before the war's great crisis is over.

About 120 enemy divisions (1,440,000 men) have already been identified on the Somme in the fighting in this neighborhood.

This does not mean that they are unable to fight further as many have but few losses. With their united divisions the German masses are still colossal. Fresh troops continue to arrive from Russia and Roumania.

200 DIVISIONS.

Hindenburg has well over 200 divisions (2,400,000 men) on the western front. Reliable authorities in Switzerland told me the German forces would reach 220 divisions (2,640,000 men) before a definite decline.

TRANSPORTATION PROBLEMS.

The prisoners admit that the Germans' great difficulty is in bringing up the guns and material. The British artillery has killed many of the horses and the badly cratered roads are frequently impassable for motors, necessitating rebuilding. Many of the bridges must also be reconstructed and narrow guage railroads built.

Desultory fighting continues on the northern and the southern end of the battle fronts.

German artillerymen are busy shelling Amiens by day and bombarding it by night but not heavily, as Von der Marwitz probably hopes to establish his headquarters there, and does not wish to destroy it totally.

The German artillery is less noisy, prisoners declare, owing to the difficulties in supplying ammunition.

Lacking a wind to dry the ground Hindenburg, never a "mud horse," probably is praying to the German God for sunshine.

Attacking Heavily

Heavy Trench Mortar Bombardment Preceded the Capture of Bailleul

CONSIDERABLE SHELLING

Two O'Clock Despatch:

(United Press Service.)
(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, April 16.—The Germans are in Bailleul. Von Stettin's fresh troops attacked from the south, while Von Carlowitz hurled storm troops northward past the city on the east, simultaneously assaulting Le Havetsberg Heights, which are the southernmost bastions of a conglomeration of protuberances rising out of the otherwise pancake-like lowlands of Flanders. Several divisions swept against Bailleul itself.

Rushing up reinforcements Hindenburg is attacking heavily from near Merville to Neuve-Eglise.

A heavy trench mortar bombardment preceded the capture of Bailleul. The attacking forces included a German Alpine corps, 117th and eleventh divisions. At least three divisions followed up the German barrage between Bailleul and Neuve Eglise, before which the British lines were bent, but not broken. Bailleul was taken during the night. With it fell Le Havetsberg Ridge between Bailleul and Neuve-Eglise.

ATTACK FOLLOWED UP.

North of Merville the enemy attempted to storm the British positions on the east of Nieppe Forest. The attacking forces on the southern flank were caught under British shell fire and failed to progress. On the northern flank they developed an attack fiercely, but were smashed before they reached their objectives and thrown back on Bailleul. The fighting began early in the night, which was of pitchy blackness.

On the Somme battle front Von Marwitz artillery is speeding up, showing that the German second army is bristling with guns. There is considerable shelling of villages behind the British front.

Route For The Automobile Procession

The automobile procession which will be held on Tuesday, April 16th, will start at 7.30 p.m. The cars will line up along Simcoe street, down Water street to the Market Place, and to te corner of Charlotte and George streets. The course of the procession will be from the corner of Charlotte and George streets west on Charlotte to Park, north on Park to Hunter, east on Hunter to George, north on George to Antrim, east on Antrim to Water, north on Water to Smith, west on Smith to George, south on George to London, west on London to Aylmer, and south on Aylmer to McDonnel street. Here the procession will divide. The first part will proceed east on McDonnel to George, south on George to Murray, east on Murray to the Armouries. The second half will proceed south from McDonnel and Aylmer to Murray, east on Murray to George, where the cars will remain on the south side of Murray street, opposite the Armouries, for the formal opening of the Motor Show.

If you can decorate your car, and if not, come along and make this the largest and grandest parade ever seen in Peterboro, remembering that your efforts are all for Red Cross Work.

All cars should be lined up on Water street or Simcoe street not later than 7.50 that evening.

FRANK JENNE SAYS:

Of course your own car is the "one perfect car" but even then sometimes you have to "get out and get under," or do some of the necessary mechanical work necessary to keeping the car in good running order. It is then you need a suit of the combination overalls I sell to protect your clothing. "Come to me."

GERMANY IS PREPARED TO WASTE OVER MILLION LIVES IN PRESENT OFFENSIVE

Socialists Will Not Stand For the Reckless Use of "Cannon Fodder" Beyond the 1,500,000 Mark —Gains at Frightful Cost.

MILITARY MAD LEADERS

(United Press Service.)
(By Carl D. Groat.)

WASHINGTON, April 16.—Germany is preparing to waste more than one million lives in the west front offensive, according to information received here to-day. The Socialists and Militarist leaders are understood to have conferred before the drive began, reaching an understanding that the radicals would not interpose any objections so long as the casualties did not exceed 1,500,000. But beyond that the Socialists were not prepared to stand for the reckless use of "cannon fodder," is was said.

WARN GERMANY.

The Military leaders were understood to have pledged that they could achieve their purpose without increasing such casualties, though lately they have been inclined to warn Germany that all gains of territory have been at a frightful cost. The nation was informed that the offensive would succeed and that the bloody dregs of plundering would be released. Behind these pledges lies the explanation of the sudden scrapping of peace talk, according to advices here.

Hindenburg and his followers were cocksure in their talk that the British army would be annihilated and Germany's path to peace—with annexations—would be accomplished.

The Government has positive information that, "staking everything" on a west front drive is no empty task with Germany. The use of men in waves—mowed down as grain before the reaper—is evidence of the Teuton programme. The fact that Germany does not object is due, it is now believed to a pre-offensive movement and the German belief in the military mad leaders that victory is ahead.

Germany has shunted aside the Reichstag resolution, "no annexation, no indemnities" quite openly now.

Zurich despatches to-day say the pan-German Bunshau revealed the stand.

THREATENED TO RESIGN.

Count Hertling, the paper said, threatened the Socialists that he would resign if that platform is followed. Thereupon the majority of factions accepted the Imperial government's plan which includes annexation of French territory, incorporation of the Belgium cost of Flanders into Germany, payment of a large war indemnity by the western powers to Germany. Incidentally it appears that Germany is hoping to collect indemnity from America, and her leaders are doing all in their power to make the Boches believe America's part in the war will be meagre.

Hertling is reported to have broken with Erzberger, the Canterist leader.

SATURDAY TAG DAY FOR G. W. V. A. RELIEF FUND

The commemoration of the third anniversary of the second battle of Ypres in Peterborough will be marked by the annual relief fund tag day of the Great War Veterans on Saturday followed by a church parade to St. John's Church on Sunday morning. At the meeting of the G. W. V. A. held last night arrangements were made for both these events.

The tag day on Saturday will, it is hoped, exceed the success of last year, which was a record-breaker. The campaign will be conducted not only in Peterborough but in Lakefield, Keene, Norwood and Havelock as well, as returned soldiers in these places are members of the Peterborough Branch of the G. W. V. A. A large number of ladies will assist the War Veterans in their efforts on Saturday, and with a big representation of the Veterans taking part there will be a small army of "taggers" at work. Attractive ribbon tags have been purchased, bearing an appropriate quotation from Lieut.-Col. McCrea's poem, "In Flanders Fields."

The public is asked to note that the money collected on Saturday is for relief work to relieve cases of distress among the families of veterans, of soldiers overseas, or of men who have died for Canada overseas. It is a noble object and one that deserves the heartiest support from the public. Saturday's campaign should surpass all previous records.

Clean-up In Civil Service

British Government Will See That All Eligible Men Are Weeded Out.

WILL ENFORCE ACT

(Canadian Press.)

London, via Reuter's/Ottawa agency, April 16.—In the House of Commons last night, Sir Auckland Geddes, the Minister of National Service, stated that the Government was determined to enforce the principle that no man over the present military age should be taken for service if the situation could be met by the calling up of men of military age now in the country. The age of 25 had been selected for a clean out in the civil service because above 25 there were men really indispensable from the viewpoint of war effort. This did not mean that civil servants over 25 were not being released as rapidly as possible. Certain government officers were considering the advisability of releasing all men fit for general service up to the age of 43.

THE SPRING FAIR IN FULL SWING

Many people visited the Spring Fair yesterday in the Market Hall, which has been transformed into a veritabe fairyland. In the evening especially it is very attractive with the gaily coloured booths, the handsome fancy work on sale, and the attendants all dressed in allied costumes.

In the Italian booth is some excellent fancy work all contributed by Italian residents of the city, their lace work being very fine. There is a great supply of children's and infants' clothing, which is being rapidly bought.

The Rummage sale brought many early shoppers yesterday. Indeed, before those in charge had their wares all exhibited there was a good crowd of buyers. Ladies' millinery, dresses, and ready-to-wear articles of every kind form a big stock. Don't miss the Spring Fair.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE JOHN CLANCY.

The funeral of the late John Clancy, who died yesterday as a result of injuries received at the Quaker Oats plant, will take place to-morrow morning at nine o'clock to the Immaculate Conception Church, thence to St. Peter's Cemetery. The Foresters will attend.

Sinn Fein Clubs Are Very Active

Numerous Meetings Held in Ireland to Protest Against Conscription

(Canadian Press.)

London, April 16.—In the House of Commons last night, the Hon. James Ian Macpherson, the Under Secretary for War, declined in the public interest to state the number of troops in Ireland. Up till December 31, 1917, Ulster had contributed over 58,000 recruits, he stated, while the rest of Ireland had given over 65,000.

MEETINGS OF PROTEST.

London, April 6.—Meetings to protest against conscription were held on Monday in one hundred parishes in Ireland. All classes of the population participated. The clergy took a leading part in all the meetings. Resolutions of protest are pouring in from public bodies and the Sinn Fein Clubs are very active.

NEW PLUMBING AND HEATING BUSINESS

Mr. William Jamieson, for many years in the employ of the Messrs. F. R. J. Macpherson Co., Limited, of this city, as foreman in the plumbing and heating departments, contemplates going into business in the city on his own account.

His numerous friends who have had business dealings with him, will wish him every success.

British Forces Were Unable To Withstand Shock

Special to the Examiner:

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, April 16.—The loss of the town of Bailleul, though serious, was not unexpected, for its strategical value could not compensate for the British lives it would cost to retain it in face of the terrible onslaughts the Germans were able to bring against it. After an intense bombardment by guns of all calibres, German Alpine corps and Bavarian divisions bore down on the defending army from an elevation to the east. The British lines were unable to stand the shock of the overwhelming numbers of fresh troops and fell back unbroken, in good order, to new positions, which are now being held.

LEAGUE MEETING.

Members of the Junior League of George street Methodist church are asked to meet at the church on Thursday evening at 7.30 p.m.

MERCHANTS ADVOCATE EARLIER CLOSING

Petition in Circulation Urging Closing at 5 o'clock. Is Being Well Signed.

With a view of assisting in the greater production campaign, whereby merchant and employee can avail themselves on the extra hour for gardening a petition is being circulated and largely signed for the closing of stores at 5 o'clock instead of 6, as is now the case. The petition also goes on to say that since adoption of the 9 hour day in factories many heads of families have their evening meal immediately after 5 o'clock, and that in many homes a second meal has to be prepared for those working in shops. It is expected the nine-hour for closing will go into effect shortly, and its advantages or disadvantages learned absolutely by experience. For the present it is understood it is only temporary..

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

TUESDAY, APRIL 16TH, 1918.

"BANDS OF BROTHERS."

"With our back to the wall, each one of us must fight to the end." Such was Sir Douglas Haig's thrilling call to his troops facing the German onslaught, and from the battle front the official messages and the stories of the war correspondents tell the wonderful story of how the British soldiers have answered the appeal. Magnificent as has been the fighting of the British in other engagements of the great war, their deeds in the past few days have exceeded all their records of the past, glorious as these have been. Many of these deeds were performed by troops upon which the first shock of the first drive on the St. Quentin front had fallen, men who after fighting for days against great odds, were taking from the firing line in the south and transferred to the northern section, where once again the tide of battle engulfed them, and, tired and battered as they were, they threw themselves again in the way of the foe. The story of how these war-worn men, some of whom have been fighting almost continuously since the beginning of the attack on March 21st, have fought during the past few days, is unsurpassed in the long and glorious annals of the British army. Philip Gibbs, to whom Britain should be ever grateful for giving to the world word paintings of these momentuous events on the battle front, describes the heroes as "bands of brothers having no surrender in their souls, and if they yield, it is in death." The allies cause will never be lost with men of that calibre in the path of the Hun.

CAN THIS BE?

The report that Charlie Chaplin, he of the funny feet, which have made millions of motion picture devotees laugh, has been drafted into the United States army, will bring home the horrors of war to thousands whose lives have so far been untouched by the spectacle of the world in arms. Many people who read with hearts unaffected of the departure to the front of the great in many lines of industry, will blanch in dismay to think that the man whose celluloid antics have so often caused amusement uncontrolled, is actually going to be hurled into the midst of the dangers of the battlefield. These faint-hearted ones should take courage. To a man who has faced thousands of hard flung pies, who has been run over by motor cycles, dragged behind automobiles, hit on the head innumerable times with a mallet, who has collided with hundreds of swing doors, experienced the onslaught of scores of plates of hot soup, and fallen down countless flights of stairs, the experiences of active service will seem as calm and peaceful as a Sunday school picnic. And, besides, the great Charlie need only don his comedy derby, pick up his trusty cane, and waddle along the parapet to cause the fiercest Hun to drop his rifle and grab his sides, which suggests the possibility of General Pershing's using the film comedian as a decoy. Huge bags of Prussians overcome with mirth at Charlie's antics might be captured before German efficiency suggested a counter offensive.

THE FUEL SITUATION.

In their dealing with the fuel problem, the members of the City Council, it is generally felt, are showing an amount of confidence and optimism that hardly seems justifiable, and that leaves the way open for a repetition of the conditions that existed during the winter just passed. The council's policy seems to be based upon two foundations, neither of which can be too heavily relied upon; first, that the people will not be guilty of hoarding more coal than they require, and, second, that there will be plenty of coal to meet all needs. As to the first premises there are already complaints that some citizens have stored away more than their normal supply. These complaints may be ill-founded but if the council is not going to keep a record it will be difficult to head off the charges, as well as to prevent the condition complained of.

The Examiner believes that the council should have a large enough supply of wood ready for next winter to prevent a fuel famine. There is no indication so far of any such intention on the part of the municipal authorities.

The Assistant Fuel Administrator for Ontario has written to a number of municipalities in the province advising them to secure adequate supplies of wood, intimating that the danger of a shortage of coal for next winter is not a remote one. In view of that fact, Peterboro should be ready for an emergency, but from present appearances will be far from being prepared.

A TIMELY WARNING.

There is in the resignation of Mr. N. F. R. Knight, Dominion Secretary of the Great War Veterans' Association, and in the message which accompanied his action a note of warning that should be heeded by returned soldiers everywhere. Mr. Knight's remark that the future of the Association depends upon the respect and good opinion of the general public, and in the members' ability to command the esteem of their fellow-citizens, is the simple truth, and will be endorsed by the great majority of War Veterans. Unfortunately among the returned men there is an element—Peterboro has fewer than most cities, it is true—who believe that they are a law unto themselves. Their service overseas they feel has put them in a position to do as they like when they come home. It is these few men that are endangering the existence of what should be one of the most powerful organizations in Canada.

The assault upon a Toronto man, who was apparently a loyal citizen, by a party of returned soldiers, is an instance of the kind referred to by Secretary Knight. No body of men, Veterans or otherwise, can be allowed to take the law into their own hands. We want no lynch law in Canada. If Spade, the victim of the tar and feather incident, had been behaving in a manner that was disloyal or seditious, the authorities could have been appealed to, and Magistrate Denison has shown that he knows what to do with men who have been guilty of such crimes. The attack was unwise and cowardly and the Great War Veterans of Toronto have shown good judgment in expressing regret at the incident and in repudiating any official connection with the outrage.

The universal condemnation by the press of Canada of such conduct, followed by the resignation of Mr Knight, who has been a tower of strength to the G.W.V.A., should have a good effect upon the Association. The majority of War Veterans are steady, responsible, law-abiding citizens, who are playing the game on their return to civilian life as they played it when they donned the khaki. They are anxious to be of service at home, as they were of service at the front, and their cause is being injured by what Mr. Knight calls "a few irresponsible Veterans." It is the duty of the G.W.V.A. to see that those members who seemed determined to act more like Bolsheiviki than Canadian citizens, are driven out of the membership of the Association.

Citizens generally are ready to help and encourage the ninety-nine per cent. of the Veterans who have earned the everlasting gratitude and support of the people of Canada. The Great War Veterans' Association will only have itself to blame if the one per cent. of irresponsibles are allowed to prejudice its organization, in the eyes of the public.

Mr. Knight's warning is timely, and coming from a man who has had the best interests of the Veterans at heart since the inception of the Association, cannot be ignored.

A mother hands her daughter a lot of advice she ought to have followed herself but didn't.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Review characterizes the story that Canadian soldiers at the front were told that if the Union Government was returned the 1st Contingent would be sent home, as "twaddle." The authority for the statement was an Original First home on furlough and the public generally will be inclined to believe the evidence of the man who was on the spot, rather than to accept the long range denial of the Review.

Our former fellow-citizen, Mr. Walter Davidson, now police magistrate at Calgary, continues to jolt the men who object to military service. The latest trio to appear before him were sentenced to five years.

Count Czernin's peace drive only resulted in the extinguishing of himself. He was probably banished, not because he lied, but because he did not lie artistically enough to fool anyone.

Germany intends to establish German courts in Belgium, which is equivalent to saying that King Albert's country will now be without justice.

The lengthy casualty lists of the past few days indicate that while the main forces of the Canadians have not taken part in the recent battles, some parts of Canada's army have been hotly engaged. There have been 1800 Canadian casualties in two weeks.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of Private Jack McGregor, died of wounds April 12, 1917, after Battle of Vimy Ridge. Formerly of 93rd Battalion:

Killed in action, our hearts are sore,
For king and country we miss him more.
His cheerful smile, his loving face,
No one on earth can fill his place.

We loved him, yes no tongue can tell,
How much we loved him and how well,
God loved him too, and thought it best
To take him to His home of rest.

The blow is bitter, the loss severe,
To part with one we loved so dear,
Our loss is great, we'll not complain,
But hope in heaven to meet again.

TEN GERMAN TRAWLERS HAVE BEEN SUNK

(Canadian Press.)

London, April 16— Ten German trawlers have been sunk by gunfire in the Cattegat, between Sweden and Denmark, the admiralty announces. Their crews were saved by the British ships. There were no British casualties. The operations in the Cattegat, the statement says, were undertaken by the commander-in-chief of the grand fleet.

SIGNIFICANT STATEMENT.

In view of the persistent rumors of possible naval activities by the Germans to accompany their land offensive, the news from London to-day showing that British naval forces have been operating in the Cattegat strait between Sweden and Denmark and have sunk ten German trawlers, is significant. Still more significant seems the form of the British announcement, which comes in a report from Vice-Admiral Sir David Beatty, commander-in-chief of the grand fleet. This would appear to indicate that the Grand fleet is out, and possibly presages some important developments. The operation was undertaken yesterday for the purpose of sweeping the Cattegat off mines, the report shows, and may still be in progress.

What further British effort, if any, the operation implies, cannot well be forecast. It is indicative of intensified British naval activities, at any rate, if not preliminary to far more important operations on the part of British naval forces.

DON'T COUGH YOUR THROAT SORE "NERVILINE" WILL CURE YOU QUICKLY

The Annoyance of a Bad Cough Soothed Away in One Day

RUB ON NERVILINE

Nothing so bad for the throat as coughing and nothing half so annoying as to have some one near by that is hacking, sneezing, or constantly clearing the throat.

Rub on Nerviline—it will save you all further pain and distress. Even one good rub with this soothing, penetrating remedy will bring the finest relief, will take out that rasping soreness, will stop that irritating tickle that makes you want to cough so much.

Nerviline isn't something new. It has a record of forty years of wonderful success behind it.

In rubbing on Nerviline you use something safe, reliable, and sure to cure. Its action is marvellous. The way it sinks in through the tissues—the way it penetrates to the seat of the congestion is really a wonder.

For chronic colds, coughs, or sore throat you can't beat this trusty old family remedy. Its name spells cure for any sort of pain in the joints or muscles. Try it for rheumatism, rub it on for sciatica or lumbago, test it out for neuralgia or headache—in every case you'll find amazing virtue and curative power in Nerviline.

Most families keep the large 25c bottle always handy on the shelf; at all dealers in medicine, or the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

La Grippe Epidemic Is Caused By Dust

The outbreak of la grippe which has ravaged Toronto, and counted many victims in Peterboro, with a consequent temporary depletion of office and factory staffs, is caused by germs blown about with the street dust, according to Dr. Hastings, M. H. O., of Toronto.

"It is an annual outbreak," he stated. "Few persons seem to have escaped this time. When the dust gets down a person's throat then the trouble begins. The dust and the germs we carry, which like the poor, we have always with us, together do the damage. The dust sets up an irritation in the mucous membranes, and a sore throat is the result."

Numerous cases have been reported in this city, and if Dr. Hastings is correct in attributing the cause to the dust that has been freed by the passing of the snow, street oiling might be regarded as an absolute necessity instead of the luxury that many persons have appraised it.

Fear of alimony is one reason some men are shy of marrying.

MUSIC AS RECREATION

Recreation is essential for the health and well-being of the family, and music is essential for a recreation that is totally relaxing and instructive.

Are you doing without music in the home because no one plays? In these days of marvelous inventions, that is no excuse for the lack of music.

There are people who have been wise enough to purchase player-pianos, organs and phonographs, slightly used, therefore cheaper, by securing them through Heintzman Hall, Peterborough, Royal Bank Buildings, Hunter Street—B. H. Britton, Manager. 'Phone 258.

Farms Baked Hard By Lack Of Rain

Several farmers stated this morning that the higher ground on their farms has become so hacked by the continued heat that plows make no impression on it. Rain is badly needed, otherwise the spring plowing will be seriously retarded. It is now the consensus of farm opinion that the fall wheat and clover has been almost completely killed by the succession of day and night heat and frost. Only in patches along the edges of the fields where the snow remained are there any signs of the crop of which so much was expected. In short, the season is beginning to assume a rather discouraging aspect; farmers beginning the year with a setback and the loss of valuable crops.

Reliability and Honesty Are the Corner Stones of the Elliot Business

Adapting Beautiful Millinery Creations to Elliot's Prices

It is not difficult to buy beautiful hats and mark them at prices so as to pay for their high-priced designers and other high-priced factors entering into the manufacture. It is equally simple to sell the ordinary run of millinery at low prices. But to offer these distinctive modes at moderate prices is worthy of this store. What matters it to women if their hat originally was seen in an exclusive New York French shop, just so long as it is equally as pretty and becoming?

These adaptations—and bearing the stamp of exclusiveness—$4 to $15

"The Way You Keep Talking About Your Suits at $25 You Must Certainly Think a Heap of Them"

True—we do think a great deal of them, because we know they are the finest suits you can get at $30.00, or near $35.00. And in view of this, why should we not tell you then if you are to spend $25.00 or more for a suit, YOU SHOULD SEE THESE FIRST OF ALL?

They are not like ordinary suits you would expect to find at this price, and if they had been bought where the styles originated—you could not have any one of these suits at $25.00 multiplied by three.

The woman who made the remark above went away with one of the suits and with a new viewpoint of our advertising policy.

JAPANESE WILL NOT WITHDRAW

Will Remain in Vladivostok Until Order is Restored.

(Special to The Examiner.)
(By Ralph H. Turner.)
(United Press Service.)

TOKIO, April 16.— Japanese officials apparently do not take seriously the Soviet's preparations to declare a state of war in Siberia. They say such action would not likely mean hostilities because the Soviets are unable to maintain a state of seige in Siberia. The Japanese marines will not withdraw from Vladivostok until order is restored.

Japan will insist that her action followed a local agreement between the allied consuls, who explained to the Vladivostok authorities that the protection of life and property is all that is desired.

Reliability and Honesty Are the Corner Stones of the Elliot Business

Adapting Beautiful Millinery Creations to Elliot's Prices

It is not difficult to buy beautiful hats and mark them at prices so as to pay for their high-priced designers and other high-priced factors entering into the manufacture. It is equally simple to sell the ordinary run of millinery at low prices. But to offer these distinctive modes at moderate prices is worthy of this store. What matters it to women if their hat originally was seen in an exclusive New York French shop, just so long as it is equally as pretty and becoming?

These adaptations—and bearing the stamp of exclusiveness—$4 to $15

"The Way You Keep Talking About Your Suits at $25 You Must Certainly Think a Heap of Them"

True—we do think a great deal of them, because we know they are the finest suits you can get at $30.00, or near $35.00. And in view of this, why should we not tell you then if you are to spend $25.00 or more for a suit, YOU SHOULD SEE THESE FIRST OF ALL?

They are not like ordinary suits you would expect to find at this price, and if they had been bought where the styles originated—you could not have any one of the suits at $25.00 multiplied by three.

The woman who made the remark above went away with one of the suits and with a new viewpoint of our advertising policy.

JAPANESE WILL NOT WITHDRAW

Will Remain in Vladivostok Until Order is Restored.

(Special to The Examiner.)
(By Ralph H. Turner.)
(United Press Service.)

TOKIO, April 16.— Japanese officials apparently do not take seriously the Soviet's preparations to declare a state of war in Siberia. They say such action would not likely mean hostilities because the Soviets are unable to maintain a state of seige in Siberia. The Japanese marines will not withdraw from Vladivostok until order is restored.

Japan will insist that her action followed a local agreement between the allied consuls, who explained to the Vladivostok authorities that the protection of life and property is all that is desired.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Peterboro' Motor Show Opening

Mayor Duncan Pressed the Button This Afternoon and the Big Show Proved To Be All That Is Claimed For It ---The Exhibits

A GREAT SUCCESS

Success written in box car letters cannot adequately describe the Motor Show at the Armouries, opened this afternoon by Mayor Duncan. In his address, the Mayor spoke of the evolution of motor cars from a time we used to run out to see them to the time when we run to get out of their road. He said he felt sure the motor companies had exhibited not only from a financial standpoint, but also to aid the Red Cross, under which the show is being held.

Those familiar with the grim austere Armouries can scarcely take in the great transformation wrought by the ladies and gentlemen in charge. Not a fort, but what is covered tastefully by hunting and flags, not a window left unsightly.

The Booths.

A gay midway of booths, containing interesting exhibits and attractions, is surmounted by the bandstand, in which the best music will be given during the show. The first booth, the flower stand, is operated by Miss Dorothy Hill, assisted by Mrs. Campazzi, the Misses Hatton, Miss Jean Hill, Miss Winnifred Orde, and Miss Stella Knox.

Mrs. Alex. Spence and Mrs. D. J. Perry have charge of the motor accessories booth; Mrs. Gillman and Mrs. Roland Deane, the Red Cross knitting booth; Mrs. Seaton, demonstrator, and Miss Flora Davidson in charge of the food demonstration; Mrs. C. E. Smith, sale of war foods, and Mrs. Widdess, the Red Cross booth.

The Red Cross Exhibit.

Perhaps the centre of attraction is the Red Cross booth, where all the supplies made at the Red Cross rooms are displayed in a most enlightening fashion, a miniature hospital ward being set up in exact reproduction of a real military hospital; even the Red Cross nurse is there. In this department pyjamas, socks, pillow cases, bandages and countless other accessories, made by patient hands, are displayed.

Good Roads.

Mr. R. M. Smith, of the Department of Public Highways, Ottawa, has an interesting display of the process of road building.

The Cars.

Surrounding the midway are about one hundred cars of every make, which courteous demonstrators exhibit their particular autos.

The Fashion Show.

The Peter Robinson Chapter, I.O. D.E., are shaping up plans to have one of the most unique exhibitions in the way of a fashion show, at which mannequins, picked from the loveliest girls in town, will display the costumes on sale at Hall's, Fair's and Barries. This opens at 8 o'clock to-night.

Be Early With Your Car.

Chief Thompson wants all car owners to be on hand at as near 7 o'clock as possible with their cars, as the parade starts at 7.30, and being early will avoid confusion.

THIRTY SQUADRONS OF AIRPLANES WERE DESTROYED

(Special to Examiner.)

Paris, April 16.—The material losses in the fire which destroyed the aircraft factories at Friedrichshaven on Saturday night, were enormous, including thirty squadrons of airplanes. One hundred and forty persons were killed, and 200 injured.

SUGGESTS COMPENSATION FOR FAMILIES OF MEN KILLED IN QUEBEC RIOTS

(Special to Examiner.)

Montreal, April 16.—The withdrawal of Ontario troops from Quebec is greatly to be desired, according to La Patrie, which asks the government to give effect to the recommendations of the jury investigating the Quebec riots, which it says will produce sensible progress towards allaying the ills from which the country has suffered since the passage of the Military Service Act.

La Patrie comments that as the government has caused the death of men who were not rioters, it believes it would be but justice to compensate their families.

ALIMONY DISALLOWED.

By Mr. Justice Middleton in Kingsley Case, Heard Yesterday.

Mrs. Maye Kingsley's action for alimony from her husband, Mr. Edward J. Kingsley, of Lindsay, chief train despatcher of the Central Ontario division of the G.T.R., was heard by Mr. Justice Middleton in the non-jury sittings of the Supreme Court here yesterday. Judgment was reserved, and the Judge expressed a strong wish that the parties to the suit effect a reconciliation.

Mr. Joseph Wearing appeared in behalf of the plaintiff and Mr. L. V. O'Connor, of Lindsay, for the defence.

Summary Of To-day's War Situation

NEW YORK, April 16.—The Associated Press war summary says today. Tremendous pressure extended by picked fresh troops in a desperate German effort to drive the British from Messines Ridge has compelled a slight retirement of the British line on the northern side of Lys battle front. The town of Bilieul has been evacuated and the British front withdrawn to a line running from the north of that town to the north of Wulverghem and thence to Wytschaete. Wytschaete occupies the highest point of the easterly ridge system, and the British have been fully established here since the early days of the enemy offensive. The Germans, through their push into the southwest are now apparently in a more advantageous position to attack it and their expected drive upon it was reported developing this morning. As it forms the pivot of the British line which bends here to the north an extremely determined defense of it is looked for from Field Marshal Haig's troops.

Mr. And Mrs. R. C. Braund Celebrated Their Silver Wedding Last Night

Joined By Relatives and Friends in a Joyous Reunion

Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Braund last night celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding. About forty of their relatives and friends were present, including the fathers of the young bride and bridegroom of one-quarter of a century ago. There were many interesting features during the evening and not the least were the written replies to the invitations. Mr. and Mrs. Braund had requested their friends not to send silver presents, but each guest was asked to write congratulatory letters, of which over forty have been received. These will be bound and kept as a souvenir of the silver wedding.

The dinner, served in a large hall upstairs, brought the gathering together in the happiest of moods. It was followed by short addresses by some of the guests, in which the respects of the assembly were paid to Mr. and Mrs. Braund. Adjutant McElhiney and Mr. J. M. Greene were joint chairmen. They proposed the health of their hosts conveying the congratulations and good wishes of the happy gathering. Mrs. Braund replied first, and was followed by Mr. Braund. Other speakers were Mr. Henry Greene, Mrs. Braund's father, and Mr. Braund's father, also Mr. J. T. Braund, Mrs. McElhiney, Mr. J. Richardson, Mr. Nelson Routley and others.

Later, the guests retired to the drawing room downstairs, where a splendid musical programme was presented. Violin selections by Baden Greene, Mrs. Braund's nephew, vocal solos by Miss Lois Braund and pianoforte selections by Miss Aileen Braund comprised a concert programme that was excellent.

Among the visitors were Mrs. T. G. Gale and Mrs. J. Found of Oshawa, both sisters of Mr. Braund.

A creased and time-worn poster, announcing the Hallelujah wedding of Miss May Greene and Mr. R. C. Braund at the Salvation Army Temple by Staff Captain McIntyre, was an interesting souvenir. It was hung in the dining room and served to emphasizes how fleeting the past twenty-five years have been. At that time Mr. Braund had decided to graduate himself from the grocery business conducted by Mr. W. J. Moore in the store now occupied by the Warne Drug Company. Yesterday Mrs. Moore called at the Braund store to recall their past associations, and mark the occasion with an order. Mr. Braund took upon himself a double responsibility of a wife and a seemingly precarious grocery business twenty-five years ago. He gaged the expansion of the city more correctly and hopefully than its oldest citizens, and his vision and industry has been rewarded far beyond his dreams. His friends will unite in congratulating him and Mrs. Braund in their silver wedding and wish them many years of continued happiness and success.

Social and Personal

Says Mice Will Not Eat Matches

A grocer who has stocked matches for many years saw the item in the Examiner last evening, in which it was believed that mice eating matches had caused a fire the day previous.

He says this is all wrong, and his many years' experience has made him positive that mice or rats will positively not touch matches. He believes there is some other cause of the fire.

Sentenced To Prison Farm

Roland Laramee, 9 months, and Edmund Gaulin, 6 months, on the Prison Farm, Guelph, were the sentences imposed this morning by County Magistrate O. A. Langley, on the two robber bandits who entered the homes of Dan Costello and George McNerney on Sunday, April 7th, and stole several watches. The sentences will run concurrently.

The Magistrate owing to the extreme youth of the boys who are 18 years of age, imposed light sentences. Laramee was given the heavier, in consideration of the fact the police records in Montreal showed he was out on suspended sentence on a previous theft charge. The Magistrate ordered restitution of the stolen goods to their owner.

TITLE DECLARED VOID BY JUDGE

The case of M. Carton vs. Mandel Brothers of Toronto, in which the plaintiff asked that an agreement of sale of the old Hicks coal yard to the defendants, be declared null and void, was heard by Mr Justice Middleton, yesterday. The defendants, Mandel, did not appear and judgment was given against them with costs.

It was alleged that they had bought under an agreement of sale, the property at the corner of Bethune and Charlotte streets, and had abandoned the agreement. It was to clear up the title that Mr Carton entered the action. Mr G. N. Gordon was the counsel for Mr Carton

Inquest Opened Last Evening

Inquiry into Death of John Clancy Was Adjourned For a Week

An inquest was opened last evening in McFadden's undertaking parlours to inquire into the circumstances surrounding the death of John Clancy, who yesterday noon was crushed between two freight cars.

Coroner Dr. Greer said that the accident occurred on the siding of the Quaker Oats Company and there was a question as to whether the switch was on private or public property. The Grand Trunk Railway Company was not represented at the preliminary hearing, which was adjourned until next Monday night, when it will be resumed in the Police Court Chamber. Crown Attorney Hatton was present and after the jury had viewed the remains the inquest was formally adjourned.

The jury consists of George Evans (foreman), William Lillie, Angus McIntosh, Robert Whatley, James Robinson, Thomas Twomey, T. Mark, Herbert Stenson, James Metheral, A. J. Warne and John McCann.

"THE TRAIL OF THE LONESOME PINE"

Those who have read John Fox Jr's. widely read book, "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," and had their minds flooded with sunshine as they followed June along the lonely trail to the rugged, gaunt, lonesome pine that guarded Lonesome Cove, will be lost in happy bewilderment as they strike the same trail hewn by Eugene Walter in this splendid production.

While John Fox, Jr., let us trace the life of June in the written page, Eugene Walter leads us, as it were, gently by the hand, and we follow Louise Price, who impersonates the wild mountain girl with deep sympathy and with a most delightful manner, above—beyond—the purple tops of the Cumberland Mountains, into realms of romantic love. The management have struck a joyous keynote of coloring in the beautiful scenic embellishment they have lent their production, for not only does painter and author charmingly interweave their conception of scene and action, but they have given on the stage a truer interpretation of the primitiveness of the denizen of the Virginia Hills, than one could possibly believe from the printed pages of Mr. Fox's delightful narrative.

You are introduced to June and to the man who means so much in her life, at the very rise of the curtain. They meet in the shadow of the towering, whispering pine, nature's motif of a forest melody, an idea which runs through the play in responsive reverberation and in which we fairly hear the thought-echo of "too low they build, who build beneath the stars." Louise Price, barefooted in the character of June, garbed in the ragged homespun dress of a rough mountaineer's daughter, foreshadows from the first the greatest of the miracles of childhood — the dawn of love and true womanhood, but the shadow of jealousy is thrown across the trail, when Dave, who hopes to marry his cousin June, watches in sheer desperation the awakening of her love for Jack Hale. "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" will appear at The Grand next Saturday, April 20, for matinee and evening performances.

Secretary Baker Has Returned

AMERICAN SECRETARY OF WAR DECLINES TO DISCUSS EVENTS ACROSS THE SEA.

(Canadian Press.)

An Atlantic Port, April 16. — Secretary of War Baker returned here from a visit to France and England, and then went immediately to Washington. The Secretary came back on one of the large steamers which formerly flew the German flag. He declined to discuss events across the seas.

To Quickly Remove Ugly Hairs From Face

(Beauty Notes)

Beauty-destroying hairs are soon banished from the skin with the aid of a delatone paste, made by mixing some waterwith a little plain powdered delatone. This is spread upon the hairy surface for 2 or 3 minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed to remove the remaining delatone. This simple treatment banishes every trace of hair and leaves the skin without a blemish. Caution should be used to be certain that it is delatone you buy.

LAKEFIELD PERSONALS

Lakefield, April 16. — On Friday evening, April 12th, the Lakefield Curling Club gave a very successful at home in the town hall. About one hundred and fifty people were present and a most enjoyable evening was spent. The patronesses were Mr. Malling, Mr. Braden, Mrs. J. C. Smith, Mrs. C. S. Tanner, Mrs. D. H. Morrison and Mrs. Ridpath.

The hall was prettily decorated and the music, which was supplied by a Peterboro orchestra, was superb. In the lower hall card tables were set out and a number of devotees of cards were able to enjoy a quiet game undisturbed by the dancing.

At midnight a dainty supper was served by a committee of ladies, assisted by the curlers, who were most attentive to their guests.

Special mention must be made of the untiring efforts of Messrs. Braden and D. H. Morrison to make the affair a success. The receipts were about $100, and after deducting expenses there will be a nice balance for the Soldiers' Comforts Club.

Miss McCauley of Peterboro, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Fred Young, of Young's Point, passed through the village on her way home on Monday morning.

Captain Pat Young was an early visitor to Lakefield on Monday morning.

Miss Annie Elliott, who was the guest of Miss Edna Braden, for the last few days, returned to her home at Norwood on Monday.

Mr. Jack McFadden went to Kingston on Monday to undergo a medical examination.

Mr. David Millar, Senior, was in Kingston on Saturday seeing his son, Hilliard, before going overseas.

Mr. Allan B. Mann and Miss Blanche Mann, were in the village on Sunday.

Captain Scollard of Young's Point, passed through Lakefield on Monday on his way to Buffalo where he expects to remain for a week or ten days.

Mr. William Hampton was a visitor to Peterboro on Monday.

Mr. Sam Grylls left for Toronto on Monday to resume his duties at the Royal Bank.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Northey spent Monday in Peterboro.

Mr. A. Quinn of Peterboro spent the week end with his family.

Mr. Peter Taylor was in the village with his family over Sunday.

Mr. Elwood Northey of Peterboro spent Sunday in the village.

Mr. Richard Hunter of Peterboro was in the village over Sunday.

Mr. Abel Hendren was in the village over Sunday.

Mrs. Oswald Smith of Toronto is the guest of Mrs. B. H. Britton at The Grove School.

Mrs. Craven, Miss Margaret, and Miss Olga, left on Monday for their home at Newport N.Y., after a four months' stay.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

RUTH TOO MUCH FOR ATHLETICS

BOSTON, April 15.—Ruth held Philadelphia to four hits in as many innings in the first game of the season here to-day, Boston winning, 7 to 1, in a none too cleanly played contest. Conditions for the game were the best this city has seen in years for an opening contest, yet the attendance was only slightly over 7,000.

The batting of Hooper and some fielding plays by Shannon were features. Gardner and Walker of the Philadelphia team played with the Boston team a year ago, and were given ovations on their first appearances at bat. Strunk and McInnis, obtained by Boston from the Philadelphia club during the winter, made a favourable debut.

McInnis' sole fielding chance at third base a new position for him, was a high foul, which he caught after a hard run. Strunk singled and drew a base on balls, also making a catch in centre field which cut off at least two Philadelphia runs. The score:

	R.	H.	E.
Philadelphia	1	4	2
Boston	7	9	3

Myers, Adams and McAvoy; Ruth and Agnew.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—The American League baseball season was opened here to-day with a six-to-three victory for the New York Americans over Washington, due largely to the ineffectiveness of Walter Johnson, particularly against Frank Baker, who drove in three runs for the visitors.

President Wilson, who usually throws out the first ball, was not able to be present, and District Commissioner Louis Brownlow acted in his place. The only ceremony was the raising of the American flag while a band played "The Star Spangled Banner," and the players stood with heads bared. The 13,000 spectators listened attentively to a Liberty Loan orator, and later cheered lustily when a huge Caproni biplane flew over the field dropping miniature Liberty bells.

New Cork took the lead in the first inning and was never headed, although in the fourth inning the locals drove Mogridge from the box. Russell stopped the rally. The score:

	R.	H.	E.
New York	2	9	0
Washington	3	6	2

Mogridge, Russell and Hannah; Johnson and Ainsmith.

Band Instrument Question Again The Subject Of Discussion

Veterans to Present a New Proposition to the City Council
Annual Report Indicates Great Progress Made

The question of the disposition of the 93rd band instruments, arrangements for the big tag day and church parade in commemoration of the third anniversary of the 2nd Battle of Ypres, the hearing of the secretary's annual report and many other items of interest, featured the semi-monthly meeting of the Great War Veterans' Association in the armouries last night. The attendance was the biggest in the history of the Association and unusual interest was taken in the proceedings. President H. J. Staunton was in the chair.

Among the correspondence read was a letter from Mr. G. H. Thompson, secretary of the Board of Education, expressing the Board's regret that it would not be possible to allow the Veterans to go through the schools on Friday to sell tags, as it would interrupt class work.

The Association will, however, have representatives present at each school to tag the youngsters as they come out.

A letter from Frederic Villiers, famous war correspondent, offering to come to Peterborough to give an illustrated lecture on the war under the auspices of the G.W.V.A. was turned over to the Entertainment committee.

The Soldiers' Wives and Mothers' Club wrote, offering their services in conection with Saturday's tag day.

Six returned soldiers including two Lakefield veterans, were added to the membership of the Association.

No Banquets.

A suggestion that in order to promote a better feeling of good fellowship among the members, one or two banquets should be held, was quickly voted down. Several members pointed out that people were being asked to conserve food, and the Veterans should set a good example in this respect.

At the request of the Trades and Labour Council a deputation was appointed to attend the meeting of the Labour Council on Wednesday night, when matters pertaining to the welfare of both bodies will be discussed. There were considerable discussion on this point and an amendment that no action be taken was voted down after which a committee composed of Comrades S. Whatley R. H. Muir, H. Mann and Thos. Williams was appointed.

Secretary's Report.

Secretary Whatley presented the following report of the year's operations.

I have much pleasure in submitting my first annual report as secretary of the Peterborough Branch of the G. W.V.A., and as a preliminary it may not be considered out of place to recapitulate the aims and objects of our Association, with a passing reference to our achievements thus far in our endeavour to attain those objects.

Our objects are briefly as follows:

1. To perpetuate the close and friendly ties of mutual service in the great war, the recollections and associations of that experience should serve to maintain proper standards of dignity and honour between all returned soldiers.

2. To preserve the memory of those who have suffered and died for the nation.

3. To see to the erection of monuments to their valour, and the provision of suitable burial places.

4. To establish an annual memorial day.

5. To see that proper provision is made for the due care of the sick, wounded and needy, amongst those who have served, including reasonable pensions and employment for such as are capable, and equitable provision for dependent families of enlisted men.

Taking them in order, I would point out first that the Association has been established and stands to-day on a sound basis numerically and financially, with every prospect of being a permanent organization.

While we cannot point to much accomplishment with regard to the second of our objects, this is receiving careful and earnest attention, and steps have already been taken with the view of securing a burial ground.

Thirdly we have established an annual memorial day, commemorating the second Battle of Ypres, which has taken the form of a church parade and a tag day.

The tag day last year netted the handsome sum of $1,501.10, and we anticipate that this sum will be equalled and we hope exceeded, on the 3rd anniversary, which will be held on Saturday the 20th inst.

The remaining objects of the Association have not been neglected, which is proved by the fact of our having distributed a large sum in relieving cases of distress, and situations have been secured for a great number of its members.

While we have not succeeded in fulfilling all our aims and objects, yet I think the Association has cause to congratulate itself on the progress made during the first year of its existence, as demonstrated in the above enumeration of results attained.

Starting with a membership of 25 a year ago, this number has increased every month, till at the present time we have a membership of 940; not including the Ladies' tAuxiliary which was formed some time ago, and has approximately 25 members.

The Association's finances are in a flourishing condition, I am pleased to say.

Figures that may be of interest to the members show that during the year 48 meetings have been held, and 504 letters have been received, whilst considerably over that number has been sent out from this branch.

Many other activities have occupied the time of your officers, including investigation of distress, assigned pay, separation and patriotic allowances, and adjustment of pensions.

The results obtained in these instances alone justify the existence of the G.W.V.A. and emphasizes its usefulness.

I have to record with deep regret the pasing of two of our Comrades in the persons of Comrades Watson and Bell. In each instance the funeral was attended by a body of Veterans.

Under the auspices of our Association, and with the assistance of Mr. Gordon, Adjt. McElhiney, the Soldiers' Wives' and Mothers' Club and other kind friends ,a Christmas tree and entertainment was given to one thousand soldiers' children of this city ad vicinity, on Dec. the 20th last and was heartily enjoyed and appreciated by the little ones.

While placing on record the gratifying features of our work it is my duty also as a faithful chronicler of the Association's movements to record its rebuffs.

Assured as we thought of the support and assistance of the City Council, we applied for a grant of $500 to cover the cost of renting, heating and lighting our proposed new rooms.

The result exceeded our anticipations. Our application was treated with derision, contumely and scorn. We also applied for the use of the 93rd Batt. Band instruments, but the considerations under which we might become the recipients were such that we were unable to accept them. Further comment is needless.

We have now secured through the splendid efforts of your officers and the Ladies' Auxiliary, new quarters which will be formally opened as soon as furnished.

This report would not be complete without referring in terms of gratitude to the efforts of the I.O.D.E. in securing us rooms at the commencement of our career in the Barrie Building, and to Mr. Barrie for so generously acceding to their request to supply us with the rooms, rent free.

This, Mr. President and Comrades, is a brief summary of your Association during the first year of its existence and the all important question strikes home with vital force what of the future? If we can accomplish this much in its infancy, are we not justified in anticipating greater, and more important results, wider influence and a greater sphere of usefulness in its maturity.

As our Comrades return in ever increasing numbers, so will the responsibilities that we have assumed increase in magnitude. The future is replete with problems affecting their welfare which will require our earnest and careful consideration, and it is only through harmony, and concord and unanimity, and the loyal co-operation of every individual member that we shall accomplish the task that we have set ourselves.

In conclusion may I extend my sincere and heartfelt thanks to the officers and members of the Association for their support and consideration and to the Press for the great assistance they have rendered in the matter of publishing anything in the interest of the Association.

SIDNEY WHATLEY, Secretary.

The report was adopted and a vote of thanks passed to the secretary.

The Band Question.

The question of the 93rd Band instruments was the subject of an interesting discussion. A delegation composed of Messrs. G. N. Gordon, R. J Devey and J. H. Renwick, representing a large number of the subscribers to the instrument fund, waited upon the meeting and expressed their belief that the instruments should be turned over to the Great War Veterans, at the same time announcing their willingness to assist in any way in bringing this about.

The negotiations that had taken place were reviewed, and it was explained that a new agreement had been drawn up embodying conditions that were satisfactory for the executive of the Association and if the meeting endorsed the plan it was proposed to take the matter up again with the City Council.

The members were practically unanimous in the opinion that this should be done. It was the feeling of the meeting that the boys who are still overseas should be considered. A number of bandsmen are already home, it was pointed out, and their number will be increased from time to time. Again it was felt that a veterans' band was a necessity and that anything that had taken place in the past should not be allowed to interfere with the chances of securing the instruments.

A committee composed of Comrade (Col.) Johnston, Comrade (Capt.) Morrison and Comrade (Bandmaster) Hughes, was appointed to co-operate with the civilian committee in bringing the matter before the Council. The committee was given power to act.

OBJECTOR GETS TWO YEARS

LONDON, April 16.—Because he refusing to wear a uniform or to fight on the ground that he is a conscientious objector to military service, Pte. Sidnye Mitchell of Forest, Ont. was paraded before the Western Ontario Battalion, in which he had been drafted and sentenced to two years in Kingston penitentiary.

Mitchell was brought before a court a couple of weeks ago, but was given another chance. He claimed that he is a Plymouth Brethren member, and as such, he said, he would not take up arms against his fellowmen when his uniform was issued to him at ordinance stores he refused to accept it and his humiliation and sentence before the parade battalion at Queen's Park camp followed.

BOWLING NEWS.

Toronto, April 16.—The Peterborc and Hamilton teams closed the big tournament at Orr's Academy Saturday night. Both were unfortunate in the five man event, but put up remarkable scores in the doubles and singles, Webber of Peterboro, rolling a wonderful game and nosing out Irving of Toronto, on the last shift, totalling 702. Solomon, also of Peterboro, ran up the nifty total of 654, giving him third place. Redwood and Obermeyer of Hamilton moved into sixth place in the doubles totaling 1235.

EVANGELIST WILL COME TO PETERBORO FOR BIG CAMPAIGN.

Rev. I. E. Honeywell, B.A., evangelist has been secured for a big union meeting in Peterboro next fall. This will be Mr. Honeywell's first campaign in Canada. He was converted in Crossley and Hunter's meetings in Ottawa, and is an able speaker.

LOST FORTUNE ON RACES— BANK MANAGER'S DOWNFALL

Maynard's Defalcations May Reach $100,000—Raids on Hand Books Follow the Arrest.

TORONTO, April 15.—That betting on horse races was the cause of the downfall of Louis M. W. Maynard, manager of the Dominion Bank branch at McCaul and Dundas streets, arrested at the Union Depot, on a charge of theft from the bank, is the belief of the police. Significant as to this were the raids made by Central Office and Morality Department officers on alleged handbook institutions. Although the raids were made at a certain time agreed upon, the results were negligible, as but one man was brought in, and he denied all knowledge of Maynard. Nevertheless, sensations are promised in betting circles within a short time.

Luck Turned.

The police theory is supported in sporting circles, where it is asserted that Maynard's betting proclivities on the horses and on hockey games has been common knowledge for a long time. Although Maynard's "luck" has been described as phenomenal, men "interested" in racing assert that he has been "bumped" repeatedly of late. As to the amount of his loss they have no knowledge, but they say his wagers were high, $500 "across the board," or $1,500 in all, being not uncommon.

Surprise for the Staff.

That all was not right at the bank was apparently not discovered until Tuesday, the day on which Maynard left town. On that day Maynard, it is said, came down to the bank early and informed the caretaker that he was ill, and would not be on duty that day. The staff conducted the business as usual, and were about to lock up when a bank inspector appeared and informed the staff that the gentleman who accompanied him was the new manager for that branch.

It is rumoured, however, that a parcel of cash sent up to the bank on Monday was the beginning of the disclosures which are alleged to have been made since. The amount of the parcel was known, but during business hours on Tuesday it was found to be $3,000 short. Then followed the calling in of the police, after bank officials and other operatives had failed to find Maynard at his home in the Lakeview Apartments.

WEEDING OUT HOTELS.

A general weeding out of such standard hotels in Ontario as do not provide accommodations up to the mark of modern requirements is being made by the Ontario License Board, as a result of which it is expected that the number of standardized hotels throughout the province will be reduced by about forty. Approximately 1,200 hotel licenses were issued a year ago, leniency being exercised in order that smaller centres and the public in the matter of hotel accommodation might have opportunity to make good their promises.
